The entertainment which was given four nights last week for the benefit of Co. C., was a complete success throughout. Frank Howard has had seventeen years experience in playing the "Spy of Sulloh," and it is needless to say that he is not only a good actor, but an admirable manager. The play abounds in amusing as well as pathetic scenes, and the audience are alternately in tears or convulsed with laughter. Mr. Frank Howard, as the Spy, displayed a talent for acting which showed cultivation and a long experience on the stage, and his part as "Josh," the live yankee, drilling the "awkward squad" showed that he was as much at home in comedy as tragedy. Miss Bernice Howard, though young in years, is old in the theatrical business and her character of the little drummer boy was one of the best sustained in the play. In fact all of the characters were well taken. The honors for heavy acting in the home part of the troupe were carried off by John T. Tussey, who took the part of Clarence DeVere, while A. S. Hellenrich as "Zeb" the negro, kept the audience in a roar of laughter by his antics. Mr. Robert Moir, Chas. Heck, H. J. Sweet and the ladies, Mrs. W. W. Gage, Mrs. Ida B. Hale and Mrs. Maud Eccles all did themselves great credit. One of the best features of the whole entertainment were the tableaux, eighteen in number, which were well worth the price of admission alone, "decorating the soldier's graves" being especially lovely and probably the finest ever put on the stage in this village, which was participated in by about twenty of Tecumseh's fairest young ladies. The "Isle of Andersonville prison depicting all the horrors of that institution, was very striking, portrayed and brought tears to the eyes of the audience, while the Battle of Sulloh was exceedingly realistic and thrilling.

The boys struck a run of decidedly bad weather. The first two nights were exceedingly stormy and the last two cold and forbidding. The roads were in such a condition that our country people could not get into town. Notwithstanding these disadvantages however, the receipts of the four nights were sufficient to pay all expenses and leave a nice balance in the treasury for a new flag, the old one, which is languishing to about $2. This is not enough to purchase a new banner, but the fund makes a good starter. The boys ought to have made a hundred dollars to have repaid them sufficiently for all their trouble. They are entitled to credit, however, for their pluck and determination in this affair, and for the fine entertainment which they gave us.

We believe our city as will freely respond to any future call from the company, with the banner fund shall be fully replaced.

The Ohio & Mich. Coal & Manufacturing Co. of Tecumseh, Mich. The above company was incorporated March 31st, 1886, and is composed of some of our business men here and some in Toledo. They occupy the plant of S. W. Temple & Son, and will do a general coal, lumber and manufacturing business. Due notice will be given when the company are ready for operations. Notes, capital stock fully subscribed.

The Adrian Times of Monday contains the announcement of a newspaper change. We most heartily endorse the good words spoken of Mr. Smith by the Times, and warmly extend to him our wishes that he may "strike it rich" in his new field of labor. Our only regret is that Lenawee County, by the change, will lose a splendid citizen and a first-class journalist.

Hon. E. J. Smith left to-day to assume editorial charge of the Jackson Morning Telegram, a new daily, which will first see the light to-morrow morning. Mr. Smith, since the time he first turned in as Philander Perkins, has had a long and varied newspaper experience with Adrian publications. He has served as editor of the Daily and Weekly Press, and as one of the proprietors and editors of the Record. He is a genial, clever gentleman, and his talents will not serve to keep his new charge in the channels of mediocrity. He has also an honest record to be proud of, throughout his service as state oil inspector and the Jackson journalistic ranks will receive him, not as a raw recruit, to be taught the tricks of the trade, but as a brother, who has a right to come, and whose position is assured. The Morning Telegram will [illegible]

The only objection we can offer to Petoskey is that it is rather too healthy a town for a physician to live in.

The Adrian Record is a truly good newspaper, but no one would have dreamed that it was a religious sheet. But it is and here is the proof.

Reference being had to the sermons printed in the Record and Gazette, the Manchester Enterprise feels rejoiced that our readers are able to find a little religion in our pages at least. Why bless your benighted soul Matt, the Record was founded on eternal truths. Talmage's sermons are merely corroborative evidence.

The ice boat of the lake and steamer "City of Hudson" will be at the dock to receive her cargo to-day. Mr. B. intends to place the coaster in the lake so it will be as possible from the landing to the hotel. This will be done by driving piles for a solid foundation. He also purchased a large ring for Lake View hotel, at Grand Rapids. It weighs two tons and has a cooking capacity of 1,500 per day. Newspaper men can now be accommodated. Hudson Gazette.

A mixed crowd of soldiers and sailors assembled at Hillsdale on Tuesday for the purpose of deciding upon the place of the next annual encampment. B. W. Royce represented the Defiance Post, G. A. A party from this city whose brother resides in Raisin, drove out there last Sunday evening and says the young lady a buggy ride. Returning home he drove off the straight narrow highway, and horse, buggy, driver, and the whole shebang, unceremoniously rolled down the embankment together. The accident was serious, but he intended with any fractures to any portion of the aggregation. It afforded our friend ample study to ponder upon what part of the combination he was, whether he was the horse, buggy or driver at the moment they struck bottom of the deep ravine. He thought if he were the buggy he would be stuck and be pried out of the ditch; if he were the horse he would kick, and if the driver he would try to act like a sensible fellow and get the rig out of the scrape. Finding there were no wheels on him he voted that he was not the conveyance, and with no stomach for oats he could not be the horse. Concluding from these circumstances that he must be the chap who had just taken a tumble, for a moment he pondered and drove in. He missed something however, and returning to the spot had the good luck to discover a buffalo robe, a monkey wrench and a pair of ladies' rubbers in the place where the train went down the embankment. He is all right now.—Adrian Record.

THE TOWNSHIP ELECTION.

[illegible] day, was a cold, raw day, and hence a reasonably appropriate one for an election. There was a strong rush on a portion of the ticket. All parties had a walk away, after the ballots had a peculiar gait. Our [illegible] very nicely got left on election day. There was considerable shuffling of the chairs, Clerk, Treasurer, and School Inspectors and the contest lasted long enough at the Township of Tecumseh. The Township meeting adjourned from Monday evening, and the polls opened at the appointed hour. The Republicans had a majority of the voters present, and they had no difficulty in electing their ticket. The only office which the Democrats saved from the wreck was Constable Henry W. Stevens. Esq. Mr. Stevens endured the ordeal of having this important office thrust upon him with the same quiet humility, lamb like resignation, gentlemanly modesty and refined dignity, which characterize all his official and personal intercourse with his fellow citizens. Our Republican friends esteem it quite an honor that Mr. Stevens should represent the party in this crisis, as the sole shrub plucked from the burning. A Good, Kind Sister.

Small brother—Where did you get that cake, Annie?

Small sister—Mother gave it to me.

Small brother—And she always gives you more than I get.

Small sister—Never mind. She's trying to fill an island possession with women to sell enough and I suppose that's why she gives the bigger.

Friendship.

Lady—Would you believe it, the doctor's wife is idle and slovenly with her hotel, and leaves her husband to take care of themselves, and he has hard spells most of his time at the club.

Gentleman—Air and how do you know all this?

Lady—Well, you see, I am her best friend.—Fliegende Blaetter.

Twenty years ago hardly any butter was imported into England, now 90 per cent. of all that is used is imported and a great deal of it is manufactured in this country.

A Little Misunderstanding.

Seller—No, I didn't.

Angry Purchaser—You said that did. You said that when it came to pulling that horse was there every time.

Seller—Yes, that's what I said. He's there, but the trouble is he never pulls to build a pontiac under him.

A Sensible Suggestion.

Customer (in restaurant)—Waiter, make a sirloin steak, well done. I am in a hurry.

Waiter—Is you in a hurry?

Customer—Yes, you.

Waiter—Then why not take dat steak rare stead o' well done if you is in a hurry, boss?

Accepting the Situation.

"I can give you a cold potato," said the woman.

"Why no warm it up?" asked the tramp.

"There ain't any wood saved."

"That so? Well give me the cold."

Terms of Courtesy.

TURKOMAN RAIDS.

The raiding of the Turkomans was essentially a slave-dealing system, founded on the assumption of a right of property in human flesh and blood. Men, women and children were carried off to Khiva and Bokhara, and there sold to the highest bidder, as naturally as any other property would be. The Turkoman's boy, girl or whatever was taken, they carried off to the main body of the Samaun, who guarded the plunder while the Kalmuks carried on the work. If a village could be taken, then every living thing in it became spoil, whatever the robber's horse could carry, or whatever could be forced to move on its own legs, was borne away. Young girls if they were pretty and children were looked upon as the most valuable prizes, as they could be sold to the highest advantage in the bazars of Khiva or Bokhara. It was also considered a lucky stroke when any one of wealth or rank was caught, a ready ransom being expected for his release. We were told of one raid in which one hundred and thirty thousand sheep, goats and other animals had been swept away; this large number has much the appearance of an exaggeration, but supposing we suppose a large division found 5,000 sheep, say twelve lire or even fifty per head, the sum will yet present a calamity loss to the people who were despoiled. When the depredations on the Persian and scattered were completed, the raiders began to retreat, generally the same night which found them at work elsewhere. If not too heavily encumbered with plunder, the plundering wretches could, by hard riding, be in safety in their own country in two days. Their retreat was made by the same roads by which they had come, and they could be followed by the people they had robbed, who, if they were fortunate enough to be in the necessary condition, for it must be understood that the Turkoman's horse formed the essential part of the raider where long rides and sudden surprises were the main tactics of the gang. As the Thugs of India worship their system of murder into a kind of worship, so the Turkoman, or Mussulman marauder, gave a religious sanction to his calling by blessing it before starting. At first the "alamat" would move slowly across the desert, but as soon as the Persian frontiers was passed, it made long and stealthy marches by unfrequented routes, avoiding all large towns, to the selected point, where it was finally broken up. Small parties would then, early in the dawn of the dark night, under the cover of heavy or rising ground, descend on villages, on which they came down with a lightning swoop, so as to catch the men or women at work in the fields, or by the time they could be driven in, Men, women, and children, as well as horses, were then taken. The Turkoman's boy, girl or whatever was taken they carried off to the main body of the Samaun, who guarded the plunder while the Kalmuks carried on the work. About this garden spot the city stretches on all sides. In the great heart of its shaded aisles, on your right hand and your left, from behind and before you its fragrant silence is penetrated by the distant hum of the city's busy streets. But eight thousand orange trees and four thousand green laughed lemons are between you and its dusty turmoil. Green vineyards are beyond the orchard, and their green leaves long path with the trees. The orchard is covered by a line of hills, which, though but five years old, already afford a grateful shelter to the young trees. Where were only [illegible] years ago, now are [illegible] acres of orange groves. There are [illegible] in Mexico, and [illegible] in Arizona, and [illegible] in California. SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

RIDGEWAY, HAMBLE.

Look like Spring this week.

Last weeks snow-storm was a genuine old January, a little late however, better now than later.

Dean Loree experienced quite a disagreeable time on his way home from school at Tecumseh, during the snow storm last week. He was until dark getting home, the snow drifted so bad he was compelled to leave his buggy and lead his horse home.

Dr. D. W. Loree lost a valuable horse Sunday night. There are several horses reported sick about here.

Mrs. David McNair of Tecumseh, spent Tuesday with Ella Hall.

Mrs Samuel Rappleye is very sick. Under the careful care of Dr. R. B. House of Tecumseh, it is hoped her recovery will be speedy.

Lottie Arner visited friends at Tecumseh from Friday until Tuesday.

A. R. Arner spent two days last week with Geo. N. Arner, Agt. of the M. & O. R'y. at Wilder's, and reports George doing finely.

The church social will be held at the home of Geo. Pocklington, this week Friday night. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

Mr. Humphrey of Detroit, Agt. for the Continental Insurance Co. of N. Y. city, was in the village last week and paid the insurance on the Barrett barn that burned March 12th, to the amount of $139.98. The company is a reliable one and attend to losses promptly.

We see by the Prohibition ticket of the city of Hillsdale, that G. W. Jackson was a candidate for Alderman in the 3d ward. It is the little grains of sand that make this mighty land.

Rhoda and Lou Arner spent Saturday and Sunday with relatives at Milan. They were in time to enjoy the marrage of their cousin, Fannie McNeal of Milan to Nick Allison of Beaver, Dakota. The happy couple left on the morning train to enjoy their home in Dakota. May our best wishes and congratulations follow them.

Ella Hall arrived from Brooklyn, Wednesday morning having been detained by the severe snow storm Tuesday. She stayed in Detroit during the night and reports the storm quite severe in Canada.

Preparations are being made as speedy as possible, for the public entertainment to be given at Cottage Hall, April 23d and 27th. BROOKLYN BALLADS.

Mr. A. Sanford has built a vault in our cemetery for his family. Compare where that almighty canine sleeps this last sleep. The narrow house is roofed by a white marble slab that looks as if carpeted with a cold blanket, and [illegible] The silent guardian keeps watch by his master's monument, and I hope M. A. of the Exponent may reverse her hasty decision, for it is fidelity that merits marble commemoration. Plain truth is liable to misapprehension. M. A. condensed a great deal of it into a column or it would not have called forth such an honest analysis. The reform that is women's salvation, has many sides and criticism, brings to view theoretic defects as well as systematic real ones, when silence or the namby pamby assent so often accorded, give a gloss of mildew, worse to overcome than virulent attack.

The Herald correspondent never has occasion to complain of an overdose of taffy, and gets her ears boxed, figuratively speaking, quite often. Difference of belief does not imply personal enmity in her directory, however. Don't for goodness sake fall out of the ranks because some one takes a text from your revelations for the foundation of another epistle. Whoever baptises thoughts in printer's ink will often be misunderstood, both willfully and honestly, and must often submit to the imputation of indulging in personalities. Facts gathered from many sources will be adopted as local fret-saws, and no wonder, for like causes produce like results. There is no room for guessing when T. H. C. writes a personal, unless one wishes to exercise the faculty. While willing every one shall believe as they please and respecting honest difference of opinion, I will also continue to despise that shifting Kaleidoscopic profession of peace and good will that results in bribing people of easy conscience to become their moral sewers for vices they claim to repudiate. If there is any truth in the doctrine of tempter's being worse than the tempted, won't it apply here?

ONSTED ODDS.

George Monaghan came back from Tecumseh, Saturday, where he has been spending his vacation. He teaches the spring term in Dist. No. 6.

THE LEGISLATIVE REUNION.

The reunion of members and ex members of the state legislature is now an assured fact, the organization made at Lansing March 11, and calling itself "The Michigan Legislative association," being actively at work. LAKE RIDGE LACONICS.

Sam Gibson raised a barn from Tuesday the 30th ult.

The snow was seven to eighteen inches on Tuesday, while [illegible] Detroit, and had to lay over till Thursday.

The Nationals kicked on calling the ticket Democratic.

James Harmon and Ed. Densmore are doing quite a business grinding feed for farmers. They use a threshing engine and Springfield, Ohio grinder.

Tuesday the 6th was a gloomy day for defeated candidates.

B. F. Lamkin drew two loads of wheat to Tecumseh on sleighs, the 7th.

Thomas Maynard moves into A. Russell's tenant house.

There will be a donation social at John Stewart's this week Friday evening, for the benefit of Rev. E. W. Berden.

John Howe comes to the front this week with the largest hen's egg, 7¼ by 9¼ inches in circumference. The shortest diameter is 2¼ inches. What is the longest diameter?

J. W. Baker has returned from his sojourn in Kansas. He says portions of Kansas is the most delightful country he ever saw. He purchased 80 acres near Platte City, where his son Clarence contemplates going. He found his son Dr. H. D. Baker, of Fort Scott, doing well.

Alf. Lewis and wife were both taken sick on their western trip, and had to stop off at his brother's, Lon. Lewis, of Nebraska. They will abandon their California trip and return home.

We expected to be able to write a poem this week, on the rise of the little village down the ridge. In connection with the store, the slate was arranged for a town hall, the leading township offices and the post office. But a portion of the programme miscarried through the kicking of Green backers. So we await further developments.

A SURPRISE PARTY.

April 3d, there was a party of thirty met at the commodious farm house of John W. Dewey, in Cambridge, it being the twentieth anniversary of his wedding. When the eight carriages, in military order, were unloaded at the door it was really a surprise, and more so immediately after when the party walked walked in and placed on the large dining-room tables the choice and savory viands of Lenawee county; such a variety of good things is seldom seen at our annual Thanksgiving dinners. It was made a feast of genuine goodness and cheerfulness. At this day it seems very fashionable among friends and relatives to give a memento; therefore a beautiful set of china ware of over one hundred pieces was given by the visitors, with various other presents. Also an elegant gold watch and chain by Mr. Samuel White to his daughter, Mrs. J. W. Dewey. Mr. A. F. Dewey made a very appropriate presentation address, the recipients [illegible] to the generous company. Thus the afternoon and evening was [illegible] at this well remembered hour.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, April 9, 1886.

The [illegible] another fright about the Washington Monument. A rumor spread like wildfire that the solid shaft was [illegible] between the Potomac river and Baltimore, and the recent heavy rains which have saturated its foundation and raised the surrounding waters naturally gave credence to the report. At different points in the city crowds of people were scrutinizing the Monument through opera glasses. What appeared to be the largest fissure or a gaping crack, was about fifteen feet below the 500 foot level. The sensation soon subsided, however. The dark streaks on the white marble were not cracks at all. They were only stains at certain vertical and horizontal joints caused by neglect of the cleaning process on the part of the workmen in their haste to complete the structure. The interior of the Monument is now practically completed. The iron stairway leading to the summit is to have ten elevator stages, each of which will run out to the elevator shaft at every fifteen feet of the ascent. Upon the completion of the stairway it was intended to afford the public every facility for seeing the monument by issuing passes, and providing those who wished to climb, to the top with a lantern. But as there are no provisions for keeping a watchman on hand, every opportunity would be given to vandals and relic hunters to deface the structure, either by tampering with the memorial stones or by writing their names upon the walls. When Congress provides custody for the Monument, and makes an appropriation for running the elevator, it will be open to the public and visitors may roam up and down it at will.

All the gossip about a new Secretary of the Treasury will have to subside for a time. The President holds to the belief that his favorite adviser will fully recover despite the doctor's opinion that Mr. Manning will never be able to assist again at the Cabinet councils. The President does not expect the sick Secretary will again be able to devote himself so exclusively to business as he was in the past, but he thinks the burden of Mr. Manning's work can be lightened by shifting it on others. At any rate the President will not even consider the subject of a new Secretary until Mr. Manning indicates to him what he would like to have done, and the latter may name his own successor.

The Library bill appropriates $[illegible], 000 to commence the construction of a building for the library of Congress, on a site directly east of the Capitol. It creates a commission consisting of the Secretary of the Interior, the Architect of the Capitol, and the Librarian of Congress, who shall be authorized to make the contracts and it further appropriates a sum of not more than $[illegible] for the purchase of the land.

The bill to enlarge the White House [illegible] Senate, and is expected to pass that body by a unanimous vote. The [illegible] of the measure is explained by the fact that [illegible] every Senator has an eye of faith on the old mansion as a fit [illegible] for himself.

THREE STARS.

The Part They Played in Fixing a Crime.

"Oh! an iron deep and dark-blue opening roll," shouted a cheerful-looking passenger, exchanging patronizing smiles with the snowy waiter, who, bowing broom, our good ship was tossed like a plaything.

"If I am to be hanged for it, if only it would begin soon!" grumbled I.

It was my first experience with Neptune, and we (three of us) were [illegible]

[illegible]

"Quick, quick, for heaven's sake!" I cried.

Impelled by my earnestness, a couple of police men darted into the street. The carriage stopped in answer to their call, and soon Rollickson was escorted into the room in which I was a prisoner. He turned pale at the sight of me.

"Strip his arm!" I cried, eagerly.

He drew back as an officer approached, and it was only after a struggle and by main force that he was compelled to submit to the inspection, which revealed a mark the exact counterpart of that found upon myself.

Before I had finished the narrative of my acquaintance with Rollickson, and the circumstances under which it began, an American detective entered the office and fully identified our late friend as the criminal for whom I had been so singularly mistaken. I may add that when the blonde wig and the whiskers were removed, with which he had disguised himself, the likeness between myself and Rollickson was quite marked.

I was released from custody, and the real Rollickson taken in my stead. The next steamer carried him back to America to stand his trial for numerous burglaries. And the young lady, it is to be hoped, was cured of the romance of falling in love with strangers at first sight.—New York Ledger.

CATARRH—A NEW TREATMENT.

From the Montreal Star.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern medicine has been attained by the Dixon treatment for Catarrh. Out of 250 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is some the less startling, which it is remembered that not less per cent of patients prescribing themselves to the regular practitioner are benefited, with the present medicines and other agents, have found no cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissues, Mr. Dixon has once adapted his cure to their extermination, this accomplished he claims the Catarrh is practically cured and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are still permanent. No one else has ever attempted to cure Catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured Catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple, and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favorable for a speedy and permanent cure. [illegible] Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King street, West, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on Catarrh.

At the conclusion of the council meeting last evening, the city fathers, the city officers who attend the regular sessions of the council, County Clerk Bixby, Justice Hulett and a veracious and voracious representative of the Record, accepted a cordial invitation to an informal reception given by Mayor and Mrs. Kimball, at their pleasant home on Toledo street. The officials developed some amazing appetites, which can readily be accounted for by the tempting viands which were set before them, and after a concerted and desperate attack on the refreshments reminiscences of the out-going city government, social converse, recitations by Justice Hulett and one of Mr. Bixby's inimitable songs, made the evening a remarkably pleasant one. At a late hour the company dispersed. Adrian Record.

THE WHEEL

And, oh did I see you about little Henry, grandma. He's got a bicycle and alive! Well, don't get excited about it. Just lay on a big poultice of rope and sugar on it, and change it every morning, and it'll be gone in three days. [illegible] grandfather does to make [illegible] as far as I know. They don't hurt nothin' they'll destroy good. Breakfast Table.

Have you seen the Tricycle into the Little House and look at the "blackboard" and read therefrom some reports made by its owners.

The Pope M. F. G. Co. handle two new wheels this season, the Columbia Softy, which only costs $140, very stiffing, and the Semi Roadster, a light cheap wheel, designed for boys and little men. A 54 inch wheel is the largest size made of this pattern. A tandem is building by this company, which promises to be fast and stay there.

BALTIMORE, April 6. Dr. Brinton H. Warner, a young physician of this city, died to-day of hydrophobia. On Christmas Day he was bitten by a small lap dog, which had been run over in the street by a bicycle and he made an effort to take it to his house to nurse it. He cauterized the wound shortly several days ago, he exhibited symptoms of rabies and died with all the horrors of that disease.

Whose fault was it? Was it the fault of the owner of the dog, by allowing the cur to promenade the highway, was it the fault of the rider? we should judge no, because the wheel has the first right to the road. Should the blame fall on the kind hearted M. D. To be sure if he had not meddled with the dog he would not have been bitten. Censure will fall to the chance which like a bull smith's dog, to gain its private ends went mad and bit the man.

And still another cycling paper will be greeted by the wheeling world in general. Aaron Bassett, chairman of the Racing Board, will soon be the editor and proprietor.

The Dickens Club had a pleasant session last Monday evening at W.

BILIOUSNESS.

Bilious symptoms invariably arise from indigestion, such as furred tongue, vomiting of bile, giddiness, sick-headache, irregular bowels. The liver secretes the bile and acts like a filter or sieve, to cleanse impurities of the blood. By irregularity in its action or suspensions of its functions, the bile is liable to overflow into the blood, causing jaundice, sallow complexion, yellow eyes, bilious diarrhœa, a languid, weary feeling and many other distressing symptoms. Biliousness may be properly termed an affection of the liver, and can be thoroughly cured by the grand regulator of the liver and biliary organs, BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS. Act upon the stomach, bowels and liver, making healthy bile and pure blood, and opens the culverts and sluiceways for the outlet of disease. Sold everywhere and guaranteed to cure.

[illegible] stand that a woman not far [illegible] stated to officer Burroughs, that she had bid her husband's revolver several times to keep him from shooting Joe. Verily, this was very kind, but if the shooting is to be done after the usual style in this neighborhood, a shooting gallery would be a proper requirement before much damage is done in that direction.

Last Tuesday officer Burroughs proceeded to arrest John Swift, upon a charge brought by his father, for being drunk and disorderly, and he was taken down to board with Ance Whitmore until he could obtain a hearing. He was brought before justice Brown last Tuesday and examined, when he received the gratifying intelligence that he would abide in the Detroit House of Correction for three months. He seems to approve of the fare over there, as it has been hardly a year since he went over the road, and now he returns again.

The opera house committee are busy measuring ground and talking over the propriety of the different sites for the same. The plans are all executed and in their hands, and they have a guaranty of the estimated cost, and the chances for the project going speedily forward are favorable. COUNTY HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

ADRIAN April 7

The Lenawee County Horticultural society met at 10 o'clock this afternoon, President Hough in the chair. The first business in order was a report of the committee on revision of the constitution and by-laws, as the president was chairman of this committee he asked by President Woodward to open the chair. After the reading of the report and revision of Mr. Helme it was verified that numbered each [illegible] your constituents it was [illegible] in the hands of the committee to [illegible] and put in proper shape [illegible] May meeting [illegible] then adjourned to meet at 2 P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Mr. Helme said he should plant a [illegible] in long rows, planting the Jones Marks on the outside, the Crescent, Sharpless next and Green prolific last. He said his daughter had planted seven rods of sand with Sharpless. The first year the yield was five bushels, the second year six bushels. He said, however, that the variety had not yielded so well for him but could get more berries from any of the other varieties named, but not such large and handsome berries.

Mr. W. Wickham preferred the Green Prolific to all others. He had used little in the way of fertilizers except stable manure. He had used the Buffalo Superphosphate to a limited extent, sown broadcast over the plants in the fall, but the result was not satisfactory, he thought it tended to burn the foliage. Again he should sow the fertilizers on the ground before setting the plants.

Mr. [illegible] had used wood ashes with good success, sown broadcast and dug in before planting. He was growing Sharpless and Crescent.

Mr. Woodward thought very highly of the Bidwell for a medium to late variety. He thought well of the Wilson, but [illegible]

Mr. Edmiston said he commenced growing Wilson strawberries in this city twenty-one years ago, and had since that time tested over one hundred varieties, most of them, new and high priced, and to-day he would not give up the Wilson for any other variety he had ever grown. He thought well of the Crescent for early and the Sharpless for large size and good quality.

Mr. Woodward planted in rows four feet apart, cultivated between the rows during the summer and let the plants spread all over the ground in the fall, but thought he should try keeping the plants confined to the row this season, keeping the middle in clean cultivation. He takes two crops off the ground and then plows under, giving no cultivation after the first season.

Mr. Mosher spoke well of the Glendale as a late berry of good quality, growing well up from the ground.

Mr. Davis asked about the Cuthbert raspberry if it was still considered productive.

Mr. Woodward said he had full faith in it. He thought it a very large yielder.

Mr. Clute asked when was the best time to remove the old wood from a raspberry patch.

Mr. Woodward said as soon as done picking the fruit. He also said in reply to a question that the Gregg had frozen down pretty badly during the cold weather one year ago.

Mr. Edmiston thought very highly of the Cuthbert and Turner for red raspberries, both producing large crops of fine berries.

The committee then introduced a plan for holding the summer meetings at private residences in different localities if possible, and endeavor to get the ladies and the young people interested as far as possible.

Considerable discussion followed participated in by Messrs. Coller, Day, Woodward, Helme and others, the outside being very general that the plan was a good one and invitations were solicited for three of the next five monthly meetings, these meetings to be held all day and the members to bring a basket of dinner and a plenty for all during the hour and every member is requested to bring his wife and children along and ask his neighbor to do likewise.

The meeting adjourned to W[illegible] Mar. 5th, at the residence of J. A. Davis on Springbrook avenue this city. Subjects: "Flowers" and "Vegetable gardening." Three short, spicy papers on each subject, one on flowers, one on a single object in vegetable gardening by a practical gardener, and one on injurious insects by L. W. A[illegible]. The talks of the other [illegible] are expected that of this meeting a programme will be completed for the remaining meetings of the year, yet to come.

By a vote of the society the treasurer [illegible] to pay $5 for the use of the society of this days meeting.

A very sad occurence took place here last week, the particulars of which are as follows: Truman Boss of Northern Minnesota, a man seventy years old came east to visit his brother, Geo. Boss of Ridgeway, who has been confined to his bed for a long time with a broken hip. A week ago last Friday he came over home with W. J. Holdridge, and during the night was taken sick. No danger was anticipated in the case until the following Friday morning, when very grave symptoms made their appearance. Dr. Nelson of Ridgeway was immediately called in consultation and the family telegraphed his condition. From this time the patient sank rapidly and died at four o'clock the following morning. Mr. Waring of Ridgeway, was called to embalm the body, after which the remains were placed in a casket and Sunday at [illegible] Mr. Holdridge took the train and started for the west, having been telegraphed to [illegible] body home immediately. Taken altogether it is the saddest affair that occurred in Ridgeway for a long time.

The new proprietors of the Lake Mills have taken possession. Mr. Jas. Priest the head miller is a man of no little experience. He commenced his career as a miller in the village of Blissfield, this county, 34 years ago. From there he went to Dundee, and finally built a mill in Peters burg, having sold out there he returned to Old England from whence he came, worked at his trade there for some time and returned; built a steam mill in Wayne county, which he sold about two years ago. We asked Mr. Priest as to the condition of the Lake Mills, and at first he seemed inclined not to answer the question, but finally said "it was a darned shame for a mill worth the money this mill was, to be run as it had been" but would not say whose fault he thought it to be. We are glad to know that the proprietors are fortunate enough to secure as valuable a miller as Mr. Priest, and with the aid of Joseph Marsh, he expects to do as good work as any mill in Southern Michigan, and of course we feel very jubilant over the change.

CONGRESSMAN ELDRIDGE AT HOME

Congressman Eldredge is spending Easter week at his home in Adrian. In Monday's issue of the Times appeared an interview with the Congressman which we take the liberty of reprinting.

What is the cause of the delay in the confirmation of Postmaster Stearns, was asked.

Hasn't been confirmed, that's all. There is no doubt of the confirmation at all, and there has been delay only because of other business that was before the Senate. Postmaster Fairchild of Hudson is similar. His nomination was signed and Mr. S. was appointed but the matter of confirmation while it is certain to be reached, the Senate, you know, has been taking on that for months past. In the past three months, and when that is concluded the other matter will receive attention.

It is understood that you made a personal appeal to Senator Conger in Stearns behalf.

That is true. I have done so in further support of the action taken with Senator Ferry. I have done the same in the case of Mr. Stearns. I have written a letter to any person concerned in Washington, and I have done all I could consistently do in his behalf.

What do Mr. W. H. Wood and Mr. Stearns think of the situation?

Well, I don't know what they think. I have not had time to see them since I came home. Mr. Wood was here a few days ago, and I supposed he was here on business connected with the matter.

POTATO CULTURE

SOILS AND FERTILIZERS.

[illegible] adapted to the potato are sandy and gravelly loams. Clay soils [illegible] will produce [illegible] will be [illegible] with [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] soil, to [illegible] the [illegible] soil, will usually give a fine crop of potatoes. Newly broken up pastures from a clayey upon soil are usually of a smaller, less yielding lot and of inferior quality.

The application of fresh stable manure is not desirable on potato land, as it frequently results in a diminished yield and greatly increases the liability to rot.

Mucky soils in a dry season often produce a good crop, but as they are deficient in organic matter an application of leached ashes will be found desirable to supply the potash essential to the growth of the potato.

Ashes may be considered as a special fertilizer for potatoes, adding to the yield and improving the quality.

They can be [illegible] on the hill or in it. A good way is to have them in with the earth that covers the seed, or as a top dressing after the plants are fairly started.

[illegible]

The [illegible] should be thoroughly plowed and harrowed until it is well pulverized and level. More potatoes can be grown in hills three feet apart and from twelve to eighteen inches apart in the drill than when the ground is rowed each way and the planting is alternate.

It is more work, however, to keep the potatoes clean, and necessitates more or less hand hoeing.

In good culture we think rowing four ways and planting in hills three feet apart each way the most economical and satisfactory. In cultivating keep the soil free from weeds and as loose as possible, and when the vines have half grown, or are ready to cover, go over the whole field with a light harrow, and follow with the cultivator. This will destroy the young weeds and leave the surface in good condition for the growth of the tubers.

Mr. Hersey said that he had got the most, the largest, and the best quality of potatoes from small tubers cut two eyes to a piece. He cite his conclusions:

1. The shape of a potato cannot be changed by the continued selection of any particular form of the seed planted. 2. The crop may be increased by selecting for seed healthy, well kept tubers, and diminished by selecting for seed diseased and poorly kept potatoes. 3. Hard potatoes that have sprouted but little are better for seed than those that are soft, or have any long sprouts. 4. Long continued planting of any variety gradually changes its characteristics. 5. Large crops are only obtained on rich soils, well prepared by being thoroughly pulverized. 6. In ordinary land or fair size of the tubers planted should be sufficient to give the young plants a vigorous start. 7. Neither the size or form of the seed tuber is of half as much consequence as its healthy condition or its vital powers. 8. No rule can be laid down in regard to the quantity of seed per acre, the amount of manure to be applied, or the particular method of cultivation. The results of half a dozen experiments are not sufficient to establish any particular views, and each one must experiment for himself on his own farm.

Following Mr. Hersey's address came the reading by Secretary Russell of a paper from Mayor Alvord detailing experiments with potatoes at Hobart Park, New York, during the past season. A collection of the tubers grown in this experiment were displayed at meetings of the Massachusetts for the past fall. The result of the experiment was that the planting of fair sized whole potatoes was the most satisfactory to pursue. This was true not only of a single kind, but was the average of different kinds treated exactly alike. In the former column of the seed. In production the seven leading varieties [illegible] Burbank, Burbank, Burbank, Beauty of Hebron, Early Ohio, Rural Blush, Rural Russet, Garfield, Adirondack. Of the varieties in these lists there are [illegible] because rough and of bad shape. Chicago Market, Burbank, Garfield, Adirondack, A [illegible], Chenango's Seedling, Hebron. And this leaves as favorite [illegible] on account of gross productiveness and merchantable in regard to size, quantity and condition, the Beauty of Hebron only.

MICHIGAN CROP REPORT APRIL 1, 1889.

For this report returns have been received from 856 correspondents, represent 1,276 townships. Six hundred and [illegible] of these returns are from 90 townships in the southern [illegible] of counties.

The condition of wheat in the south [illegible] is reported at 87 per cent. and in the northern counties 93 per cent., comparison being with vitality and growth of average years, but correspondents generally agree that it is yet too early to make a satisfactory estimate. The freezing and thawing during March has certainly been severe on the crop in the southern portion of the State, yet this indicates that the roots are not seriously injured, possibly not more than in average years. In a large portion of the northern counties the ground on the first of April was covered with snow in some places to the depth of eighteen inches.

Ten per cent. of the acreage in wheat is believed to be winter killed, and the condition of that portion not winter killed is 92 per cent. compared with average years. In condition horses are 98, cattle 96, sheep 96, and swine 97 per cent. The comparison of the will stock in good health and thrifty condition.

Apples promise 97 per cent. of an average crop, and peaches promise 101 per cent. in the southern counties.

ZITHER AND BANJO.

sounds heard almost any afternoon or evening by a person ascending a rather dingy staircase in a two-story building adjoining the Milwaukee Street car company's barn on West Water street. A sign on the outside door bears the legend "Cigar manufacturer," and the odor of the weed permeates the entire building. Entering a room at the head of the stairs a number of males at work rolling tobacco leaf are seen, and one is directed to a small office whence comes the banjo's strains. The cigar manufacturer is engaged in giving a young man lesson, who is well known in social circles. It is said that he is the only institution of banjo playing in this city. Speaking of the extent of drumming done here he said: "I have been giving instructions on this instrument for the past five years, and though my classes have always been of good size, I have more pupils this year than ever before. It is an accomplishment that is being cultivated quite generally in all parts of the country, and I believe that the banjo business, both in manufacturers of banjos and instructors, has been unprecedented large everywhere. At the beginning of the winter I gave all my lessons in the evening and went around to the pupil's residence, but now I have fitted up this little office and I only go out for lady pupils."

"Who are your pupils?"

"They are all of the young people and include some very well known ladies and gentlemen. The ladies as a rule learn to play very well and easily, while the gentlemen, especially this year, are also ready at acquiring the art."

"What is the price of a banjo?"

"That varies according to the quality of the instrument. You can buy one for almost any price, but if you select one of the best make and finish, you will have to pay in the neighborhood of fifty dollars. It is the same as with other instruments. Those producing the best tone are the most desirable, and, therefore, the most expensive. No, I don't have many German patrons. The banjo is essentially an American instrument and is not cultivated much by foreigners."

An investigation suggested by this last remark showed that the Germans do not take to the banjo much, but prefer the zither or the guitar. A teacher of the zither said: "I can only estimate the number of zither players as they have never been counted and there are several other teachers besides myself. However, judging from what I know about zither players, I should say there were upwards of two hundred in the city. There are already two zither clubs and a third one is in process of formation. Almost all of my pupils are Germans. It is not a very difficult instrument to learn, but requires assiduous practice. The concert zither gives to the best tone and is the kind used by good players. The good zithers are imported from Germany and you can get a fine one from fifty to one hundred and twenty dollars according to the finish. The cheaper zithers have but thirty-one strings instead of thirty-eight and do not have as good a tone. These can be had from eight up to thirty dollars. Neither of the clubs has yet appeared in concert, but the effect of a dozen or more zithers is very fine."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

MEXICAN FOOT-GEAR.

The Shoeless and Stockingless Citizens of Our Sister Republic.

The 10,000,000 inhabitants of Mexico use almost entirely home-made boots, shoes, gaiters, slippers and sandals so far as they wear any foot-covering at all. Shoes in Mexico are a European introduction and do not properly belong to the national costume. A large proportion of the population (probably a majority) do not wear shoes at all. The sandal, which is a sole of leather, raw-hide or white or grey fiber, strapped to the bottom of the foot with strings of the same material, is the only foot-covering used by this class of people, and as every man is his own shoemaker, and the climate requires no protection for instep or ankle, the national sandal, despite the [illegible] comfort and convenience, is a thing that can be worn in this country.

In proof of this, the inferior classes of the Mexicans [illegible] in poverty or otherwise without regard to expense, still wear the leather sandals in preference to shoes, not solely for the sake of economy, but because it is considered generally healthier to keep the feet in better condition, [illegible] exposed or confined, and [illegible] ease or [illegible].

The I. O. O. F. band of Blissfield is negotiating for a new uniform.

T. J. Salisbury, of Adrian will deliver the address at Blissfield on Decoration Day.

P. C. Mills, of Adrian, fell from an apple tree which he was trimming one day last week, and was quite seriously bruised.

The Jackson Telegram suggests that the barrel of mineral water shipped from Adrian to Boston must be designed as a dressing for baked beans.

The Lake Mills property of T. H. Mosher, near Springville, was sold last week to Marsh & Brazee, of Adrian, who will take immediate possession.

Mrs. Rogers has a very artistic millinery sign in front of her establishment, the work of L. F. Wheeler, of Tecumseh. The letters are raised, with a carved background. It is a unique and attractive sign.—Hudson Post.

The porch of the First Baptist church is quite a popular resort for lovers, and in its shadows many a whispered tale of love is told. Passing pedestrians lower their voices when they pass the church that their confidential conversation may not become public property.—Adrian Record.

George Miles, editor of the Clinton Local, went to Chicago last week and purchased a new press to print his paper on. George is evidently amassing wealth in the newspaper business by bucking against the Tecumseh Herald and News.—Adrian Press.

The Adrian Record has unearthed this old relic. Mr. Channing Whitney has in his possession two checks drawn on the bank of Adrian in 1839 by A. J. Comstock and D. C. Jackson. One of them which is for $48, is drawn at twelve days sight.

Whom shall our girls marry? asks the eastern editor with considerable anxiety. Out here the experiment is being tried of having our girls marry our boys. The scheme certainly will bear investigation, replies the western quill-driver.

There is a bill before congress for the extension of the free delivery of mails to cities having 10,000 population. We fear that Washington correspondents of Detroit papers hint that Adrian might be brought into the list if the bill becomes a law. The only chance Adrian has of getting the free delivery is through Chapin's 10,000 population directory, and we all know that this.—Hudson Gazette.

The old widow tree that has stood so long at the entrance of William Aldrich's farm yard, has been cut down and converted into stove wood. It measured around the stump 20 feet and the whole tree will make about ten cords of stove wood. Forty-six years ago Mr. Aldrich stuck down a sprout about three feet long, and in that period of time it had enlarged to that great size.—United Co. Brooklyn Exponent.

Hermon Allen met with an accident last Monday while returning from the docks which left him in a very painful and serious condition. When about half a mile from the town house on horse back, riding along by the fence, his horse shied at some object, throwing Mr. Allen off against the fence, receiving three ribs to be broken on his left side near four inches from the back bone. His horse came riderless over to town and was caught at the bridge on River street, while the injured man was brought home by his son, Jerome. At present he is doing as well as can be expected.—Minor Leader.

Dr. A. B. Jenkins of Tipton was in Hayes in this week and made THE GAZETTE a pleasant call. The Dr. has been a loyal Democrat all his life and his appointment some months ago to the postmastership of his town was the proper thing. The men who stood to the front ranks during the hot strife of a quarter century are entitled to recognition. The Dr. is one of these. We are glad to learn that Franklin is keeping pace with the times, showing stronger Democratic symptoms every year, the late township election being especially notable for the Democratic gains. The treasurer and drain commissioner on the Democratic ticket were elected. The Dr. makes a good postmaster, this pleasant and obliging nature and faithful business habits wouldn't let him be otherwise.—Hudson Gazette.

A NEW ENTERPRISE.

The Ohio & Mich. Coal & Mfg. Co. [illegible] name of the new stock company, which is now fairly embarked in business. The foundation of the company is the real estate and buildings heretofore owned by S. W. Temple, which Mr. Temple turns into the new company at so much stock.

O. B. DeWolf of Tecumseh, and several heavy Toledo capitalists have taken stock in the enterprise, the total amount of the capital stock being $70,000. Mr. DeWolf is President of the company, S. W. Temple is Vice President and General Manager, and H. M. Temple is Secretary and Treasurer. Mr. DeWolf has long been known as one of our most successful business men, having made a competence in the lumber trade. S. W. Temple has been engaged in the lumber business in this village for twenty three years. As a practical manager of a large lumber yard and planing mill there is no better man to be found in Southern Michigan. H. M. Temple is fully qualified to perform the clerical duties of the office.

The business of the corporation will be the wholesale and retail selling of lumber of all kinds, shingles and lath; also the manufacture of doors, sash, blinds, mouldings, all kinds of finished work for buildings and the selling of coal, plaster and lime. Mr. Temple has spent most of his time for the past three months in procuring the necessary subscriptions to stock, and getting the company started upon a solid basis. He is certainly entitled to the good wishes of the community for having organized a good strong combination which bids fair to become one of the leading manufacturing enterprises in this part of the state.

The company have a new card on the first page of the HERALD this week to which we invite special attention, and we wish the new firm that full measure of success that industry and enterprise deserve.

BELLE BOYD, THE REBEL SPY.

The opera house was well filled last Monday evening to hear Belle Boyd the rebel spy lecture. As the proceeds of the entertainment were for the benefit of P. J. Welling, as the lecture was very interesting it merited a much larger audience. Through the efforts of several members of the G. A. R. Post, under whose auspices she was lecturing, about 150 tickets were sold in advance, besides those reserved. At about eight o'clock Miss Boyd appeared on the stage and after being introduced to the audience commenced the delivery of one of the most interesting lectures a Tecumseh audience ever listened to. She is tall and commanding, and took well the stage about 30 years ago, although much older, and as she has had some experience in the theatrical business she was perfectly at home, and although laboring under the disadvantage of a hard cold her voice was clear and well modulated. We shall pass the attention of her audience throughout. After briefly alluding to the worthy object for which she was lecturing she gave a brief history of her life as a spy. When the Civil War commenced she was not a girl just out of school but nevertheless took an active part in the cause of her country. She was in several battles, being once in the very front ranks on a cavalry horse, was a nurse in hospitals, and for valuable information of the plans of the Federal army was made an aide de camp of Stonewall Jackson and afterwards on the staff of Longstreet. While here she claimed that she had every worn mens clothes and one of the greatest aids in getting information was the fact that she was taken for a half the Federal officers. She was in prison twice at Washington and once in New York city, and was once sentenced to be shot, but the sentence was commuted to banishment, and she went to Europe and while there was presented to several Princes, and afterwards went on the stage in London and achieved great success. Miss Boyd while in England married an English officer, who has since died. She now has three children and was married the age of 16 years. We understand that the success of the entertainment resulted in a net profit to Mr. Welling of $150. This will be very gratefully appreciated by him and the money will be forthcoming and expended in behalf of the benefit of his family. The members of Lucius A. B. Post are entitled to much credit for their laudable efforts to make the occasion a success.

During a hurried visit to Adrian one day last week, we made a hasty call at the Press office. Found Con Long in charge with plenty of work and in good spirits. Almost the entire mechanical and business management of the Press now devolves upon him as Mr. Stearns spends most of his time at the postoffice. Mr. Stearns was very fortunate in securing so good a manager for the newspaper.

AN HONOR WORTHILY BESTOWED.

On Tuesday last Will S. McNair received a letter from Clerk Elstner nominating him to the West Point cadetship for this congressional District. Will is the third Tecumseh boy who has been thus honored, his predecessors being W. T. Throop and Albert Connably.

Will was born in Tecumseh and has always made this village his home. He will be eighteen years of age next September. He is a member of the class of '89 of our High School, and will graduate in June next. The HERALD also congratulates Mr. McNair upon his nomination. He is a young man of honorable industry, of strong character, an active Republican, and in every way worthy of the honor upon him. We believe he will be heard from in the future, and that the honor upon Tecumseh and the district will be well sustained.

The appointment strikes a responsive chord in the hearts of our community for in this instance an honor has been bestowed where it will be appreciated and where it is well deserved. In making this appointment Congressman Dedredge has performed an act which our people will remember to his credit. We shall watch Will's future course with a good deal of interest, confident that the day will come, when Tecumseh will be proud to claim him as a Tecumseh boy.

MY LITTLE LAD AND I.

A GRAND DEFENSE.

Wives, Heroines and Widows in a Day.

It was a June day in Arizona. At Roberts' Ranch, on the Gila, there was a feeling of perfect peace and security as the sun climbed high into the heavens. Roberts was planting in a [illegible] from the stunted log cabin, while his wife was busy with domestic duties. There were horses and cattle in an inclosure a quarter of a mile from the house, and a pony, which was picketed to graze at will, cropped the grass around the cabin.

Such was the situation when the wife heard two or three rifle shots and the war whoops of Indians. She sprang to the door to see that her husband was hurrying for the house at his best speed, while the Indians followed him up [illegible] as they came. Geronimo's Apaches had broken loose and danced the war path. The ranchman's wife understood at a glance what was coming. Her heart gave one great bound, a sudden weakness overcame her for an instant, and then she seized the Winchester rifle from its hooks, grabbed the long-barreled Navy from its holster, and ran with all speed to meet her husband. He fell before they reached the cabin, his left arm broken by a bullet and the devils were upon him.

"Mother, the red devils are loose," he said as she came up and knelt by his side.

"If you are only three against a band of them, she replied as she made ready to open fire.

The Indians had halted within rifle shot of cover. Her first shot bored a hole through and through, and the other two scattered in search of ground half a mile away.

"I'll carry you to the house and then work for them," she said, as they drew back.

"Not another word, mother," he said. "Take one of the rifles and climb into the loft. Keep out of sight and fire only when you can't miss. Let them come close before you open on them."

"Oh, George, I don't know—"

The revolver was under his hand. His fingers crooked over the stock and he whispered: "Mother, kiss me—"

She held over him with a sob in her throat, and his hand was on the revolver ground and the muzzle touched her side. The wife staggered upright, her face ashen and she strong upon her husband's breast. Should not [illegible] did not cower and hide. She unplaited her hair on the spot and let it fall upon her both were shot and to escape the scalping knife. Her husband had received a wound which [illegible] to her side, and a few minutes [illegible] was brought to a close only a few days [illegible]

Owing to the fever on one side and could not scatter at once. They must approach the ranch under the ranchman's fire, if at all. He wanted for them, but they hesitated and held a consultation. During this [illegible] wounded made the hut secure, filled a barrel with water and killed a number of horses lower and forced them to cross the river. While they were occupied [illegible] the rest were in consultation. The ranchman stood like a rock, he [illegible] the slightest movement. [illegible] the white was the leader [illegible] village of black [illegible] Robert [illegible] the west and [illegible] the fate of another [illegible]

When the Indians had [illegible] to give them [illegible] a warrior started up, the [illegible] shot, he halted and called out:

"Indians go hurt! Indians want dinner."

The quick eye of the ranchman detected two dismounted red skins dodging from cover to cover to gain the rear of the house. The idea was to parley until they were in position.

With a movement so quick that the other had no time to prepare for [illegible] ranchman brought his rifle to a [illegible] There was a loud report, and the [illegible] fell from his horse. As he tumbled from his saddle the pony [illegible] or two, but there was another report, and the beast rolled over. Next instant there was a shot from the cabin, and one of the pair of skulkers uttered his death yell. When the smoke rose the ranchman was no longer to be seen. He had retreated to the house. Filled with chagrin and a desire for vengeance, the Indians now dismounted and crept nearer, and in a few minutes the cabin was being assailed from every point of the compass.

Within there were two pale-faced women and a grim, determined man. The structure was roughly built of planks and logs, undivided by partitions. There were only four windows, and these were protected by stout shutters, which were pierced with loopholes. The weapons were two Winchesters and two revolvers. The ranchman's first move after getting inside was to divide his force so as to cover the windows. He then pulled out the chinking in the corners of the cabin to make other loopholes, and each one of the [illegible] a post of observation and defense. Scarcely a word had been exchanged since the arrival of Mrs. Roberts. Each one [illegible] stood out for himself or herself. A gang of Apaches have broken loose from their reservation, and are on the warpath. They will burn and slay until a force can be raised to overpower them. It may be a week before that force is in the field. Surrender means to be burned at the stake. A desperate resistance may drive them off.

There was Roberts, the husband of a year, lying dead and scalped, and horribly mutilated on his freshly planted field. His stock had been shot down or driven off, and the red fiends had looted his cabin, but there were no tears in the eyes of the wife as she peered from one of the loopholes. Tears would have obscured her vision, and what her eyes were needed there.

For an hour or more the Indians [illegible] and [illegible] fire, but with [illegible] and least damage. They were then joined by a party of seven, coming from the east, and I soon became evident that some [illegible] was to be given.

"I hope what they will do," said the Indian, as the reports of rifles [illegible] four points and [illegible] the house to birds. [illegible] doors down they will try to set the house on fire. Each of you take a [illegible] and I will use the axe. Be cool and we can drive them back."

The three had been waiting at their stations for a minute when the crash was made. [illegible] of rock and [illegible] every hand [illegible] the door. RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

E. C. Aunkes is no longer a resident of the village, having moved to his new home recently purchased of Abe Hanford.

Mrs. Samuel Rapplye, who has been very sick during the past few weeks, is slowly recovering.

Wm. H. Arner, choice for of the church choir, requests a full attendance for practice next Saturday evening, to prepare music for the district meeting of the W. F. M. Society, to be held here the 12th and 13th of next month.

W. P. Cadams went to Buffalo Saturday night with a car of stock shipped by A. Hanford.

Nearly all of the clay roads are in a very rough condition for the want of scraping at the proper time. This is a very serious negligence of the overseers of highways. One day with a good road scraper at the proper time, is worth more to the road district than a week's work in June when the road is worked by scraping the muck from the ditches into the center of the road. Our present system of doing road work comes very near being a failure.

John B. Pattison has returned to the farm for the summer. Guess John can do his own farming a little better than anyone else can do it for him.

Supervisor Linn is busy taking the assessment. James will do the square thing as best he knows how, but then some one will be dissatisfied, no doubt.

The row of church sheds on the west side of the yard are in a dilapidated condition, and if they are not soon repaired will be a total wreck. As they are owned by private individuals they will likely get the needed attention.

The entertainments given on Friday and Tuesday evenings by the literary society, were each greeted with crowded houses, and proved the best yet given by the society. The young people who responded so willingly and rehearsed so faithfully in preparation, merit the gratitude of the executive committee and the appreciation of the public. The parts were all well executed, and to speak of any seperately would make it necessary to mention all. The society realized $28, which will pay all the expenses incurred during the past two terms. The society will now stand adjourned during the summer, but will be ready for business again early in the fall.

FLASHES BY THE C. T. LINE.

Mrs. Caroline Henry visited at Horatio Keyser's this week.

One more added to our line. Geo. Lester of Raisin is the lucky man.

Dr. House received a call last Sunday, four miles in the country and was there in answer to it 24 minutes afterwards. The call was made by the C. T. line, but not the Dr's visit.

Verk Kelly went to Ripley last Tuesday, where he expects to obtain work as a brakeman on the Wabash.

S. K. Hayes of Hillsdale, Mich., has been the guest of his daughter, Mrs. G. B. Cornelhouse, during the past few days. He returned to his home Tuesday accompanied by his granddaughter, Miss May Cornelhouse.

W. J. Holbridge has returned home from Sack City, Mich. While there he visited Sans Rapids and Stanland which were devastated by the recent cyclone, and reports the destruction to life and property beyond description. Our cyclone last September looks a little small in comparison with it.

ONSIEDODDS.

Cards are out for the wedding of Herbert Coffinberry and Miss Mamie Aten, to come off May 5th.

On Friday evening of this week Mr. and Mrs. Levi Williams will give a party to a large number of friends. The occasion being the tenth anniversary of their marriage.

The "Old Folks" concert given at the church Friday evening was well attended, considering the times. It was a good entertainment and all seemed well pleased.

Sunday afternoon, while Butch Decker, a little Miss of four years, was playing on a step ladder at S. G. Aten's, she fell and broke her arm. The Dr. says it is a bad break. Being [illegible] day morning informing friends of the death of John Mills of Jonesville. Mr. Mills was a son-in-law of Nelson Kingsley. Mrs. Mills is well known here and will have the heartfelt sympathy of her many friends.

On Saturday evening at 7 o'clock p. m., the beautiful clock in R. L. Glenn's store will be given to the lucky guesser. Mr. Glenn desires that all, who are interested, will be present to see the string measured.

BROOKLYN BALLAST.

The lateness of Easter is balanced by the earliness of Spring, and few who listened to the story of a risen Savior, when this anniversary fell on the 25th before, heard the bell call for dawn service this morning. Flowers are starring meadow and garden, so the profusion of star bloom seems a natural sequal to refrains proclaiming resurrection to life, and wakes remembrance, that hope deferred wears the pale's royal dreamery in late fruition.

There is not much elasticity in the heart that fails to give an extra throb when snow drifts yield place to greenery; for however dreary the winter may have been, one can't help weaving the sunshine that yields dark life threads so those who have pined for work to do are growing jubilant because overwhelmed with array danche of it. Everybody is busy, and for once there is no complaint of summer being half gone before it begins. Trees are white with bloom, and we are too early for finding fault with contract labor, as contract to plow gardens are to worthless to feel about. Knights of labor have not organized here yet, though at Jackson, where prison slave work is cheap, they are shouting a war cry. How would it do to stop convict making and spoil the forty cents per day competition that way.

ALBION COLLEGE CHAFF.

The spring term has opened under very flattering prospects. About 275 names are enrolled, among the number being a good percentage of new students.

Upon the evening of the 14th inst., Dr. J. C. Ridpath, Professor of History in DePauw University, the eminent American historian delivered a very interesting and instructive lecture before a large audience of students and city people at the College chapel. Subject "Alexander Hamilton." In this lecture, the history of the Constitutional Formation period of our country was well brought out.

One of the verdant Freshmen, while walking upon Main street with one of the ladies, was suddenly taken with an appetite for some dates. Accordingly going into a store he ordered a pound to be put up, when he remembered that he had not one cent of money with him and the lady had to walk up and pay for the treat; and now this Freshman is learning a great deal about dates.

SCHEMIAN OATS IN A NEW ROLL.

The Schemian oat question, which has caused so much excitement and brain trouble in this neighborhood for weeks past, has assumed a new and more serious phase. Up till the present week a refusal to pay their notes has been the form of active opposition taken by the "Knights," but proceedings of a criminal nature against the agents themselves is now being undertaken.

James Armitage, one of the original dealers in reducers, is the first to be arrested. Deputy Sheriff Follett found him at a country tavern three miles north of the city of Jackson, on Wednesday evening, and the two arrived here the next forenoon. In the afternoon the prisoner was quietly arraigned before Esq. Killip, on a complaint alleging that he Armitage had practised fraud and deception in obtaining a note from Roland D. Kennedy. The bail was fixed at $500 which Armitage managed to obtain, and the preliminary examination will take place here next Wednesday. Mr. Armitage is still engaged in selling sets, but is no longer associated with the famous "Charley" Warner.

Thus does the plot deepen and a curious public will watch the denouement of that intensely realistic drama, "The Oats of Bohemia or, How I Got Swindled," with a good deal of unadulterated interest. Morning Observer.

FOR EARACHE, Toothache, Sore Throat, Swelled Neck, and the results of cold and inflammation, use Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil the great pain destroyer.

Great as are the use of advertising, the wonderful success of St. Jacobs Oil has been due chiefly to its power in healing pain. The true secret of success, after all, is merit.

THE GROWTH OF PROHIBITION.

A fierce battle is being fought in Richmond, Va., to-day, on the prohibition question. It is election day, and the issue is prohibition or license. Singer Colquitt, of Georgia, has been the most effective speaker for the prohibitionists. His official position giving his utterances weight in that democratic city. That the liquor interests are thoroughly frightened is evinced by the appeals they are making, one being that if the prohibitionists are successful they will immediately turn their attention to eradicating the tobacco interests. Then, again, the saloon interests direct attention to the grape industry of the state which is rapidly developing, and predict its collapse if the temperance advocates are victorious.

On the temperance side were eloquent Troy Massey, Bishop Turner of Atlanta, who confined his attention to the 30,000 colored population, Prof. A. A. Hopkins, Mrs. Mary T. Lathrop and M. J. Fanning, of this state, and a score of others, their expences being paid by contributions from other sections of the country. Many of these speakers were fresh from their Rhode Island victory, that state having just voted a constitutional amendment prohibiting the manufacture or sale of liquor. The indications seem to favor the temperance element but whichever way the election goes it will be close.

Ever since the prohibitionists put a national ticket in the field, their vote has been on the increase. In 1872 Black, for president, received 5,608 votes, in 1876 Smith received 9,034 votes, in 1880 Dow had 10,304 votes, and in 1884 St. John had 150,369 votes. On the basis of these figures the prohibitionists figure out the election of their presidential candidate in 1892. The same increase is observable in their state tickets. Taking New York for an example, it is seen that, whereas in 1876 it was but 2,359, in 1885 it was 30,531. In Michigan the prohibition vote for governor was 1,114 in 1880, 5,854 in 1882, and 22,207 in 1884.

Adding all these things together, the increase in the prohibition vote, their recent victories in Rhode Island and Georgia, and the hard fights they are making whenever an opportunity offers—it is evident that the successful political prophet must take into careful consideration the direction from which these prohibition votes are likely to come.

Heretofore, and with good reason, a vote cast for a prohibition candidate has generally been considered a vote lost by the republican candidate. But this is true no longer. In Rhode Island Edwin Metcalf, the new attorney general just elected, ran on the democratic and prohibition tickets, and he openly says he is a thorough going prohibitionist and will see that the law prohibiting the manufacture and sale of liquor is rigidly enforced. Democratic Georgia sends to the senate of the United States Colquitt, than whom a more radical prohibitionist cannot be found. And coming down to Michigan, an analysis of the vote for governor in 1884 will show that Josiah Begole, the fusion candidate, was defeated by Preston, slips pasted over his name. Alger ran behind his ticket 1,829, Begole ran behind 2,471, Preston ran ahead of his ticket 2,804. Here after the prohibitionists are going to draw votes from both parties in not far from equal proportions.

Some of the best workers for prohibition in Rhode Island on election day were officers of Father Matthew societies, the membership of which is exclusively with being pretty solidly democratic. Whether the officers of these societies in Richmond are doing the same effective work is not known, but as the prohibitionists have now been a party long enough to know a good thing when they see it, especially if it will capture votes, doubtless the Irish of Richmond are to-day sporting blue ribbons in their buttonholes and voting prohibition tickets.—Detroit Evening News.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(Special Correspondence.)

WASHINGTON, April 26, 1886.

Spring is in Washington now with all its glory. The leaves are out on the trees, making the streets long avenues of color, and the grass is bright with that charming tint which only Spring can paint. The parks and squares are gay with the yellow blossoms of the Forsythia and white splendor of the Magnolia, while the cloudy pink of the peach tree peers over the garden walls. It is hard to tell what impresses one most—the softness of the climate, the fine avenues, some over two miles long, radiating from the Capitol, like the sticks of a fan, the green circles and squares and triangles that greet you unexpectedly in every direction, the magnificence of the public buildings, or the cosy elegance of the private residences.

It is not to be wondered at that under the seductions of a Washington Spring the President should "lightly turn to thoughts of love." If an ovsterqueen fall in love at all, it would be in one of these bright Spring days in Washington. Whether or not Mr. Cleveland is to marry in the near future, it is believed that he will, and the would-be knowing one accuse him of manifesting every matrimonial symptom. He goes out more frequently now than ever before, and those who meet him on his afternoon drives with his private Secretary, come to the imaginative conclusion that he looks very happy and sentimental despite the care of State.

This is the time for drives and rides and walks about the city, and everybody who can take time for it, is out of doors. Members of the Cabinet, Justices of the Supreme Court, Senators, Representatives, and Department officials may be seen after four o'clock P. M. on horseback, on foot, or in more or less elegant turnouts on the streets and country roads around the city, while the ladies who are busy with Spring shopping, throng Pennsylvania avenue all day long.

Congress has come to a point in the session where it is necessary to exercise the pluck of principle. Various appropriation bills for the aid of education, nicely so styled in some instances for new pensions for river and harbor improvements, for public buildings, and other enterprises for expending the people's money, are coming up for action. The Republican minority, feeling responsibility neither for the House nor the President, do not care if the record of the session is conspicuous for extravagance, and a grave responsibility is thus placed upon the Democrats in Congress.

The River and Harbor bill is now before the House, and members are working at it section by section and voting away money in order to lock each other carry doubtful districts in the coming fall elections. Each one of a dozen little unheard of rivers and creeks and bays, in as many States, wants an appropriation to dredge its channels two feet deeper perhaps, so that the one or two steamboats that run in its waters may not run aground. Some of these demands upon the treasury vaults would be ludicrous if they were not so outrageously impudent. Their only excuse is the necessity of Congressmen to buy votes with government money, and their only chance of passage is the average Member's willingness to log-roll.

The Senate on Wednesday passed between four and five hundred private pension bills, the largest days work ever either branch of Congress ever did. It also voted to eject a fire proof call in the city for keeping records, and Senator Hoar will be sorry before voting for it if it were specially intended for the safe keeping of the President's "private papers." The Senate continues to operate in a rather leisurely way during a part of each day the subject of secret or open sessions.

The Attorney General was a witness in the Pacific Railway case in this city. He gave a full account of his connection with the affair, stating that he had never used official position to advance the interest of the Scheme, that he had had nothing whatever to do with the bringing of the front suit, that he still retained his stock which was not a gift, but instead of making, he had lost $100 by Pan Electricity, but that it was a perfectly legitimate enterprise for all that.

Much interest has also been taken in the Strike investigation now in progress here, owing to the fact that Grand Master Workman Powderly and Jay Gould among others were present as witnesses. An exceedingly interesting body of testimony was given all around, but Mr. Powderly drew more attention than the railroad King. He made a full presentation of the labor side of the case, and gave a full history of the Knights organization.

It is quite remarkable, considering the [illegible] Eldredge. He is not and never has been an office seeker, and this is one reason why he is so popular with the People. He evidently believes, in the old time saying, "The office should seek the man—not the man the office." We [illegible] with the Record in regard to Col. INSOMNIA.

Are the American People Becoming a Nation of Invalids?

The Frightful Increase of Insanity Caused by Nervousness and Sleeplessness.

The increase of insanity in America during the last ten years has been more than twice as great as the increase of population. The large and handsome public buildings recently erected have been for the care of lunatics, and they are all filled to their fullest capacity. These facts are appalling. They show that something is the matter, and that the cause must be found and removed if we shall escape becoming a nation of invalids. One of the greatest causes of insanity is loss of sleep. Thousands now living will go to their graves if they continue to lose sleep as they now do. Prof. Rosse's celebrated Nervine is a combination of the best and most powerful nerve tonics and sedatives known to medical science, and is the only one which has ever been found to be of any real value in the cure of sleeplessness, nervousness, nervous headache, nervous prostration, and all other nervous diseases. It does not contain any opiates or dangerous drugs, and may be taken by the most delicate child or nervous invalid without the slightest fear of any injurious effect

FARMERS' SOCIAL CLUB

The Farmers' Social Club met Friday afternoon, April 14, at A. Fisher's. The attendance was good considering the busy time of the year. There was a goodly number of sisters, most of whom were accompanied by members. The question of road making was prominently discussed and as usual [illegible]

Mr. E. A. Brown opened the discussion. I believe our laws are pretty good and if every district will con[illegible] will be well. The great trouble is before this the battle ground of the many men in the districts do not [illegible] sit around, smoke and tell stories, anything to pass away time. I think our present system good enough if the commissioner of highways will do his duty and see that the several overseers do their duty in the several districts.

Mr. A. G. Hall—I think it is a great mistake in appointing so many pathmasters, as they have too many opinions in regard to road-making. I would use the road making machine to round up the road, then would lay them aside and use wagons and drag gravel, as no permanent roads can be [illegible] until they are graveled.

[illegible] see a change in the regard to road making. I would put the work into the hands of one or three overseers and then let it be optional with men to work or pay their tax in money.

Mr. Griswold—I think the present system is as good as it could be. For I believe every man will work better near his own home or on the road that he daily travels. I believe if we had coarse gravel on some that could be broken, we might obtain results. Mr. Fisher—We put in [illegible] for making good roads and [illegible] [illegible] improvement in the roads.

Mr. Fisher—I am not satisfied with the existing laws. I think there are too many pathmasters, and I believe the responsibility was given to one man in a township and elect the best man for the office. We would have better roads, and then let every man pay his tax in money. What we need is to have the roads rounded up and then thoroughly gravelled, but the trouble is we cannot procure good gravel in many localities.

Mr. Codlington—I would be in favor of the township system [illegible] I would favor a board of overseers [illegible] [illegible] Mr. Hall—[illegible] Mr. Fisher—[illegible] Mr. Codlington—[

It is generally understood that the expenses incurred for the care of Peter Dam of East Milan, recently injured by a horse falling upon him while in an intoxicated condition, will have to be paid by the township of Milan, as he and family are in rather destitute circumstances. We understand the authorities of Milan township express their feelings that their township is in no manner responsible for the affair, but that the affair was caused by Dunlap whiskey and Dunlap backbones, and the expense should come from a place other than from the people of Milan. What course will be taken in the matter we do not know.—Dundee Reporter.

Says the Detroit Tribune: "Montreal has only one, a dog-house, for runaway couples who cannot get married in Canada, and for those others who do not care to bother with the trouble and slight expense of obtaining a license. Rev. Fred Middlebrook, minister in the Grecian Green of the west, has seized over 1 pair of black eyes since his residence in the place. One is low, wants to get married real bad, but has no money; the and his bride has walked six miles and wears cloth willing, as he stated. But the good elder thought the applicant for matrimonial honors was hardly competent to support a family and so refused to tie the knot. From another couple he agreed to take a bag of beans for his services, while others pay part down and get trusted for the balance. He undoubtedly has the largest matrimonial business in Michigan.

AN AMBIGUOUS CORRESPONDENT.

The Herald has correspondents and correspondents. Some appreciate responsibility, and possess sufficient literary talent to "write up" items of news in an attractive style. They can tell a spicy letter, get off an innocent joke occasionally without giving offence, keep out of family quarrels and neighborhood scandal, give all the legitimate news, and thus be a blessing not only to the newspaper they write for, but to the community in which they live. Others place themselves from the easy, without making any effort to verify the truthfulness of the statements they make, and place the community in a turmoil.

In January last, on the recommendation of a personal friend who knew her, we engaged Mrs. Laura G. Gray to correspond for the Herald in the northern part of Franklin. Since then we have received probably six communications from her and every one has given rise to complaint from some source. At first we treated them lightly, attributing them to some personal feeling that might exist between the parties and Mrs. Gray. Of course, it is impossible for an editor to keep posted upon social and neighborhood matters ten miles away. He must rely upon some one for information; and what more proper person to rely upon than a regular correspondent who is known as such in any special neighborhood? As the complaints in regard to these letters have continued, we have lately trimmed them down, and her last communication was excluded entirely, as it contained two ambiguous items which we mistrusted might be very objectionable.

Two weeks ago Mrs. Gray's letter contained an item speaking in very flattering terms of a progressive euchre party which had been held at Mrs. Alonzo Welch's. We have since received a letter from Mrs. Welch, containing the information that no such party was ever held at her house. On the contrary, upon the evening in question, a social was held there to raise funds with which to organize a Sunday School. We thank Mrs. Welch for her frank and fair letter setting forth this affair in detail. The Herald never misrepresents, an occurrence or slanders a person knowingly. We are sometimes imposed upon, and in that event, we are always willing to make reparation at the first opportunity.

From this letter it appears that Mrs. Gray has

1st. Used her position as correspondent of the Herald to impose upon us.

2d. That she has misrepresented and falsified occurrences which she must have known all about.

3d. That she has attempted to use the Herald as an instrument by which to slander her neighbors.

In justice to ourselves we only deem it proper to make this public statement. We state further that the business relations between the Herald and Mrs. Gray have been dissolved. Our Franklin friends and patrons are and we have a good share of them, who like fair play and honest news, will have no cause for any further complaint from this quarter.

Easter Sunday was observed at St. Peter's church more elaborately than usual. A sixty voice service was held which was well attended, and in the afternoon a special Easter exercise was given by the children of the Sunday School. The regular services were held as usual. The church was most beautifully decorated with flowers, and all the services were largely attended and of a most impressive character.

Services next Sunday, May 2d, at the Universalist church as follows: In the morning at 10 o'clock, sermon on the "Twentieth Life Message of Love and Life." Text, "Let not your heart be troubled." All are invited to attend.

The ice cream season was inaugurated at the Herald office by the receipt of a large package of an unknown friend. We know not who it is, but whoever it may be, we thank the donor for the favor, and will try to return the favor when we can.

Mr. Rawson and family expect to move into the house recently occupied by Mr. Gray as soon as they can get it painted and papered. Fuller and Carroll & McNair have contracted to do the job.

Mr. Smith, of the firm of Smith & Lowell, of Ann Arbor, has been in town the past week, delivering and setting up the boilers and engines purchased by Kelly & Lowell.

A FEARFUL VOYAGE.

An Old Lady Blown Across the North Sea in a Boat.

Elizabeth Mouat, the heroine of the almost miraculous trip of the Columbine from the coast of the Shetlands to Norway, arrived in Edinburgh lately and has been interviewed. She lived on one of the Shetland Isles for [illegible] years. She was the daughter of a poor shoemaker. Her first husband was a sailor engaged in the Greenland whale fishery. The last ship on which he was employed was never again heard of after it sailed from port. Her second husband was a fisherman. For [illegible] years she led the simple life of toil so [illegible] industry which is the lot of every Shetland woman, working among the sheep and with the neighbors by day and at the fireside knitting in the evenings. She has long been regarded as bearing a charmed life in the district where she lived. Eighteen years ago she was accidentally shot in the [illegible] of the island by a sportsman who had not observed her lying in the tall [illegible] game. Osgood & Denison have just shipped a load of potatoes which they put in the cellar last fall. Joe says it is worth something to do business.

Four score years and ten have not seen the equal of Ely's Cream Balm as a remedy for catarrh, Colds in the head, and Hay Fever. It works like magic, giving relief at once, and permanent benefit. A thorough treatment cures the worst cases. Apply into the nostrils.

The whole number of guesses was 600. The lowest guess was five eighths of an inch, and the highest was eight hundred feet. The length of the string was 5 feet 5 inches. Dr. A. L. Dingman of Lansing was taking with a carbunkle a few weeks ago, and a report was current in Tecumseh that he was dead. He became much better, but afterwards suffered a relapse in the shape of blood poisoning and his death occurred one week ago to day. Mr. Dingman lived in Tecumseh for several years, and was at one time connected with the Raisin Valley Record. He had many old acquaintances here who will learn of his demise with sincere regret.

The warmer weather often has a depressing and debilitating effect. Hood's Sarsaparilla overcomes all languor and lassitude.

When Hon. Samuel Randall, who presided at this meeting, stepped upon the stage, he was greeted with loud applause. Said he: "We sympathize with all people seeking home rule." We sympathize with Greece, with Mexico, and with the Hungarians, and we should do duty to Ireland with the best we could give." When he finished speaking, the band played "Home, sweet home." The Irish [illegible] received attention from Senators Van Wyck and Stockbridge, and representatives Stephenson, Phelps, McKinley, O'Hara and others.

A large audience went to the Congregational church Wednesday evening to hear Frederick Douglass lecture on his recollections of slavery times. After speaking of the wrongs perpetrated against the slaves before they were freed, the speaker said the negro race never hated the South, "and" he added, "I hope we never will hate it, but we were once hated and we are not too much loved today. Why is it that no one sings today 'Hang Jeff Davis on the sour apple tree?'" He referred to the relations which existed between religion and slavery, and said that it is a pregnant and striking fact that American slavery was never afraid of American religion. They seemed to be on very good terms with each other while the church and the slave pen stood in the same neighborhoods, and the clergy had kept time with the [illegible] music.

Now, [illegible] if the American people would thunder as it should thunder against the wrath to the prophets of God, it would put an end to the scenes of violence that have been witnessed over the South in which men are murdered by the wholesale.

UNDER-NUTRITION.

A State of the System Frequently Produced by Worry.

It should be carefully borne in mind that no food can possibly nourish the body which is not digested, turned to blood, then to the tissues of the body. The digestive powers, like any organ of the body as a whole, may become so debilitated, their vitality so exhausted, so crippled, as not to be able to perform their usual functions, their labors being but partly performed, often not more than one-tenth done. In such a case, of necessity, the system can receive only one-tenth nourishment, as a logical sequitur. Under such circumstances, the doctor, or the uninstructed in such matters, resort to various projects to sharpen the flagging appetite, and all sorts of humbug nostrums, the so-called "tonics" and "invigorators," all of which may excite, stimulate, whip the powers into a seeming activity, producing a false, apparent appetite, the gratification of which adds no real nourishment to the system, but exhausts its vitality, to be followed by debility, aggravated dyspepsia, or, in popular parlance, "nervous prostration," another name for the "piggishness" of an eccentric author. Such victims of the quacks are told that they are starving—practically true—and they while taking their nostrums "may eat what they please," well knowing that there are many who demand just this license, those to whom eating is the great business of life, their most important enjoyment. (Some affect to believe that there is no body, no physical laws, with no digestive powers to be outraged by gluttony.) A very pleasing doctrine to this class, favoring sensualism, but they will find that there is a stomach to assert its rights, soon to torture them with the pangs of dyspepsia.) Such will learn, in due time, that the stomach demands rest, that it can not, will not, toil all of the time, will not long attempt to dispose of the most indigestible foods, will not allow itself to be forced by excitants and "appetizers" at will, but that it will cease to perform its required toils, compelling its oppressor to subsist on a very small allowance, on the little which can be digested under such circumstances, the rest fermenting, decaying in the stomach, causing no little disturbance and suffering. Such will be compelled to learn that the stomach has a given capacity, that it is subject to the general laws of the body, and that to be long nourished the most successfully a moderate amount of food must be taken, that, adapted to the circumstances. They must learn that a small amount of food, thoroughly digested, will better sustain the body than five times the quantity but one-fifth digested, the putrifying mass, unappropriated, causing "blood-poisoning."

It is indeed fortunate that dyspeptics and general invalids can be nourished by the extracts of food, such as do not demand digestion, do not tax the stomach, still affording all needed nourishment, at least for this class. Instead of the fluids, the juices may be expressed, containing their nutrition. The same, is true of the grains, the clear part of a thin gruel, such as is made of oatmeal, etc., containing a good share of nourishment, yet demanding no more labor of the stomach than the disposition of the same quantity of water, the same principle applying to most forms of food, the solids, such articles as milk being an exception, since that must be first changed to a solid, to "curd," as a preparatory step in the digestive process. A part of the nourishment of the day, or all of it, may be taken in this pure liquid state, containing no solids, and in this way so resting the stomach that it may be able to resume its usual duties in due time, waiting till it has a fair share of vitality. One need not fear starvation while thus nourished by liquids, though it is not best too long to suspend the digestive process.—Dr. Hempel, in Golden Rule.

Lesson [illegible] May 9.

SAMARIA. Christ at Sychar. John 4. 7-42. Golden Text. John 4. 42. Now we believe, not because of thy saying: for we have heard himself, and know that this is indeed the Christ, the Saviour of the world.

Jesus was talking with the Samaritan woman at Jacob's well, near Sychar, at the foot of Mt. Gerizim, in Samaria. His disciples returned with food from the city. When they drew near and saw their Master in conversation with a woman they were greatly surprised, and yet none dare question His acts in their approach the woman, for in their errand to the well and leaving her water pot behind her, hurried back to the city to tell the joyful news to her friends, saying, "Is not this the Christ?" At these words a number of the inhabitants quickly started forth to see this wonderful man and themselves to hear His teachings.

In the meantime, Christ refuses the food which His disciples have brought and tells them of that higher sustenance which He obtained from God. He reminds them of the work which lay before them, and of the sustaining power of God at all times. "Swinging His eye across the plain and up the beautiful hillsides He sees the busy sowers scattering their seeds, and in the distance, the crowd from the city coming towards Him. With mind and heart fully aroused, He said, "Say not ye, There are yet four months, and then cometh harvest? behold, I say unto you, lift up your eyes, and look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest." And then He unfolded to them the principle of the spiritual harvest in which they were to engage, and taught them the blessed truth that "One soweth and another reapeth," and yet both do the will of their Master. The people, coming up, gathered round the Savior and listened to His words, and they were so deeply impressed with His teachings that they besought Him to stay with them in their city, and teach them more fully the grand truths of His spiritual kingdom. Two days He remained there, and many believed on His words, because they heard Him themselves.

So the Savior leaves the cold and unbelieving Judea which ought to have received Him but did not, and in the hated Samaria, amidst the unfriendly Samaritans, He finds ready access to the hearts of the people and willing adherents to His cause. So the trying circumstances, His asking for drink of water when tired and thirsty, lead to the most opportune and important results. Hearts are swayed in a way and direction they are taught. Eyes are opened and a work is begun in Sychar which shall spread and grow and have a great influence on thousands of hearts and lives. The fond of centuries between Jews and Samaritans received a fatal blow. He taught a higher, nobler principle, a grander and truer religious truth, and in the Samaritan He prepared the way for a great work among the people of Samaria. Thus we see how the Savior, in the humble, unassuming way, sowed the seed which, in after years, ripened into the wave and grain. He was the Savior of the Samaritan woman, and also of the Samaritan people. Let us learn the lesson of His life, and also of His teachings, and be ready to do our work when the time comes.

HO FOR KANSAS.

MR. EDITOR—As we have arrived at our journey's end for the present at least, I will give you a sketch of our trip. We left Adrian Monday night at 11 30 over the Wabash route to Chicago. The country from Adrian to Bryan is very low and swampy and from Bryan the land is a little more rolling. At Wilburn the land is a little better for farming. Wheat, grass and all kinds of vegetation looks quite thrifty. At Attica Junction the land is very fine, on a black sandy soil.

[illegible] we drove out to look at the new city. At 6 we heard of this new city that the cow kicked over once. We spent a few hours there in purchasing tickets and left on the 1.30 P. M. train over the Wabash route to Kansas City. For some distance after leaving Chicago the country is very poor, when it begins to improve and the farmers look prosperous. The land is quite level and productive, the soil is a rich sandy loam. The farmers were fitting corn ground and planting corn. Their oats are up quite nicely. From Washington to Peoria the country is broken very badly. Wheat and clover looks quite thrifty, the trees look green and every thing is thrifty. Peoria is a very fine large city, here we stopped 20 minutes for supper, leaving at 6.30 P. M. We crossed the Illinois river at Naples at midnight, and crossed the Mississippi at Hannibal at 1.35 Wednesday morning; the sky was clear as crystal and the scenery was fine. Hannibal is a very large city. At 5 A. M. we beheld the city of Moberly, in Missouri, where the country is very rolling. At Huntsville the fruit trees were in full bloom. At Brunswick we crossed the Grand River, wheat is from 6 to 8 inches high and is very fine. We first saw the Missouri river a few miles south of Brunswick, and the country is pretty hard and the timber is small and shrubbery. From Lexter Junction to Kansas City, the land on the north and west of the railroad is very stony and hilly, and on the south and east it is low and level as far as the Missouri river. We crossed the Missouri river at Kansas City, and found it a very muddy stream. We run in Kansas City at 9 35 A. M. and got a lunch at a restaurant. Kansas City is a large lively city, built up on the bluffs of the Missouri river. At 10 40 A. M. we took the train on the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe R. R. for the west. For 30 miles out of Kansas City, the country is very stormy and broken. The city of Lawrence is a beautiful city, the fruit trees were white with blossoms, and the shade trees were dressed in a foliage of green. As we approached Topeka we saw strawberries in blossom, peas, onions three inch high and in fine young nursery of fruit trees. Several places along the line we saw specimen walnut groves, and at Topeka we saw the first cloud of dust. At half past three Wednesday we were at a point where we could see for miles in every direct n and nothing but the rolling prairie in view. We rode higher and higher, which left the distance R ways a beautiful picture of landscape, with here and there a grove, and a little creek and [illegible] on either side of the R. R. [illegible] showing the approaches of prosperity, happiness and comfort. We rolled into the beautiful city of Emporia at 4 [illegible] Emporia is the county seat of Lyon county. The [illegible] the town [illegible] Topeka. Emporia [illegible] thousand inhabitants. [illegible] Eldorado [illegible] Wichita [illegible] Wednesday morning [illegible] Wichita is the county seat of Sedgwick county and has a population of nearly 20,000 and is a beautiful city. The trees are in full bloom and are green with leaves. The streets are wide and kept clean from rubbish etc. with a row of shade trees on either side of the street. We left for Kingman on the morning train Thursday, arriving at noon. After dinner we took a stage for Pratt, a distance of 45 miles, the country is not very good being broken by the river. We arrived at about 6 P. M. and put up at the Central House. Pratt is a lively little place of 500 and is booming right lively. In my next I will give you a discription of the country around here and the price of real estate.

THE GRAB BAG.

[illegible] bundle alighted from a Lake Shore train yesterday and opened wide her eyes at the string of backmen soliciting passengers. Little Will Edney's engaging smile and his reassuring [illegible] immediately won her, and she unhesitatingly seated herself in the hack. The fair passenger and the little [illegible] were driven [illegible] the Palmer House. [illegible] the little [illegible] laughed. [illegible] Twenty-five cents. Why, you ask, at the tender I won't give you a dime. Little Will mounted the hack, and a sweet sad smile stole over his countenance as he put his hand in his pocket where the quarter ought to be. He was a sadder but a wiser man.—Adrian Record.

OXFORD, IND., April 5, '86.

DEAR SIR:—I am one of the first settlers in our county Steuben, Ind. I used to be at your place when the railroad first came to your town and in the summer of 1842 or 3 I brought a load of wheat to your place and sold it for 50 cents per bushel for it and I bought nails to nail on the siding on my barn. I have forgot the price I had to pay for them. Will you please to send me the price of No. 8 nails at that time. and oblige yours.

Virtue always receives its just reward sooner or later, as evidence of the fact we take this clipping from the Jersey City Journal: "At a theatrical entertainment a few weeks ago a young lady with a three story hat sat immediately in front of newspaper man. Noticing that her exaggerated head gear obstructed the journalist's view of the stage, where a temperance lecture or a Scriptural panorama or something was taking place, the young lady, with a sweet smile, removed her hat and placed it in her lap. The newspaper man was profuse in his thanks. The next day he caught a severe cold, contracted pneumonia, and died a week later. When his will was read it was discovered that he had added a codicil giving the young lady who sat in front of him at the theater $2,000."

Editor shivering in his night garments, and peeping over the banisters into the gloom below:—Who's there?

Voice below:—"A burglar."

Editor, with his teeth chattering:—"The night so. Did you shut the door behind you when you came in?"

Editor's Wife:—"Why, Jim, what do you suppose we pay for fuel for, if you will keep your door open?"

Is not enough that I am made the victim of a night's alloy at my office, without having you make a fool of me? If the devil of night and will go out to worry, the back and shut the door.

The burglar, stricken speechless at the retort, left the house and shut the door behind him, leaving the editor to shiver and think [illegible]

Did you ever attempt to empty a pan of wood ashes on a windy morning? We have, and Endeavoring to get to windward of the ash heap we have circled around it, flying our handkerchief and shielding up our hand, trying to get the direction of the wind. We got it at last thought we had, and let the ashes fly. They flew all over us. The wind came from all directions and formed a little whirlwind around the ash pile. It will do it every time. We looked like a jolly miller, barring the expression of our face. The only way to accomplish this difficult feat successfully is to tie a string to the hail and set the pan on the sleeping side of the ash pile, get around the corner of the house and pull the string.

Even an editor has his trials. The good looking editor of the Hanover Times comes in for his share and thus gives vent to his feelings in the Times: "The handsome, talented and virtuous person who has been interviewing our wood pile for some time past, now has some idea of the trials of the country editor in securing subscription wood. Help yourselves, dear friends. If you will call on us, we will help you tote it home."

Mrs. A. Smith, of Addison, met a few of the singers of Tecumseh at P. Sparks' rooms last Friday evening, and a very pleasant musical social was enjoyed by all present. Mrs. Smith is a superior musician, having formerly taught Berard at Olivet College and at Port Huron, Mich. Her maiden name was Nellie Branch. We hope to see Mrs. Smith again, and trust the acquaintance commenced last Friday evening may be continued.

The Kalamazoo Gazette of Saturday says: "Mr. E. J. Smith, formerly of Adrian, and more recently of Jackson, stepped off a Lake Shore train last evening and made his triumphant entry into the city accompanied by an overgrown guitar in a case, a grip sack and what appeared to be a small sized harp or a large sized tom tom under his arm wrapped up in print paper. Mr. Smith is to be city editor of the new paper. The overgrown guitar is expected to do most of the editorial work while Mr. Smith sits on the damp edge of a cloud and twangs the tom tom."

Wait till Philander has found him a regular boarding place and got that guitar tuned up; then you will see the fur fly. The Gazette man had better engage a vacant berth in the asylum at once.

The Norristown Herald is responsible for the story that a western man had applied for a pension on the ground that he was injured by a rebel ram during the war. The facts are that, while a sutler in the army, he was violently butted through a rail fence by an aged but vigorous male sheep, owned by an officer of the confederate army.

The Blissfield Advance says the Hudson editors, of course, stood the best show of carrying off the prizes awarded the raggedest persons at the hard times party, given by our ladies' relief corps. The Advance forgets that it was not a free-for-all contest. An admission fee of 10 cents was charged at the door, which, of course, barred the editors.—Hudson Gazette.

The Knights of Labor will hold a public meeting at Croswell's opera house Wednesday evening, May 12, for the purposes of discussing the principles and aims of the organization. Judge Henry A. Robinson and Hons. Geo. W. Walthew and Herman D. Brandt, and others prominent in the labor movement, will be present and address the meeting. Adrian Record.

The Odd Fellows of Adrian joined their brethern at Hillsdale Monday in a grand celebration of the sixty-seventh anniversary of the establishment of the order. A banquet and ball concluded the program. Two car loads of members attended from Adrian, among the number being John Krapf, aged over 90, who was a member of Wildey lodge No. 1, organized in the city of Baltimore, sixty seven years ago as the pioneer Lodge of Americans. Hudson Post.

The committee on public buildings of the board of supervisors, which is composed of Messrs. Dewey, Warren and Morse, has been in session a couple of days engaged in letting the contracts for the stone walks, grading, etc., around the grounds of the new court house. The contract for grading the grounds was let to Henry Bowen for 22½ and that for the excavations of the steps of the building to E. Harrison & Son, at the following rates: For the walks 22 cents per foot, surface measurement; steps, $1.15 per linear foot for risers, 8½ per surface foot. The stone work is to be of No. 1 Berea stone, and work is to commence at once. Adrian Times.

No exhaust save. A new scene, called "rainbow party," is the latest novelty just now. It is not novel as well as an entertaining occasion. Old bachelors, and young men generally, the forgetful ones at those parties, it seems to illustrate the helplessness of man and also displays in no dim light the advantages of being married. The entertainment consists of companies of awkward maidens who vie with each other in hemming the bottom of the aprons of their fair companions, left unfinished for the occasion, the aprons being of brilliant lines of gorgeous colors, therefore calling it rainbow party. The ladies supply their escort with needle and thread, and at the call of time the fun begins with the efforts of contestants to thread their needles; they are to hem the aprons and the gentleman doing the sewing the quickest and neatest receives a prize. The contest is immensely enjoyed by the ladies present, and is indeed a pretty sight watching the struggles of the clumsy fingered men with their needle and thread at work. The aprons are auctioned off and the proceeds applied to some worthy cause.

THE WHEEL

Todd, Walby and Read represented Adrian last Sunday. Walby's new "Columbia Light Roadster" was greatly admired and he says it behaves as good as it looks.

Lelma Stewart took advantage of a "snap" and bought a Columbia Expert, the best, strongest and most graceful wheel made. We gladly welcome Stewart into the mystic wheeling circle.

Seaton Anderson, after due deliberation became convinced that his wheel was too small; accordingly he disposed of it and immediately ordered through the local agent a larger machine of the same pattern. That is the kind of man he is.

"Get on to it." Away with the horse, away with the buggy. Dr. House is now ready to care for the sick and wounded from atop a Victor Tricycle. Well doctor, how do you do?

Who wants to buy a fifty-four inch Columbia Expert? We know of one for sale at a bargain.

EIGHTH WONDER OF THE WORLD.

"A stranger in New York, standing on the middle span of the great Brooklyn Bridge, views with wonder the beauties of New York harbor. He sees the great cities on each side stretching away for miles to the north, east and west. Beneath his feet he rapidly running river, with scores of large and small steamboats coursing up and down. A large four-masted ship, bound for China, is passing under the great bridge in charge of a tugboat on its way to the sea, all hands are busy on deck, and as she passes from under the Bridge the sailors give a shout. If this ship arrives out safely and returns to this port it will be nearly a year before she leaves the round trip.

Looking down the bay we see a great steamer going through the Narrows, bound in an opposite direction. Great black clouds of smoke issuing from her funnel. We know that the stokers away down in the boiler room are replenishing the fires that are furnish the motive power for the great ship and must be attended to constantly for the LONG OCEAN DAYS.

Apparently at our feet, but over a mile away, the Governor's island and its picturesque fresh green and picturesque. The old fort, with cannon on top large enough for a small sized crowd to stand in the cannon balls piled in pyramids, the officers' houses and well kept lawn reminded one of a fine show bird pasteboard box that he used when a child.

As we turn right we see a [illegible] structure on an island [illegible] Nut Island and a half mile. It is [illegible] great as the Bedloe's Island statue and larger on this beautiful spring day. The large structure [illegible] for hard to [illegible] Liberty enlightening the world, which [illegible] the [illegible] which [illegible] the [illegible] of the [illegible] and welcome to all who enter the [illegible] from oppressed and over crowded Europe to make their home with us.

The committee in charge of the construction of this great pedestal are nearly through with their labors. And all who desire a memento, in the form of a miniature statuette of this great work, with a certificate of subscription from the committee to show to their children's children that they helped build the great pedestal, should subscribe at once.

The statuette is a work of art, and has found a place in thousands of homes. Statuettes delivered by mail or express on receipt of subscription price, one dollar, five dollars and ten dollars each. All remittances should be addressed to Richard Butler, Secretary, American Committee of the Statue of Liberty, 31 Mercer Street, New York.

ABOUT ARSON.

That About Monomaniacs on Incendiarism.

"A strange thing about the crime of arson is, that incendiaries seem to be wholly ignorant of the natural laws of [illegible]

"They do not observe the commonest scientific principles in kindling fires. I remember one case where a man tore off a patch of lath and plaster in his kitchen, piled up a lot of dry kindling wood against the hole, and set fire to it. [illegible] The fire burned a [illegible] and scorched the roof. The [illegible] fire and the [illegible] remained unburned. After arresting, we found the rags saturated with kerosene and carried off half a mile from the point where the fire started. Coal oil is used in nearly all cases of arson, and the smell of it always indicates the cause [illegible]

A [illegible] thing is that it is [illegible] to convict a person who commits arson. In the first case I could tell you all the furniture had been removed, the man's little child had been taken to the house of a relative, and he himself had gone to the same place shortly before the fire was discovered. He proved an alibi and was acquitted. It always takes considerable time for the fire to make its appearance, and in the meantime the incendiary is getting as far away from the house as possible. We have to rely on circumstantial evidence, and somehow the jurors nearly always let the guilty man go.

"[illegible] fires are most frequent when times are hardest. Right after New Year's, when trade is dull, they increase in number. The time of the year has no influence on their frequency.

"Most of the incendiarism is committed by men who are in failing circumstances. They burn their property for the insurance that is on it. Insurance companies are regarded as legitimate prey by men in financial straits.

"Then there is a large number of persons who seem to have no motive for committing arson—men who are monomaniacs on the subject of incendiarism. I recollect one well-to-do citizen who four times set fire to the flat he owned and in which he lived. He was not heavily insured—in fact, his insurance was light. He built a fire in his coal-bin, then in a closet, again in a chute between his kitchen and laundry, and, lastly, in some blankets that had been hung up to dry. His family was not at home, and he sent the girl away from home each time to prevent accidents.

"Another man saturated a lot of linen cloths with linseed oil, rolled them up tightly, and stowed them away in a pile by near a lot of combustible material. He had no use for the oil where the stuff was found, and he had evidently counted on spontaneous combustion doing the work. A fire started in the building from some other cause and the saturated cloths were discovered afterward. No motive could be discovered for the crime. These monomaniacs [illegible] born other people's [illegible] Mongrels have their own [illegible]

[illegible] I say that from fifteen to [illegible] of the fires are incendiary. Yet the difficulty of getting the proof makes it next to impossible to get at the authors of them. These times have not increased in number to any extent, and if the times should become desperate I think they would decrease.—Chicago News.

SILENT SOUNDS.

You did not hear it? I told me
The sweet new spring-time's ceaseless joy
And float up, notes the earth and sky
With tender tone.
You did not hear the restless beat
Upon the door of cloud and tree
Of those who long
A number, Kindness strike at night,
I hear the patter, soft and quick,
And see in the gloom of winter, snow white,
About my door.
And in my silent, lone home
The voice that from my world was gone
That off are comforting as sunshine
Forever more.

I hear, for ever my world,
My thirsty soul
Soft as the ripple of the stream,
[illegible]
How strange it seems that I should
And lie, and there.

Ah, no; come not without his call
You catch no sight, or right footfall;
I am his mother, that is all;
And He who said
"I will not leave thee desolate"
He somehow, closed the portals of late
And with at O'Clock, I am
Where I do pay dead.

THE SWEDISH DIET.

Opening It With Impressive Royal Ceremonies.

The Diet answers to the American Congress, being composed of two Chambers. The second Chamber has two hundred and fifty members, elected every two years, while the first Chamber has one hundred and fifty, elected every four years. In appearance they resemble very much any deliberative body selected from the mass of the people. Many of them have the air of well-to-do business men or farmers, while here and there you can pick out a professional man from the greater ease in his bearing and his readiness in debate. Altogether, however, they are a solid, substantial and worthy-looking body of men. The opening of the Diet, or Riksdag, as it is called in Swedish, is always an important event, and is attended with great ceremony, as it is the one occasion of the year in which the King assumes the crown and scepter, and, clad in his kingly robes, ascends the silver throne and personally delivers the opening address. One also sees, provided he be fortunate enough to be invited to be present, all that is ceremonial and impressive in a royal court. In addition to the King and his family, the opening ceremonies are attended by the state Ministers, all the principal officers of the palace, the leading officers of the army and navy, the chamberlains, attendants, gentlemen-in-waiting and the diplomatic corps. Each individual man is in uniform, gay in brilliant colors and trappings, and many of them having their breasts covered with decorations earned for meritorious services in their country's interest. The ceremony always takes place in the grand hall of the palace, a room built expressly for the purpose, which, upon the occasion of yesterday, was filled with as brilliant a gathering of ladies and gentlemen as a most formal and ceremonious court could bring together. There was nothing simple about it, but, upon the contrary, it was as imposing and impressive as human display could make it, presenting a spectacle at once novel and interesting.

At eleven o'clock in the morning the two Chambers attended church in a body, and upon the conclusion of divine service repaired to the hall, where they awaited the coming of the King. My invitation required me to be present at twelve o'clock, and knowing that an invitation from a King means a command, I was prompt in my attendance, although it was a full half hour before the trumpets sounded the approach of his Majesty, and we repaired to the gallery on the hall reserved for outsiders in anticipation. The evidences of the coming event were to be seen by the great crowds of people on the streets leading to the palace, and in and about the court. I have often been impressed with the orderly conduct of a Swedish crowd. They are a quiet, well-behaved and orderly people, making no sign of approval or disapproval, but silently satisfying their inordinate curiosity by silently standing and looking at what may be seen. If there is any enthusiasm it is all pent up and never permitted to uncork itself after the fashion of Americans.

The [illegible] from the court to the room in which I was received is a broad, winding one, and on this occasion contained two rows of uniformed guards, with crested helmets, at a present arms. Through this line of soldiery, to [illegible] I passed to a spacious reception room adjoining the great hall. In these rooms were, stationed the grandees, chamberlains, in brilliant costume, [illegible] who waited the approach of the royal procession, and preceded it to the hall. Every order is by rank and precedent, and as every one knows his or her place, there is no confusion or scrambling for vantage places. The hall is about sixty by two hundred feet, with a small gallery on either side. It displays a very commendable economy in its interior. It is strictly plain and unpretentious. Aside from two heroic statues in marble, one of Gustavus Adolphus and one of Gustavus III, there are no works of art to relieve the tarrenness of its white walls, without it is the frieze, which is in plaster bas relief. The throne stands at one end on a dais raised four steps from the level of the floor, and above is suspended a canopy of faded green velvet, plentifully adorned with crowns in gold. The floor and steps of the dais were covered with black tapestry, also besprinkled with crowns in yellow. An open space some forty feet square, immediately in front of the throne, was enclosed by a small railing, and this space was covered with a rich [illegible] The members sat in the auditorium on raised seats, [illegible] Chamber to the right and the second to the left of the large aisle running from the open space to the rear of the room. In the gallery opposite to the the Crown Princess and the ladies of the court. She is a most gracious and amiable woman, greatly endeared to all classes for the extreme sweetness and benignity of her disposition. As each member of the court passed into the hall and took his appointed place, he paused for an instant, looked up at the Princess, and [illegible] a gentle inclination of the head. All of the Ministers, officers, etc., had moved in a detachment of guards known as Charles XII's marines, marched on and were placed in the aisle spoken of above. They wore [illegible] uniforms, [illegible] with yellow trimmed [illegible] and gauntlet gloves of the same saffron hue. Following these came the pages, [illegible] headed, dressed in green silk uniforms, with white stockings, clasped by a blue ribbon at the knee. Two heralds came next, bearing maces, followed by the attendants on Prince Eugenie, the youngest son, who led the royal procession. The Prince wore around his shoulders a long robe of blue velvet, ornamented with crowns, and a crown upon his head. His three elder brothers came next in order, wearing similar mantles, the tails of which were borne by the chamberlains, the Crown Prince being distinguished by having two, while but one performed this office for the other princes. They took their seats on either side of the throne and as soon as they were seated the grand master of ceremonies, with his mace, came in, followed by the King and his attendants. His Majesty wore a scarlet velvet robe trimmed with ermine, with a large ermine collar about his shoulders; upon his head was a crown set in brilliants, rubies and sapphires, while in his right hand he carried a scepter, and in his left a roll of manuscript. Three chamberlains bore up his robe while others accompanied him on either side. As soon as he had taken his seat upon the throne the mace-bearer struck the floor once, turned to the King, made a low bow, when his Majesty without further formality unfolded his manuscript and commenced to read his address. The King has a magnificent voice, and brought some little dramatic effect into his reading, which, from the opening sentence of "Good Gentlemen and Swedish men," to its close was listened to with marked attention. The reading did not occupy more than fifteen minutes, after which the respective presidents of the two Chambers made brief responses, the grand master of ceremonies again saluted the King, turned to the members of the Diet, struck the floor with his mace, and the ceremony was at an end. The order of departure was the same as observed in entering the hall—each person again saluting the King and Crown Princess.

The personal appearance of the King adds very much to the dignity of this very formal ceremony. In stature he is six feet two inches, well proportioned, and bears himself with an ease and grace, which, while in some degree natural, has been supplemented by his long military training. It was very noticeable that in all this brilliant gathering of men who have passed their lives in the atmosphere of the court, he was by far the most gracious and kingly in his presence of them all. I can make no comparisons, but I involuntarily recalled the magnificent manner of Edwin Forrest as the only thing approaching the real scene being enacted under my eyes. All in all it was a spectacle never to be forgotten. It was the pomp and circumstance of royalty giving expression to its imposing character on the one hand, and an exhibition of loyal adherence to the affairs of the country on the other. A generous, courteous and intelligent people, they are fortunate in having a King thoroughly in sympathy with their national aspirations.—Indianapolis Journal.

HE HIT THE CASE.

A Kind Gentleman Whose Writing Proved Him to Be a Married Man.

A stranger was yesterday writing a letter at the desk in the corridor of the post-office when a woman with a postal card in one hand and the other tied up in a handkerchief came walking up and eyed him in a wistful manner.

"All you want to write a card, madam," he observed.

"I don't believe I can, sir. I have a letter from my husband, who is in Cincinnati, and I want to let him know I got it."

"I see. Give me the card. His name is——"

"Peter Jones, sir."

"Exactly. Peter Jones, Esq., Cincinnati, O. Now then."

He turned the card over and rapidly wrote:

"Mr. Jones—Your letter, the first for three weeks, is at hand, and the two dollar bill has been noted. I am held sick, out of wood and provisions, and owed for living to the landlord. Either come home and attend to business or change your name to Nell Good and never dare to address me again. I am, sir, Cool patient, but determined wife."

He read it to her in a well-modulated voice, and she held up her well hand and exclaimed:

"Oh! thanks!" That's beautiful. Why, I couldn't have done so well in a week. You must surely be a married man yourself."

—Once a shepherd, caught out upon the hills by night, built a fire under the lee of a pile of stones that he had tossed together. The heat split some of the stones, and in the morning the man saw within one of the cracks a piece of shining silver ore. That happened in Peru, and thus was discovered the mines of the Cerro de Pasco, which have yielded four hundred million dollars.—Boston Budget.

WHITTLING YANKEES.

A Studio Where Many Statues of Native Americans Are Made.

In Canal street, between the Bowery and Broadway, there is a low, dingy-[illegible] warm weather, is always swung open. The interior, as seen through that opening, suggests a masquerade ball. Figures [illegible] fantastic costume are crowded along the walls, [illegible] along the [illegible] floor. [illegible] the little downy [illegible] may be seen a whiskered colonial young lady, with utterly [illegible] arms, admiring expanse of [illegible], and attired in raiment which [illegible] a tolerably variety of brilliant [illegible] comparison [illegible] gorgeous attire [illegible] ment. The variety of costume among these people is only equalled by the variety of emotions which seem to be inspiring them. Some are in a boastful rage, with arms uplifted [illegible] while others are [illegible] or chipper, but the majority seem to be either cheerfully or sadly [illegible]. They fill nearly all the standing space in the little room, and even swarm out upon the sidewalk, where people gather to stare at them curiously from time to time.

Though nearly all these queer specimens differ in complexion and costume, they all had a common origin, in the butt ends of ships' masts, and their common mission in life is to stand in front of shops and perpetually offer bogus cigars to passing multitudes. A jolly young gentleman was in an inner room of this tobacco image menagerie, and whistled softly as he with gentle touches put a perfect blaze of crimson blushes upon the cheeks of a young lady who was brazenly flirting and smoking a cigarette as she did it.

"The image business in New York," he said, "is not quite what it was a few years ago, because we have lost old Daddy Brooks. Ah, old Daddy was the boss carver, and he taught about all the carvers we have here. That's why we call him Daddy. He used to be down in West Broadway somewhere. Now he is in Chicago, and he took a lot of the boys out with him—that is, he took three or four. There never was over a dozen carvers here in New York at one time. There are not over six here now. They are all Yankees. The foreigners don't catch on, somehow, but the Yankees take to chopping out wooden images just as they do to whittling a pine shingle.

"We go down to the ship yards and buy the butt ends of masts. Some are six or seven feet long, and some not over two or three, and we make big figures or little figures accordingly. Out of a seven foot stick you can get a good forty dollar figure. We take the stick out in that back room first, where we have a dirt floor. Here we hew them into something like a general outline. Then we hoist them upstairs, where we chip them down until we get to the fine touches and sand paper, then they come down to me and I fix them out with a stunning coat of colors on their wooden clothes, put them on rollers and trundle them out among the rest of the gang out there, where they wait until they make a mash and are carried away. I also take battered and weather-stained figures and put on an eye here or a nose there, or paint a third eye into life again, rig them out in a brand new suit of clothes, and there they are. I get anywhere from ten dollars to forty dollars for the images—rarely ever forty dollars. There are only two or three other shops, and we send images all over the country.

"Oh, of course styles change, but the genuine old roving redskin with a tad eye and an ugly looking tomahawk in his hand is the stand-by—that is, in the majority of the Eastern and Middle States. When you get way out West there is quite a run of just such dash Bowery girls as I am painting up here now. Dudes had quite a go for a while. I have got fully twenty-five dudes planted around in Brooklyn and New York even now, though dudes are on the wane, and Pucks, that were so popular a few years ago, are now so much dead wood on your hands. The Scotchman has gone for good, I guess, though I hear he is still all the go over in England. But the plain old war whoop savage of the plains is the only chap you can bank on as steadily trustworthy. Indian maidens do very well, but not so well as the fine old gore-drinking warriors with feathers and meat axes.

"We prefer to sell direct to retail dealers, though the big wholesale men try to buy of us quite often. But, you see, they want to give away the images as premiums to heavy customers, and so they want to get them for next to nothing.

"It takes about three days for a carver to make a fine big image, and he makes four dollars to five dollars a day at it, according to the quality of his work.—N. Y. Sun.

—General George H. Sheridan, now of New York, was, once Adjutant-General of Louisiana. RAISIN VALLEY SEMINARY.

The botany class are busy analyzing flowers. Some have nearly one hundred classified and expect to more than double the number before the term closes.

Quoits and croquet seem to be the chief games at present. A change in amusements comes quite regularly. The question now is, "what next?"

The Misses Stanley are expected home from the west in time to attend commencement.

At a recent meeting of the board of directors of the Raisin Valley Library Association the treasurer was instructed to purchase the second volume of Jas. G. Blaine's work.

Mr. Harkness and Mr. Hathaway recently purchased fifty-five grape vines which were set out near the building for the use of the students. It is expected that in three or four years they will afford enough grapes for all.

Miss Elsie M. Hadley has been engaged as third teacher for the next year. The lady takes a degree of B. S. this year at Earlham college, where she has been fitting herself for teaching.

Extensive preparations are being made to make the Alumni meeting a complete success. A full program will be prepared and published in all the county papers. Arrangements are now well under way. Each alumnus will have a printed program sent him at least a month before the meeting. We hope to see a large gathering.

The five year reunion of students who were here during the administration of Prof. Satterthwaite will be held during the coming summer. It is desired to have as many here as possible, and in order to do so every one who hears of the reunion should send his or her address to M. Graves, Lenawee Junction, corresponding secretary. Also send the address of their friends who were students, and in due time an invitation and program will be sent.

On Tuesday, May 4th, occurred the twenty-first birthday of C. L. Greenleaf. It was also the birthday of Mrs. Lewis Onsted. Mrs. Onsted wished to give Laverne a surprise party, and accordingly invited a number of friends—more than a hundred—who gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Greenleaf in the evening. Some surprise was manifested because Rev. John Morey was present, but that was easily accounted for, when about ten o'clock his services were required to say the few words that made C. L. Greenleaf and Miss Lizzie Reece man and wife. After the usual congratulations, supper was served and those present continued to enjoy themselves till a late hour, when the party broke up and we wended our way homeward feeling that it was good for us to have been there, and wishing the young couple a long and happy life.

On Wednesday, May 5th, Rev. Mr. Morey again said the words that formed another life partnership. This time it was at the home of S. G. Aten, and the happy couple were Herbert Gallup and Miss Minnie Aten. About eighty-five guests were present. The ceremony was performed in the shade of an evergreen in the front yard, at 1 o'clock P. M. The wedding presents were numerous and useful and were valued at more than fifty dollars.

SPRINGVILLE SNUFF.

Farmers are busy planting and preparing for the same.

There probably is not another place of the size of Springville, that can afford a postoffice building. M. A. Ladd, our newly appointed P. M. is erecting the same on the corner of his lot.

Considerable talk about a hotel and saloon at Onsted, and what the Town Board would do in regard to bonds. We are unprepared to say, not having talked with any of the members of the board about the matter, but hardly think the members located in this vicinity will be in favor of helping the business interests of Onsted at the expense of being called a whisky board and injuring the trade of their own village.

The Board of Review, meets next Tuesday, the 18th.

PRATT, KANSAS.

Pratt is a place of just two years [illegible] 300 inhabitants. The country for three and four miles around is quite badly broken with river breaks; the land is a gravelly, sandy loam, not the best for farming, but back north and west it is very fine and of a good farming quality. Real estate is on the boom and changing hands very rapidly. The Wishita and Western railroad company have surveyed a line through Pratt and work will soon be begun. Pratt has the following business places, 5 livery and sale stables, 3 agricultural stores, 4 hotels, 3 restaurant and bakery's, 4 drug stores, 2 banks, 15 land and loan offices, 2 dry-good stores, 1 millinery shop, 2 meat markets, 2 barber shops, 3 dealers in boots and shoes, 2 printing offices, 2 furniture stores, 2 harness shops, 1 clothing house, 3 law offices, 1 dentist, 1 laundry, 2 feed, flour and coal stores, 5 doctors, 5 general stores, 3 hardware 4 blacksmith shops, 2 wagon shops, 1 1 cent store, 1 church and a fine two story school house and 2 lumber yards.

The weather is rather of a soft nature; the wells range from 20 to 80 ft deep. The buildings are small and mostly one-story, and not very well made; carpenters get from $1.50 to $2.50 per day; masons get from $2.00 to $3.50 and board themselves. Board runs from $4.00 to $5.00 per week. Groceries are about the same as they are east. There are a great many boarders and lodging is hard to be got. Rent is very high, a house with but two rooms rents very readily for $10 per month. The Almo Hotel rents for $1,400 a year. There is no saloon and no place where drink can be got. The place is settled by smart, enthusiastic men from all part of the United States. The agricultural business is a lively business, and one firm has sold over fifty binders already this season.

The weather is about the same here now as it is East, only a little more windy and cooler nights. Kansas is like all other states it has its good qualities and its bad ones, and we think a person that has a home even if it is ever so humble, they had better not give up the old one for the new. Kansas is no more of a paradise than old Michigan, with her cold winters and hot summers.

Farming is done very poorly here. A Michigan farmer would sue for damages if a man would do as poor job of plowing as I have seen here. Oats are mostly sown and corn is being planted as fast as the ground is plowed. They use the large horse plantler or plunging. Wheat around here looks very poor; they lay it to the hard winter. Farmers in the east think their cattle winter poorly, but I have seen hundreds of young cattle here, skin poor; pasture here is very late in starting this season.

One great failure among the farmers is they plant more than they can take care of, and winter more stock than they have feed for during the winter. There are acres of land that have never been broken and is full of buffalo wallows and sand draws. I have counted as high as 15 prairie fires in one evening. As my time is occupied I cannot investigate very extensively, but in the near future I will give you the prices of the different products and groceries, etc.

Chas. Lafler and Clarence Baker arrived in the city safe and sound Friday night and are taking in the scenery of the west. J. D. A.

LAKE RIDGE LACONICS.

The oldest inhabitant says this is the nicest spring he ever saw.

Fruit trees are all in bloom, to the merest twig. Wheat is not in a very good stand, but is growing finely. Oats, peas and early potatoes are up, likewise early garden sass.

G. V. Osgood and M. Karcher each planted a field to corn last week.

Dogs killed three sheep and mangled several others for Jas. Clarkson last Tuesday night. One of the dogs were killed.

Bowen & Slayton are buying and baling the surplus hay in this vicinity. The lucky ones are J. Steel, J. Wonderly, F. E. Morrell, H. A. Hand and Joe Daykin.

Sid. Masten's breeding sow had 20 pigs. He called it swarming.

Burglars tried to put in their work at Jas. Clarkson's one night last week. They procured a ladder at the barn and succeeded in opening the blinds to an upper window when Mrs. C. overheard them and called the hired men, who got out in time to hear the burglars scampering south.

S. B. Durfey, mate of steamer Arizona, had his foot badly jammed. Thomas' Eclectric Oil cured it. Nothing equal to it for a quick pain reliever.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[illegible] WASHINGTON, May 1, 1886.

While the country is shocked by the news of the bloody strikes in different western cities, all is quiet along the Potomac. Washington is indeed a quiet city considering that it is itself the scene of a strike. There are to be seen on the streets knots of men whose bearing and dress stamp them as workingmen, and the fact that they are so assembled indicates that they are out of employment. This is the only evidence that they are on a strike. The labor troubles here seem to have developed into a stubborn lockout, and it is already becoming a matter of doubt whether or not work will be fully resumed again this season.

The proceedings of the week in Congress have not been so interesting in character as usual, or perhaps I should say that events in Congressional committee rooms have been more interesting than those in the House and Senate. There was a little sensation in the House Judiciary Committee room while the Anti-Polygamy bill was being considered. Judge Baskin who is representing the Gentiles of Utah in advocacy of the bill, is a remarkably impressive old gentleman. It was through his efforts that the Mountain Meadow massacre of settlers was traced to the perpetrators twenty years after its occurrence, and his experiences in Utah have been varied and startling. He read to the committee the affidavit of a young English woman who stated that she had been converted to Mormonism by her lover, who came to this country and returned to England as a Mormon missionary finally bringing her back here with him. After entering the Mormon church and marrying according to the Mormon mode she discovered that her marriage was a polygamous one. Upon this discovery she made revelations and gave descriptions that were revolting in character. At the conclusion of his remarks, the judge pointed to a handsome young woman sitting in the room beside Miss Kate Field, and announced that she was the victim to whom he alluded, and that she was ready to undergo cross examination and verify the statements.

After ten day's discussion the Senate passed the Post Office Appropriation bill, together with the amendment appropriating $800,000 for subsidies to American vessels for carrying the mails. Senator Plumb, of Kan., referring to the opposition of the southern Senators to the subsidy amendment, took occasion to remark that the south was behind the times. It responded, he said, to the wishes and principles inculcated by Calhoun, enforced by Taney and represented to-day by Jefferson Davis.

Senator Morgan of Alabama, here interposed to comment upon the unfairness of this class of argument. He complained that it was made at so late a stage of the debate that the southern men could have no opportunity to reply to it. As for himself, every name mentioned by the Senator from Kansas, was consecrated in his memory as the name of an honorable and great man. He hoped the state of Kansas might sometime produce such a character as Mr. Calhoun, or Mr. Taney, or Mr. Davis. Mr. Plumb answered that the south was to-day taking up the song where it left off in 1861, and he criticised the course of Senators who would ask for millions to improve the Mississippi for commerce but were not willing to vote anything to develop commerce from the mouth of the Mississippi to other lands.

Certain society circles have been much interested in an event which has just taken place in connection with the family of Col. Jerome Bonaparte, who lives in this city, and who is a great nephew, you may remember, of the 1st. Napoleon. On Wednesday Col. Bonaparte's step-daughter Miss Edgar, aged twenty, who took the white veil a year ago, took the black veil and the perpetual vows of a nun—poverty, chastity and obedience. She will be known in her religion as Sister Mary de Sales. The young girl's action was a surprise to many. Not only was she much admired in fashionable circles, but her surroundings have been most attractive, and her home on K street is one of the handsomest in the city. She never had any fondness for society, however, and since she left school has been disposed to be a recluse in her elegant abode.

THE LABOR PROBLEM.

I am asked to write on the labor problem from the standpoint of the workingman. I am the more willing [illegible] I am convinced that the security of industrial peace rests with us [illegible] together with the oft repeated statement, that our labor troubles have been imported with our foreign population and have no permanent place in this country. Have received many [illegible] to explain exactly what they can not see the reasonableness of the [illegible]

[illegible]

To this article I wish to call, again, attention to the condition of things as they exist [illegible] workers. Here may this natural man upon investigation will admit that, considering the cost of living, wages are very low. In any averaging of wages the [illegible] salaries of superintendents and foremen, increase the average and [illegible] as to what the majority of workingmen actually receive. In 1880 the 2,732,408 workmen engaged in manufacturing industries in the United States averaged $346 per year, less than a dollar a day, while the 5,000,000 agricultural laborers averaged but $284. Since then the wages of ordinary labor has decreased from seven to ten per cent. In 1885 the Bureau of Labor Statistics of Illinois, after an exhaustive canvass of the State, reported that of those having steady employment less than fifty per cent were able to earn enough to support their families and were obliged to call in the assistance of their women and children. In 1884 the Illinois Bureau of Labor stated that there were 25,000 coal miners in the State earning an average of $381 per year, while their average family expenses were $439. To workingmen the labor question is the life question, and the ability to get work and to get enough for his work to sustain him and those dependent upon him, is not a political or social or an individual life question. Hence the intensity of the agitation and the desperate methods sometimes resorted to by them. The relation of wages to the cost of living is important. In Germany Oetingen and Mayr have calculated the increase of crime that will result from a given increase in the price of bread, unless accompanied by a corresponding increase in wages. Carroll D. Wright, in the Massachusetts Labor Bureau, showed that between 1875 and 1885, while wages had increased six per cent, the cost of living increased twenty-one per cent during the same period. In 1886 the Chicago Trades and Labor Assembly reported that between 1880 and 1885, while wages had increased ten per cent in the skilled industries, rents and the necessities of life had increased twenty-seven per cent. The average wages of the great mass of wage-earners, taken collectively, is 85 cents per day. A large proportion of those are heads of families. It costs the State of Illinois 56 cents per day to support its paupers and defective classes. The State buys by the whole, saves by cooking in large quantities and congregating hundreds in one building, economizes fuel, light and rent, and yet the per capita cost of supporting one pauper is nearly as much as the vast majority of workingmen have upon which to support a family. I do not exaggerate this.

A Decatur merchant had a lady customer who called for a cheap cloak, remarking that her husband worked for 90 cents per day and there were eight in the family, so that she must have a very cheap cloak or none. In a sermon upon the present strike in the Southwest, Rev. E. F. Fales, of Palestine, Texas, said that his deacons and most of his members were among the strikers, and that they got, but 90 cents per day, and did not have work all the time at that. Personally I know that seventy-five per cent of the so-called common laborers of Decatur do not average one dollar per day, while the city pays 66 cents per day for boarding its prisoners. Many a man bears with his entire family upon an average of less than $45. The report of the Illinois Bureau of Labor says: "The present amount of wages annually paid does not give the wage worker comfortable means of support, and as a result we have the system of child labor, and this can hardly be prevented until the head of the family, by his own exertion, can earn an adequate support."

But we need not go to foreign countries for this, we have it at home. Has the profit-taker of industry decreased with wages? Not at all. Between 1875 and 1885 the wealth of the country increased from $[illegible] to $[illegible], or nearly 100 per cent. During the same decade wages decreased twenty-five per cent. The wage workers see their employers rolling in luxury and wealth upon the difference between what wages are and what they ought to be, and they are discontented and even turbulent. They see that since 1867 wages have decreased 25 per cent, while the salaries of all public officials, National, State, municipal, as well as salaries of superintendents, have increased 100 per cent during the same period. They see railroads built and equipped by sale of public lands and local county bonds, then [illegible] who use them to extort toll from shippers while crushing their employes to the very earth. Great combinations of manufacturers, using large capital, make it impossible for small manufacturers to succeed, and hence the possibility of a laborer eventually becoming his own employer grows less each year. It is now almost impossible to obtain employment anywhere at any price. There are now 31 men for every day's work to be performed. Hon. Carroll D. Wright, of the National Labor Bureau, answered now is [illegible] now in press, that there are 1,000,000 men idle in the United States. This estimate is far short of the facts. The Knights of Labor, spreading over the entire country, with every facility for ascertaining information, report 2,500,000 men idle and semi-occasionally employed, or, in other words, seeking employment. With such a pressure upon the labor market, the tendency of wages must be constantly, and necessarily, downward. Notwithstanding this Mr. Gould stated a few weeks ago that he had expended $100,000 per year in assisting foreign immigration, and such is the combination of capitalistic corporations that the entire fare for passengers from Stockholm, Sweden, to Decatur, Ill., is $15, while a ticket from here to Stockholm is $68. Not long ago I saw a flaming advertisement of the glorious opportunities for employment in a Western city. Investigation revealed the fact that the object was to fill the city with idle men, in order to prevent a strike that was expected to follow a proposed reduction of wages from $1.25 to $1.00 per day. This concerted action to overstock the labor market is a source of great concern to workingmen, who realize that under such conditions, under the competitive wage system, the iron law of wages is that they tend inevitably to the point of least possible subsistence. As single men can live on less than a man of family, they will work for less, thus displacing heads of families. Women and children displace men; Chinese, Huns and Poles, who, through centuries of oppression, have learned to subsist on almost nothing, eventually displace even our women and children. Since 1880 our population has increased less than 100 per cent; while pauperism has increased 300 per cent. That the army of paupers is being recruited by mechanics who can no longer live on the wages received, we do not have to read the reports of the Indiana Bureau of Statistics to learn, for it is everywhere, to be seen; and even those who do not find pauperism staring in their own face tremble at the future of their children.

In this article I have only portrayed the situation as viewed by those whose interests are most seriously affected; the men whose labor is their life and the lives of those they love. In another paper I wish to present some of the remedies that have been proposed, and the success of some attempts at a solution of the problem.

A GREAT DISCOVERY:

Apparently Harmless Symptoms Prove to be a Mine of Danger.

Some Scientific Facts Which Are Arousing the Community.

The True Source of Heart Disease and Apoplexy Made Public.

A Terrible Danger That Can be Readily Avoided.

There is no fact now more certain than that sudden deaths are not caused by heart disease, apoplexy or paralysis but by other infirmities of which death is only the final stage. And physicians and scientists all agree that rheumatism in some one of its many forms is the cause which has stood in the background so long and caused so much misery. Any man, woman or child troubled with the slightest muscular rheumatism is in danger and a danger from which instant escape is imperative. A man, well known in this community, awoke one morning with a feeling of pain in his muscles. He took a cold bath, thinking the reaction would drive the pain from his system. It did drive it from his limbs but went to his heart, and before night he was dead. This is only one of many similar cases. They all show the necessity of driving rheumatism, which is a blood disease, out of the blood, and for this purpose no modern discovery has ever equalled Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup. Mr. C. D. Denio, of Jackson, Mich., who was paralyzed on one side was completely cured by its use, and believes he would have been in his grave to-day if he had not fortunately learned of and taken this great remedy. Should any one who reads these lines be afflicted even in a slight degree by any rheumatic trouble, we would earnestly warn them against a delay which may prove fatal.

—The New York County Medical Society was recently treated to an able paper on effects of summer heat upon the public health, by Dr. Stephen Smith. The remedy nearest at hand, he said, was tree-planting. Vegetation not only absorbs carbonic acid gas and malaria from the air, but gives back oxygen and cooling moisture. An acre of grass throws off 6,400 quarts of water in twenty-four hours, but trees are even more effective. The great Washington elm at Cambridge produces a crop of 7,000,000 leaves, equal to five acres of vegetation. The shade of a tree not only arrests the direct heat of the sun, but actually cools the air beneath it.—N. Y. Tribune.

Story of a Spotted Deer.

Two young ladies were examining the animals in Central Park, New York, last Sunday.

"O, what a beautiful spotted deer!"

The other woman bowed her head and wept.

"Why, what is the matter with you now."

"You don't know how it hurts my feelings to have you talk about spotted deer. I once had a spotted dear."

"You had?"

"Yes; my dear was a street car conductor and we were going to get married, but the company spotted him and my dear had to resign his position, and ever since I have had to sigh whenever I hear anybody talking about spotted deer."—N. Y. Telegram.

HOW SHE GOT IN.

Novel Midnight Adventure.

It is often a neat little scheme put up by deep wives whose husbands stay out later at night than is deemed proper, to so contrive matters that when they return that they will ever after stay at home. Sometimes it is successful. More often it is not. Generally either the man or the woman gains wisdom. The story of a similar experience now in progress upon two lovely people of the Hub is [illegible]

[illegible] The husband and wife, both of whom are highly esteemed, were guests to some of the festivities of the season. The gentleman, who is a prominent educationalist and financier, was lionized, and so the invitation was declined for him and accepted for the lady. About ten o'clock the husband and Mrs. E. said good-night to Mr. E. in his library, bidding him not to sit up for her, as it would probably be very late when she returned. Mr. E. said all right, he would not. It was late when Mrs. E. drove up in her private carriage to her own door. It was after two o'clock, so she dismissed the impatient Patrick, telling him to drive at once to the stable. She gathered her long skirts about her as she stood on the steps for a moment enjoying the absolute stillness of the deserted street, then unlocked the outer door, passed into the vestibule, and attempted to unlock the inner door. In vain she tried. Not only was the latch down, but the heavy lock was turned. She rang the bell and rang and rang again. Mr. E., she knew, was a very sound sleeper and there was evidently nothing on the consciences of any of the servants. Opening the outer door again she looked for Patrick. He had gladly availed himself of her permission and was well on his way to the stables. Then she knew something desperate must be done. She took off her long dress skirt and laid it in the vestibule, locked the outer door upon it and ran for dear life the length of the block and half the width to the alley, which is between each two streets in that city. Down here she sped, breathless and frightened half to death as she afterward acknowledged, until she came to her own back fence. Over this she climbed with considerable difficulty, the worst of it being not the getting up, but the letting down on the other side. When at last she reached the back door and tested it and the windows it was to find these locked as well. She took off her velvet cloak, wrapped it around her hand, drew off and smashed the glass in the door, drew the lock and at last stood in her own kitchen.

Tired and nervous, she then stopped a moment to prepare some ice-water, and then started on to go up-stairs. Worse and worse and more of it! The timid servants had cautiously locked the door at the foot of the stairs and the poor woman was once more a prisoner at her own portals. Having done so much for liberty she was surely not to be daunted now. If she had known how to "break and enter" she would certainly have done it, but not knowing how she did the next best thing and "created a disturbance." She rolled the kitchen table across the floor two or three times, then took the broom, and, standing on the table, swept back and forth, not the cob-webs from the sky, but the chamber bells in the corner. This she continued until her tired arms refused their labor, and and she stopped to rest. The servants heard the din and thought it was "spirits," and hid their frightened heads beneath the clothes and prayed. Mrs. E. began again and by some miracle Mr. E. heard it and awakened. Hastily dressing he was on his way down stairs when Mrs. E. stopped to rest. He thought, of course, it was the front door, so he hastened to draw the bolt he had thoughtlessly turned down before. He opened the door and in the sweep of red satin thought he saw the prostrate form of his dear wife. He threw himself upon it only to find her dress alone. Visions of murder and every other horrid thing flew through his brain on the wings of fire. Hark! the bells. He rushed below, opened the door into the kitchen—softly—there he saw his wife. She did not see the door open and scream'd when he spoke to her. . .

"In Heaven's name, Eleanor, what are you doing?"

She turned around, saw the door of her deliverance open, and then, in her little white petticoat at half past two in the morning, she sat down in the middle of the kitchen table and cried.—Boston Record.

THE BARK LOUSE.

How to Destroy Moss and Insects and Improve the Bark of Trees.

The scale bark louse, or oyster shell louse, infests several trees, mostly willow, horse chestnut and apple. Willows are exceedingly troubled in this way, and every winter the trees are largely denuded of their limbs and branches, which have been killed by these pests and have been broken off by the winds. From the willows the lice spread to adjacent trees. An effective remedy for apple trees is to wash the bark with hot lime wash or a hot lye of wood ashes. The lime, however, is quite sufficient and is soon washed off by the rain, furnishing valuable plant food, and removing the glaring whiteness which is so much objected to by persons who do not know the benefit derived from it, and whose æsthetic tastes are hurt by the idea that the trees are whitewashed in pursuit of the cherished Yankee cleanliness and mistaken neatness. In spite of the tender feelings of these good people every owner of an orchard would do well to expend a barrel of lime upon his trees every spring and destroy moss and insects and cleanse and improve the bark.—N. Y. Times.

ANTI-SLAVERY AND PROHIBITION.

Every now and then the Blade receives a letter inquiring as to how Prohibition were enforced over the entire United States, whether the results would not be disastrous to the farming interest, as the grain crop, amounting [illegible] would be sticky to find a market and the price [illegible] by this enormous [illegible].

We also received a letter recently [illegible] the effect would not be felt upon the [illegible] of thousands of men now employed in the breweries and distilleries in manufacturing the liquor, the wholesale liquor trade and in saloon and retail shop keeping, would all be compelled to turn to other occupations for a livelihood, and thus compete with the already overcrowded ranks of honest workmen and merchants.

These letters all show that their writers fail to grasp the full scope of the mighty change for the better that would be wrought by the adoption of Prohibition by every state in the Union, and the utter annihilation of the liquor traffic. The result would be more for preaching and radical than our correspondents push their inquiries. They leave out of their calculations the fact that the men whose earnings now go into the coffers of the Rum Power would divert it into other channels. Their money would be spent for more and better food for themselves, their wives and children. It would be spent for more and better clothing. It would be spent for the thousand and one comforts and luxuries that now are strangers to their homes and lives.

Our correspondents know how great a sum this would be annually. It is estimated that no less than six hundred millions of dollars are spent in the United States each year for Rum. Consider a moment what a tremendous impetus would be given to trade if this enormous sum—a sum that would wipe out the national debt within a little over two years—were all poured into legitimate channels. Picture the benefits to everybody were six hundred million dollars more spent every year for all kinds of food and groceries, for fuel, for clothing, for furniture and carpets, for cottages and lots, for the thousands of things which honest, thriving, industrious citizens purchase to supply their legitimate wants and tastes.

The increased demand for these things would necessitate an increase in production of all the necessaries and luxuries of life, it would render it profitable to open more stores and groceries, more wholesale houses of all kinds, more factories, and mills, and shops, and all this would give employment to every man thrown out of employment by the extinction of the Rum traffic. The same beneficial effect would follow as regards the farmers. It would take more cattle and hogs, more wheat and corn, to supply the demand for more food and better. It would take more wood to supply the demand for clothing; it would take more of everything that can be raised or worked, and all things which can be manufactured into articles of necessity and every day use.

This is but a brief outline, the reader can pursue it in all its myriad ramifications. The addition of [illegible] to the legitimate domestic trade of this country in one year would give business impetus that would bring better times than we have witnessed for years; it would give our stagnant industries such a boom as they never yet have experienced. And if this [illegible] contribution to the material prosperity of the country were kept up year after year, as it would be were the curse of Rum removed, our land would enter upon such an era of prosperity as [illegible] the wildest dreams of an enthusiast.

Lesson 7. May 16.

THE NOBLEMAN'S SON.

John iv. 43-54. Golden Text, John iv. 50. Time, Jesus's ministry. Places, Cana in Galilee, and Capernaum, a city on the shores of the Sea of Galilee.

Leaving the hospitable Sychar, Jesus travelled northward to Galilee. His way led him past the reputed site of Samaria, then called Dothan, and offering with its magnificent [illegible] and pasture. Passing through the Samaritan country He came into Galilee, and as the Revised Version [illegible] went to Cana, the place where He performed His first miracle. This was on His first return from Jerusalem, and now His second return is about to be marked in a similar manner. Nine or ten months had passed away since then, and He had become well known and honored in the land. His reputation as a Healer had meanwhile spread forward wider. At certain seasons of the year dwellers on the shores of Galilee were more or less subject to fevers, owing to the peculiar nature of the district. A [illegible] of Capernaum had a son who was thus taken sick about this time. Hearing said, [illegible] and [illegible] his eyes anxiously toward Him who was said to be the great Healer. He journed to Cana, some twenty or twenty-five miles distant, and [illegible] sought an interview with Jesus. The disciples had gone to their several homes, and the Savior was staying, probably, with a friend, quietly enjoying that social and domestic life which was always a pleasure to Him. He is informed of an distinguished stranger wished to see Him. Christ not only loved to lead a social and domestic life, but He invariably showed courtesy to those with whom He came in contact. He received the stranger and heard his request. There stood the man on whose nature sorrow to its utmost depths with the fear that his son might die. There he stood earnestly hoping that Jesus might save the boy's life. The Master saw at once that he only regarded Him as a healer of physical pain and disease, and so He asked him, substantially, why he came to Him for physical healing, and how it was that he had no sense of need of spiritual healing. The man repeated his request, and then the Master quietly told him, "Go thy way; thy son liveth." The divine message entered his soul and he believed, and started on the homeward journey of twenty miles or more. That night he rested on his way, the path being somewhat dangerous, and next morning as he started out again he met some of his servants who had come to meet him and tell him there was no need to bring the great Healer any further, for his son was better. And when he asked them at what hour his son began to improve, he found that it was the same hour that Jesus had said, "Thy son liveth." He went home believing on the Son of God, whom he now recognized as the Messiah, and not only himself but his whole house believed on Jesus.

Raisin Valley Seminary.

Preparations are being made for a quinquennial reunion at the Raisin Valley seminary, for those who were students during the administration of Prof. Satterthwaite. It is desired to get together as many as possible, and in order to do so, every one who sees this should send his or her address to M. Graves, Lenawee Junction, corresponding secretary. Also send the address of their friends, who were students, and in due time an invitation and program will be sent. Those who were in attendance at that time are now scattered all over the country, and we find it very difficult to get their addresses, and we hope much interest may be taken in sending in names immediately.

The bicycle runs all point to a meeting at Eaton Rapids, June 30 to July 1. This meeting is held by those wheelmen who held two jubilees in Lansing last season. A large number of racers has been purchased at Eaton Rapids, and races are flying rapidly. Sam Jones will be there during the four days, and Dr. Watson is to preach on the meeting on the ground in the interest of holiness or christian purity. Bishop Mallalieu is also expected.

I have been a sufferer two years from catarrh or cold in the head, having distressing pain over my eyes. Gradually the disease worked down upon my lungs, my left ear was almost deaf, and my voice was failing. I procured Ely's Cream Balm and within five days my hearing was restored, the pain ceased and I am now enjoying good health. I recommended it to one of my friends. One of them send for a bottle. He told me that half of it cured him. My advice is to those suffering with catarrh or a cold in the head not to delay but try Ely's Cream Balm, as it is a positive cure. J. H. Vansant, Sandy Hook, Ky.

BEST HARVESTER AND BINDER IN THE WORLD.

We claim superiority for the New Light Steel Wheel Harvester and Binder in Simplicity of Construction, Strength and Durability, Ease of adjustment and management, Lightness of draft, Absence of side draft, Freedom from choking, Certainty of Binding, Security of knot tied, Economy in cost of twine per acre.

Our BUNDLE CARRIER saves the labor of at least one man. The bound bundles are left in heaps and in the convenient for shocking, and thus labor is saved in performing that work. Another saving, and one that should not be overlooked is of grain that is shocked and lost with the usual mode of delivery, by dragging the bundles together by hand when shocking, also by the tramping of the horses at corners, thus enabling the driver to keep the corners clear of bundles. We claim that we have the only successful bundle carrier.

We handle our own Twine and make a Specialty of keeping the best quality on hand and sold as low as any other house of equal quality.

Mrs. G. W. Ketcham, J. E. Waring and J. P. Slayton are repainting their fronts which makes a decided improvement in their looks.

Why not have a 4th of July celebration? We find there is strong desire among most of the business men to hold a rousing old celebration. Tecumseh would indeed be benefited by the crowds of people it would draw. Tecumseh has had a few celebrations and every time they have surpassed their expectations. Will not some of the business men appoint a meeting to decide. Awake and let us have a rousing old 4th of July celebration.

The announcement that a box social would be given by G. A. R. Post last Friday evening, brought a great many old and young, to their neat rooms over G. P. Sparks's music house. After the regular business meeting, boxes containing eatables for two, were placed on sale at 10c a box. At first there was a calm, but some one took a lead and then the rush came; every box was sold. After partaking of the contents of the boxes, a short literary program was given which was very interesting. Then came some remarks by visiting members. Then a call for some war songs, which was responded to by all the G. A. R's. After "Jeff Davis had been hung on a sour apple tree," and "John Brown's body had been placed in the grave," the company dispersed, having had a most enjoyable time.

THE WHEEL.

To him who in the love of nature holds communion with her visible forms, must ride a Columbia cycle. In the evening hours he feels a thrill of gladness, as he glides into the warning sunlight, with a still and gentle pedaling that steals away all weariness e'er he is aware.—Wheel.

Listen to what the "Boston Home Journal" says, and correctly says, concerning tricycle riding. "It is the height of immodesty to believe that tricycle riding is not lady like and modest. A flowing skirt and the absence of hoops are all the necessary conditions so far as dress is concerned. Even the delicate lady can ride, and it requires little time to learn.

There are twelve bicycles and one tricycle ridden in Tecumseh; the average age of each rider is 26 2-13 years; the total age is 340, the total weight 1765, the average weight 147 11-13; the total height 73 ft., the average height is 5ft. and 8-13in. Among them may be mentioned, a banker and member of the school board, two druggists, one hardware merchant, M. D. and President of the Board, blacksmith, and an enthusiastic member of the fire department, one teamster, one L. A. W. consul and dusty miller, and five students. Seven of the thirteen have wisely joined the League of American Wheelmen. Where are the editors? We would like to see the press represented.

Levi C. Hayden and Percy Fitzsimmons made five miles on the race track last Saturday evening, without their handle bars.

Reed a college student from Adrian, was over on Saturday afternoon.

Last Saturday a serious accident occurred to Albert Southworth, about 4 miles south of Tecumseh. His injuries we understand are very serious, but at this writing he is improving.

The nineteenth annual meeting of the Michigan Press Association will be held at Coldwater, on the 1st and 2d of June. An elaborate program has been arranged, and a very successful meeting is anticipated.

The M. & O. R. R. will give an excursion to the natural gas wells at Findlay, Ohio, on Wednesday, May 26. They are the most wonderful gas wells in the world; the average depth of the wells is 1200 feet; the Big Karg Well produces 12,000,000 cubic feet of gas every 24 hours; you can see the light from this well for 50 miles. The escape of gas from the stand pipe reminds one of the roar of Niagara Falls; the scene is one of indescribable grandeur. Power is furnished from these wells for all the manufactories and mills in the city of Findlay, Ohio, saving thousands of dollars worth of fuel yearly. Four thousand families use this gas for cooking purposes and lighting houses. All places of business are illuminated, in fact every night Findlay has the appearance of a city illuminated in celebration of some great event. Thousands of people visit there daily. The Chicago Herald of last Sunday contained a very accurate illustration of Aunt Laura Haviland, in conjunction with three columns of spirited and well written text, giving some of the leading points in the life history of the now veperable philanthropist and heroine. "Aunt Laura" is a name that will always be revered by the residents of Lenawee county.

M. P. Brown got on the M. & O. train at the depot last Friday, expecting to jump off when the train halted at the target. The train didn't halt, but he jumped off, and plowed a furrow several feet long in the street. His right shoulder was dislocated and he received several severe bruises. This is not the first time that the train men on the M. & O. have violated the law by running that target. Some plan should be devised, if possible, to put a stop to it.

Dr. F. M. Woodward has been building an addition to and otherwise improving his residence on Chicago street. An addition on the west end of the house furnishes a fine office with two apartments therein, while the second story is used for a sleeping room. A neat porch graces the front of the house and the addition. When the improvements are completed the Doctor will have a very convenient as well as commodious family residence.

On Tuesday evening last, Mr. J. R. Clarke delivered his lecture entitled "To and Fro in London" to a large audience in the Baptist church here. The public are certainly indebted to those who were instrumental in introducing this talented lecturer to a Tiverton audience. His oratory is easy, flowing, graceful, pathetic, rising at times into bursts of impassioned declamation, then falling into a beautiful cadence, and then with great power of mimicry, portraying either the English, Irish, Scotch, Dutch or American peculiarities. A vote of thanks was tendered the lecturer at the close.

A strike has struck Lenawee County at last. Seventeen men employed on the construction train on the Monroe branch struck at Adrian Tuesday morning. They had a dispute with conductor Bradford for discharging two of their gang, and refused to work until those two men were restored. They also found fault with the boarding car system. It is probable that new men will be employed.

In the Daily American, of Nashville Tenn., under date of Friday, April 30, we find a lengthy notice of a wedding wherein our old Tecumseh friend, Dr. R. P. Turgan, officiated as groom, and Miss Maggie Clawson, of Spring Hill, Tenn., was the bride. A large company was present and many costly bridal gifts were presented. The marriage ceremony was after the Quaker form, the nuptial knot being tied by Dr. Fitzgerald, of Nashville. The happy couple will make their future home at Harvard, Ill., where the Doctor has already built up a good practice in the dental profession.

The cyclone season has opened very early in Kansas.

Mrs. Love, of Blissfield, contemplates building a new dam for her mill property. What a woman with such a lovely name should want of a new dam is a mystery.

An Adrian man certifies to the curative qualities in the mineral water at the water works. Water of any kind would prove beneficial to the average Adrianite if he could only be induced to use it.—Hudson Post.

Tecumseh isn't a very large village, yet it takes six saloons to furnish the necessary skidawaboo, and if these are not sufficient, there are four drug stores where the favorite drink can be obtained for medical purposes only, of course. There will be no necessity for drinking water in Tecumseh this season.—Adrian Press.

The engine died on the Fayette Branch broke down at Tiffin on Tuesday forenoon, and another had to be procured from Adrian. In consequence of this accident, the freight train was some two hours behind time when it reached Morenci.—Morenci Observer.

Perhaps it is not generally known that the metallic part of the badges worn by members of the Grand Army of the Republic must be 80 per cent. of metal of captured cannon. The large number required is making that kind of ordnance very scarce, and a Grand Army badge is likely some day to be a cherished relic.—Hudson Gazette.

We have been requested to say that Blissfield has a candidate for register of deeds in the person of E. W. Scott. While we believe Ed. is in every way qualified, yet as an opponent of S. W. Bennett his chances for election are rather doubtful, and therefore, he cannot afford to allow himself to be sacrificed at his time of life.—Blissfield Advance.

Burt Bennett, of Lenawee county, has taken up his residence at the prison, where he will remain for the coming six months. He earned his ticket of admission by a sheep stealing exploit, and if the truth must be told, not a very brilliant one either. He stole twenty six sheep and killed two of them, leaving the carcasses, and selling the pelts to a deputy sheriff. Burt may be a wiser man six months hence.—Jackson Telegram.

Good easy reading for dupes of the $10 a bushel Bohemian oat swindle. An Adrian grain and feed store advertises Bohemian oats for sale. Write the Adrian Times for price.—Kalamazoo Telegram. Thirty four cents a bushel.—Adrian Times. We have no desire to aggravate the situation in the mind of the victim who reads this, but we confess to a little pleasure in having him known as one of the biggest sapheads of the nineteenth century.—Kalamazoo Telegraph.

Mrs. Willard DeLong stepped out of her home on Lane street for a few minutes last Saturday evening, and when she returned found that some one had entered the house and carried off an overcoat and hat belonging to her husband, a basket, clock, and some spoons. A search was instituted, but without success. On Monday, Pie Norcutt found all the spoons but the spoons near a fence on the county line. The miscreant probably thought it too lovely a season to go upon, and rid himself of the odious booty.—Hudson Gazette.

A reunion of the old and present members of the Michigan legislature is to take place at the state capital in Lansing, next month. Those who have been connected with the legislative department of the state government are numerous in numbers, and if even a considerable portion of them attend the meeting it will be a large one. We are told that the county of Lenawee had no member of any of the six legislative councils that were held in the territory prior to the admission of the state. Olmsted Hough, father of E. D. Hough, of this city, was a senator, and Allen Hutchins, Darius Mead and James Wheeler representatives from this county in the first state legislature. We are informed that they are all dead. It is stated that Hon. John J. Adam, of Tecumseh, is the oldest living ex-member from Lenawee. He was a representative from Tecumseh in the fourth legislature, which convened in Detroit in January, 1839. It would be interesting to us, and we have no doubt to our readers, to have occasionally sketches of the lives of the old members of the legislature from this county.—Adrian Record.

AMATEUR PHOTOGRAPHY.

A Highly Popular Coat of Outfits.

"It is astonishing," said a dealer in photographic materials to a reporter "how much can be accomplished by totally inexperienced persons in photography, using a little care and judgment. The introduction of the gelatino-bromide dry plate has so revolutionized photography that but little knowledge of it is essential. It is scarcely to be supposed that success should always attend one's first efforts, but rapid improvements can generally be made by old or young, lady or gentleman, who may possess the slightest disposition to excel. Unlike the old wet plate, the new plates have the advantage of admitting a much wider latitude of exposure, that is to say, the actual time which the sensitive plate may now be subjected to light, though still important, is far less so than by the old collodion process, and the subsequent operations are free from the former objections of complexity, uncertainty and stains. The apparatus and chemicals required are also few and inexpensive, and there is nothing which the veriest tyro in chemistry can not readily master. This is why amateur photography has of late become so popular, and so great is the demand that we make special instruments and publish special catalogues on the subject. Young people buy them for amusement, and men of family buy them to take pictures of their homes and surroundings. Nor is such a camera in any sense a toy. All are practical working instruments, such as are in constant use by professional photographers. They are adapted for landscape and out-door groups, and in a good light require but a second's time to make a picture. But in buying the amateur should not forget that he is not going to make an experiment. Success is assured if the directions are followed. Thousands have succeeded with only the ordinary amount of brains and some with less than is allowed to mankind generally. The chief advice I have to offer is, when you buy, buy as good an outfit as you can afford. With a cheap instrument you can do good work, but with a better instrument you can do better work more easily."

"For $11 you can buy a mahogany camera, for making pictures vertically or horizontally, measuring four or five inches, with one double plate-holder, fine single aeromatic lens, improved tripod and carrying-case, with an extra double dry plate-holder. The entire weight of such an equipment is only 8 1-2 pounds. From that they run up to $25, $37, $40 and $50, according to the quality and size of the camera. For a developing outfit, with the $11 equipment, that is a 4x5 picture, the cost is $5.25. In this you want a pocket ruby lantern, a dozen dry plates, two developing trays, several bottles of chemicals, funnels, filtering paper, scales and weights and a few other articles. This includes every thing necessary for developing a dozen negatives. One of the newest things in this line is the detective camera. It is focussed once for all by means of a ground glass which slides in the place to be occupied by the double dry plate-holder for objects of various distances, and the position of the focussing lever on the top of the camera is marked for each distance. After this the ground glass may be entirely dispensed with, as it is then only necessary to estimate the distance of the object to be photographed and move the focussing lever to the mark corresponding to that distance, when the camera will obviously be in focus. The small lens serves to throw the picture on a piece of ground glass on the top of the camera, thus showing the position of the image on the plate. When the picture appears in proper position on the ground glass it is only necessary to touch the button on the right of the camera and the exposure of the plate is instantly made, its development being afterward accomplished in the ordinary manner. Another novel and most ingenious little instrument and one that supplies a want long felt in the profession is the pneumatic photograph shutter. This is a long rubber tube, connected with the camera, the end of which the operator holds in his hand and by which the lens is exposed and capped. It has been remarked by eminent photographers that the arrangement is a most useful one in enabling persons to be photograped without being aware of it. The efforts in this direction hitherto necessitated the operator being close to the camera, but here we have an instrument which permits him to be in any part of the studio he pleases. Many have experienced the difficulty of taking children's portraits with the proper amount of profile, but with this instrument all difficulty vanishes and the operator may be by the side of the child and attract its attention in any direction.—N. Y. Mail and Express.

Johannes Factotum, who compiles for the St. Louis Globe-Democrat much curious information about the origin of familiar phrases, says: "The name of perfected iron steamers first applied to a particular out of boat in the United States, arose in a peculiar manner. A man in New York city, who kept, what was then called a porter-house, used to buy a piece of beef and have it cut into small steaks, for convenience of serving them to his customers. They were seen by other purchasers at the butcher's, and I heard one man to say, 'Let me some steak like Non do for the porter-house.' Hence the name."

M. A. Lafount, of Clayton, Ga., after serving a sentence in the jail at Atlanta for violating the revenue laws, returned paralyzed in the legs and quite helpless. His young wife, in attempting to lift him from the bed to a glass, ruptured a blood vessel and died, leaving him with one child two years old and another six months old.

FOREIGN GOSSIP.

known, has been discovered in the province of Adana, Asia Minor.

—According to the latest official statistics the number of workingwomen in Knaresbrough and Wakefield is 7,700,545.

—In spite of four famines in India in the last twenty-six years, which killed off millions of the population, the number of inhabitants steadily increased as a whole.

—A directory of Parisians who were likely to give alms has been issued in Paris. It was prepared and published by the old and well-tried beggars for the benefit of younger members of the profession.

—Signed at Berlin, the Russo-Prussian. Part of the stuffing is taken out of the seats and backs of the German railway carriages, and contraband articles are neatly concealed in their stead.

—The cream-colored horses which draw the carriage of the Queen of England belong to her, not as Queen, but as a Princess of the house of Hanover. The home of the breed has been for a very long period at Herrenhausen. It has been kept pure so long that rarely is any thing but a cream-colored foal produced.

—A number of native gentlemen in Scinde have formed an association with the object of reforming marriage usages in the East. The members bind themselves in a penalty of fifty rupees not to allow their sons to marry before the age of eighteen years, and not to exact heavy dowries from the parents of their daughters-in-law.—London Globe.

—The late King Ferdinand of Portugal, as London Truth learns, made it the business of his life to collect from every country in Europe books, pamphlets and prints of all sorts and descriptions which had been forbidden by the Government or the police, and he has left a prodigious and perfectly marvelous collection of the forbidden literature of Europe during the last thirty years.

—A project has been started in Berlin to establish there an anthropological exhibition, which will do with regard to the races of men what zoological gardens do with regard to animals. In the exhibition, or garden, it is intended that representatives of various races shall permanently reside; while of such races as can not stand the cold of the climate, representatives will be brought to Germany to live there during the summer. An ethnological museum is to be established in connection with the exhibition, which is said to have the support of several capitalists.

—One of the leading London metallists dreamed distinctively that Raffaello, the winning horse, would win the Manchester November Handicap. He told his dream to his friends, and was laughed at. For the second time he dreamed the same, and again he was ridiculed as a superstitious old fossil of the fifteenth century. But for the third time the dream came. This was too much, and, disdaining all chaff, he took £1,000 to £20 on the horse, half of which he handed over to his better half for luck, win or lose, and backed him again for another thousand. His favorite song is now, "Let me dream again," as he is about £12,000 richer than at the opening of the season.

THE BELGIANS.

Interesting Description of the Present Status of Belgium's Social Question.

This little monarchy is about one-fifth as large as the State of Illinois, and no small part of it has been rescued from the sea by raising huge embankments and dykes along the shores of sea and river, and then pumping out the water. As we sailed up the river, we could see from the upper deck of the steamer scarcely anything but the roofs of the houses and the steeples of the village churches rising above the dykes, with here and there an old-fashioned four-winged wind-mill, mostly at work in pumping out the water, which would soon resume possession of the country, if not thus constantly expelled. In this little kingdom live nearly six millions of people, or about twice as many as Illinois supports on its broad and fertile acres. The average population to the square mile is four hundred and seventy-five, the densest population in Europe, if not on the globe.

Unfortunately for the peace and progress of Belgium, its people belong to two different races, who hate each other, as my Belgian informant declared, as heartily as do the English and Irish in Great Britain. The people of the northern provinces or counties are mostly Flemings, and akin to the Dutch of Holland. They are Teutonic in origin and speech. Those of the southern counties are Walloons and French in race and character. The Flemings, who largely outnumber the Walloons, speak the Flemish language. The Walloons speak a mongrel French, that French is the language of the court, and largely of commerce. Most of the newspapers, even those of Antwerp the stronghold of Flemish influence, are published in French. The French is the language of the schools and of the public, and popular sympathy and the Flemings are making a stout fight against French influence and influences. As spoken by my friend, who is a Fleming, to visit several families of his relatives and friends, where the talk inclined to the politics of the question, and was loud against the French, whom they charged with conspiring in their lodges against the Catholic faith, conservative party, and with dictating to the press, their utterances, policy. Alas, for the brave Flemings! their revolt in favor of the old national tongue and its memories, I fear, has come too late. On every street corner of their city, under the old Flemish names of the streets are painted the French translations of those names, and in the broad new Antwerp which surrounds the old city, French architecture has displaced the sharp gables of the Flemish style, French fashions prevail, while Brussels, the capital of their country, delights to be called a second Paris. And it must be confessed that the party of progress is against them. They lamented to me that the young men were being led away from them. But the young men are the men who are most awake to the new spirit that has come with commerce, and which is fast making Antwerp one of the great cosmopolitan cities which modern commerce creates. Already it contains 30,000 Germans, 25,000 Hollanders, and a large sprinkling of English, Danes, Jews, French and Italians.—Antwerp Cor. Chicago Standard.

KRUPP HAMMERS.

They Do Not Make a Gentle Impression with an Earthquake.

There is a curious personality in hammers, and a Krupp like to give them in the Essen works, at from the pounds weight to 50 tons. The largest in Paris, which 50 tons fall on an anvil and anvil-block, weighing together 1,250 tons, these resting on a foundation 100 feet deep. The next in size is named "Max." It would require a poet like him who sang the "Song of the Bell" rightly to describe the action of "Fritz," and I do not wonder that the Emperor, on his visit here, presented the worker of this hammer with a watch. I observed "Fritz" for some time at work upon the steel stem of an Austrian iron-clad, the Ferdinand Max. The metal was from one casting, without seam or weld, 45 feet long and of 25 tons weight. Four men with tong clamps managed this red-hot mass, swung over the anvil by a crane. They turned it readily this way and that, the foreman at each pause uttering a signal which "Fritz" understood, answering with a soft tap, or a gentle pressure, or with an earthquake. I was curious to see the anvil-block which supplemented the ability of the earth to sustain such shocks through a length of time, and was presently shown one which, after twenty-one years of thumping, had cracked straight through from top to bottom—possibly beneath some gentle stroke which was the last feather to break its huge back. Krupp does not make plates for iron-clads, but only such parts as might be needed for ordinary ships.

Having lit our cigars on the Austrian iron-clad, we proceed to observe the operations of "Max", and other hammers. One of these I saw giving three hundred tremendous strokes a minute. "Max" was engaged in welding "hard" iron (though this is more ductile than the other.) To nice distinctions between iron and iron "Max" is indifferent; his big bow-legs arch above a tower of pieces built on his anvil, and with crushing blows of his mighty fist he makes a hundred plates one. However, though they seem one and set together, in the end it will be proved that they are not one; no conceivable force can weld into one different organizations of atoms. To be thoroughly united they must be filtered and refined in the crucible. The central part of railway wheels is made by welding, but the tires are made without welding. The nave of the wheel is of wrought iron, which is placed beneath a hammer of suitable shape, and at the third blow the wheel is shaped. The tire is cut from a long round mass of steel—6 or 8 from one casting—when it is called a "cheese;" it is flattened, punched in the center with an eight-inch die, strung on a horse-anvil, and there beaten until it becomes a tire, and ready for the flating process which adapts it to the rail.—Moncure D. Conway, in Harper's Magazine.

PERFECT BLISS.

The Life of a Negro Hermit Long After Emancipation.

One day when I was out in the woods with a companion, ready to shoot a parrot or a wild pig, to cut down a cabbage tree or to capture a yellow snake—when, in short, we were trying by any means to kill a tropical day—we found ourselves unexpectedly on the border of some cleared ground. In this opening were growing two or three plantains, two or three yams, pumpkins of some size and sweet potatoes. But the most remarkable object there was a shed about six feet long and three feet broad, coming up to a ridge, the two and a half feet high in the center of the ridge, and resting on the ground at both sides. Its transverse section was a triangle. The construction was simple in the extreme. Branches of trees, roughly trimmed, were set up in pairs, at distances between the pairs of two feet or thereabout. Each stick had been run into the ground at one end, at the other, that is to say, at the ridge of the shed, it was bound by a withe to its ally. A few smaller withes were interwoven among the principals, and the outside covered with palm thatch. There was scarcely time to remark the ashes of a fire, and an old iron pot near the end of the shed, before a grizzled negro head was protruded, the owner of which was, of course, prostrate, or kneeling face downwards, in the thatch. He proved to be an African, and when he received that a visitor was meant no harm to him he crept out, a skeleton, with a long white beard, and stood upright. His shed was not a mere hut, it contained, first, a bed, not resting on the ground, but on four posts, with a mat for a mattress, and a mosquito curtain, not, of course, being the article bearing any more resemblance to the original than a spiders web, and not caring for security, had suspended on the cross-sticks of a prop-stick, and with himself the habitation of a family, an African hen and chicken. On the bed, or at least on the mat, was a bolster, or rather a wooden block, with a cover to it and a string to hold it or hang it by. His carpet, bed or whatever it ought to be called, was sedge obtained from some neighboring pond. He informed us that he raised his own chickens, yams, plantains, etc., and that he subsisted himself therewith, cooking one of the fowl in the iron pot. His fire, which we had at first thought to be a heap of cold ashes, was really alive, and crackled on being fanned with a plantain leaf. He could manage generally to keep it going, but if it failed, he had to go some way to the nearest hut to beg a little fire, which he would carry back in a calabash. His machete, or small cutlass, served for horticultural purposes and for dinner knife, and an old hoe sufficed him for planting. In this calm retreat he passed his days, liable to excitement, but not in much danger of it.—Blackwood's Magazine.

Spring Medicine

When the weather grows warmer, that extreme tired feeling, want of appetite, dullness, languor, and lassitude, afflict almost the entire mass of mankind, and other diseases caused by humors, manifest themselves with many. It is impossible to throw off this debility and expel humors from the blood without the aid of a reliable medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"I could not sleep, and would get up in the morning with humors, etc., coming out of body. A friend advised me to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. The first bottle gave me great relief. I had no more of the humors, and the weak condition of the body, caused by its long battle with the cold weather, disappeared. I feel no particular disease, but only that I need a good medicine." MRS. G. E. SARGENT, Colton, N. Y.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"For seven years, spring and fall, I have had eruptions come on my face, which would last for two years with me before I could get rid of them. I suffered very much. Last May I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and before I had taken two bottles, the sores healed and the humor left me." C. A. ANGELL, Fitchburg, Mass.

"There is no blood purifier equal to Hood's Sarsaparilla." E. S. BARNES, Rochester, N. Y.

"For years I was troubled with a general debility. Last spring Hood's Sarsaparilla proved just the thing needed. I received an immense amount of benefit, and never felt better." H. F. MILLET, Boston, Mass.

"At no other season is the system so susceptible to the beneficial effects of a reliable tonic and invigorant. The impure condition of the blood, the prevalence of boils and other diseases caused by humors, manifest themselves with many. It is impossible to throw off this debility and expel humors from the blood without the aid of a reliable medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me a great deal of good. I had no particular disease, but only felt generally run down." MRS. G. E. SARGENT, Colton, N. Y.

ALEXANDER—In Jackson, Tuesday morning May 11, 1886, Mary Alexander aged 41.

The deceased was for many years a resident of this place and had many friends here, who will learn of her departure with sorrow.

Besides Peale's Court of Death there will be exhibited at Detroit next month over fifty new pictures painted by members of the National Academy, a number of valuable foreign paintings contributed by some of the leading importers of New York, all the new pictures purchased within the last two years by the leading Detroit connoisseurs, and the first and only pictures by the great Spanish painter Murillo and the famous French painter Claude Lorraine ever seen in Michigan. These latter are over 200 years old, and are greatly prized. Altogether the exhibition will be one of rare interest. The price of admission will be 25 cents, and all the railroads are expected to run special excursion trains at reduced rates of fare for the convenience of those wishing to visit it.

THE OLD RAISIN INSTITUTE

The second reunion of the students is near at hand. It is more than twenty years since the closing term of this institution, but to many, in this county and out of it the name is still dear. At the first reunion of the students held last October, the first Thursday in June, 1886, was agreed upon as the time for the next meeting. Mrs. Hayland, the president, and the dear saint Laura to us all, said, "If well, I will come all the way from Chicago to be there." The meeting will be during the entire day at Mr. Chester VanDoren's, a little north of Adrian, on what is known as the old red mill road. In memory of the good old fashion of boarding ourselves, it is planned to have a basket picnic dinner. A short program is arranged for but it is expected that each will come ready to contribute to the mutual pleasure of all, as the day is designed especially for social enjoyment, and the renewing of friendships, long silent, but neither forgotten or dead. Every one at any time a student of the Institution is cordially invited and urged to be present, but if impossible to be there, at least send a word of regret, that we may hear as many of the old names as possible upon that occasion. Direct these letters to the secretary.

TALENT AND GENIUS.

The Capacity to Do Them Perfectly.

As education tends to become universal, the field of talent widens and many come to believe that the man of talent is more capable than the man of genius, as regards the necessary and unceasing work of the world. Genius [illegible] the energy which [illegible] of a practical and [illegible] talent is [illegible] the culture of the surroundings. The man of talent is in the [illegible] the man of genius [illegible] the [illegible] of the [illegible] and [illegible] of [illegible] is [illegible] regular [illegible] world. Anthony Trollope tells us, in his autobiography, how he acquired a habit of [illegible] he could count upon his ability to write a certain number of pages of a new novel per [illegible] Count upon [illegible] such a system, must have been a source of unfailing delight, to his publisher, but future generations will know Trollope merely as one of a host of clever men, who helped to make English fiction the [illegible] it has now become. The utmost efforts of men like Trollope, Black and Henry James can never decrease the awful distance that finally separates them from Dickens, George Eliot and Thackeray. Genius can not work by [illegible] method, but produces, by its creative process, something that will last as long as [illegible] for the good, the beautiful, the true.

The distinction between talent and genius is often extremely subtle, so much so, in fact, that a man of talent is not infrequently mistaken by his contemporaries for a man of genius. Time, however, corrects all errors of that sort and places the man of genius in his true position. Talent would appear to be the capacity to do things well, while genius is the capacity to do them best of all. Therefore, it would seem that talent is the everyday work of the world, while genius alone will suffice for the really great impressions which define an epoch. To be a good painter, a good sculptor, a good musician, to be able to write a good book, to be able to [illegible] the passions and aspirations of a race, is to be written at such times the man of talent who assumes [illegible] of the man of genius [illegible] unexpected competitor and, much, but he deserves their intimate praise as well. The best work of genius will not be all that talent can do. If Shelley had written nothing save his "Ode to a Sky-Lark," he would have stood higher among the poets than Scott, despite the latter's many thousand lines of admirable verse. Ten pages would contain the verses on which the reputation of Keats now rests, yet all of Southey's diligent and conscientious work has left him in the dim shadow of verbal critic when compared with the marvelous boy who gave us the exquisite odes "To a Grecian Urn," and "To a Nightingale." One great passage of Shakespeare is worth more than all the trash which chiefly makes up the drama of the day. In an age which shows a mighty tendency toward the worship of the common-place, the claims of genius can not be too often or too clearly set forth. The difference between talent and genius is the difference between excellence and perfection, between the placid lake and the tumultuous ocean, between mortality and immortality. It is not of much moment to know the knights and deeds of the world's mediocrities, but it is of the last importance to study the personality of the knight who may truly be said to have shaped the destinies of the race.—*N. AMATEUR DOCTORING.

Popular Medical Treatments in Vogue Throughout the Indian Provinces.

A living scorpion is dropped into a wide mouthed glass bottle, which contains a few drops of olive oil of the finest quality. More oil is poured on instantly, until the bottle is filled and the scorpion dead. In its struggles to free itself it ejects all its poison into the oil, and this poisoned oil forms a sovereign remedy for the sting of a scorpion. [illegible] is to be taken internally, and it is probably a remedy which homeopathists would approve of on very rational grounds. It is doubtful, however, whether they or any other medical men would approve of the application of the comb as practiced in Lombardy and the Venetian provinces. This remedy is highly unique, and reflects honor upon the originality of the brain which first conceived it. It is applied for chronic dyspepsia and acute internal inflammation of all kinds; the reader's imagination may fill the blank and need hesitate at none of the evils common to man or woman. The sufferer is laid upon a bed and firmly held by the assistants, [illegible] of whom in these cases have been required in the case of a strong man. The comb is then prepared and applied. It must be a very good comb and a very fine one, the finer the better—and it is wrapped in a low white rag—been well soaked in olive oil. So prepared, it is placed upon the bare stomach of the victim, is set alight, blazes for a moment, and is then covered by a bowl, or soup plate, slightly raised on one side under which it is allowed to smolder until the tow is reduced to ashes, chloroform and other being either unknown to or morally dreaded by the Indian peasants, the agony endured by the wretched victim is terrible enough to induce more letters be imagined than described. It is said that the screams of persons subjected to this torture are audible sometimes at a distance of two miles. But sound travels far on these [illegible] nights. The comb is also applied on the [illegible] quite different, and with a different object. Should a nursing mother catch cold, she is rubbed with olive oil, and a new white rag, fine tooth comb is placed on her bosom. She wears it day and night until relieved, and it is asserted by the peasants that she is [illegible] relieved very speedily. It is said that the comb when she applied is sometimes wrapped with raw silk, but of this I am not quite sure.—London Society.

W. F. M. S. CONVENTION.

Held at Ridgeway, Michigan, Wednesday and Thursday, May 12th and 13th, 1886.

The W. F. M. S. held their semi-annual convention in the audience room of the M. E. church, at Ridgeway, May 12 and 13. The church was very tastily decorated with house-plants and everything arranged for the convenience of the delegates. During the two days there were enrolled 71 delegates from the surrounding towns.

The exercises opened up in the afternoon by devotional exercises led by Mr. York of Bellville, after which Mrs. Harding of Tecumseh was elected Secretary pro tem. The President then appointed the following committees.

To organize Childrens Bands—Mrs. Robertson, Saline; Mrs. McElwain, Chelsea; Mrs. Town, Rollin.

To raise money for orphanage in Chung King—Mrs. Wastell, Clinton; Mrs. McElwain, Chelsea; Miss Davidson, Tecumseh.

After which came a well rendered solo by Miss Ida Arner, entitled, "What will Thou have me to do," which was followed by an Essay, by Miss Nellie Wesley, of Adrian. It was moved and supported that Miss Wesley present her essay to the Bureau of exchange.

WEDNESDAY EVENING.

The evening exercises opened by an Anthem, by the choir. Devotional exercises were led by Mrs. Knight Clinton. After which the following program was carried out in a very good manner:

Address of Welcome—Mrs. William, Ridgeway.
Response—Mrs. Town, Rollin.
Recitation—Alice Alchin, Rollin—subject, "Help those Women."
Anthem—Choir.
Collection.
Address—Mrs. York, Bellville.
Anthem—Choir.
Benediction—Rev. York, Bellville.

THURSDAY MORNING.

Opened at 9 o'clock with a devotional hour led by Mrs. McElwain, Chelsea. The President appointed one member from each charge as a committee on framing the resolutions.

A short time was taken up hearing the reports of branch delegates that had not already reported on the previous day. The following districts reported: Adrian with a membership of 53; South Dover and Clayton 12; Hudson 46; Young ladies society of Hudson 30; Manchester 23; Clinton 17; Monroe 23; Rollin Center 53; Addison 15; Ridgeway —; Saline 24; Tecumseh 36.

Next came a missionary paper by Miss Lina Brown of Hudson. Miss Brown gave or read a few letters she had received from Miss Smith, concerning her voyage to the foreign land, her abode, her teachings, etc. The paper was interesting from the very beginning to the end. The congregation all united in singing, "Shall we whose souls are lighted". Then followed a fine recitation well rendered by Miss Mina Muir, of Clinton, entitled, "For Loves Sake". Mrs. McElwain of Chelsea, who was a delegate to the Northwestern meeting at Kalamazoo last Oct., gave a report of that meeting. Her report was well rendered indeed, with one exception. Mrs. M. seemed to have a mania for telling how each lady was dressed. The ladies of the society are bashful about speaking now for fear their dress will be reported. With this exception her report was exceedingly good. After her address a vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. McElwain for her good report of the Kalamazoo convention. Mrs. H. M. Clough of Ann Arbor, wa appointed delegate to the Northwestern convention which is to be held at South Bend, Ind., during the first of October, with Miss Robertson of Saline, as alternate. The meeting then adjourned to the rooms below. Your reporter was invited to adjourn be ow also, where to his astonishment as well as delight, he found a number of tables loaded down with the best of eatables that the land can afford, he fell to and did himself ample justice.

After an hour and a half for refreshments, Thursday afternoon, the meeting again opened with devotional exercises led by Mrs. J. L. Remington of Tecumseh. Miss Franc Baker of Moroni being absent, the memorial exercises were conducted by the Prest., Mrs. Benson of Adrian. Then the congregation joined in singing, after which a well rendered paper by Mrs. N. A. Fowler of Tecumseh. The best treat of the convention was a solo, entitled "Here am I, send me," by Miss Belle Barlow of Ridgeway, with an accompaniment by the Misses Arner and Clark, followed by the appointment of a program committee by the President, as follows.

Mrs. E. A. Rowe of Manchester.
" Jennie Cushman of Sharon.
" J. T. Tracy

After which the following resolution was offered by the committee to raise money for the orphanage at Chung King.

Resolved, That this committee recommend for the consideration of the Association the method adopted by the Detroit district for raising funds for the Chung King Orphanage, viz: That each auxiliary recommend to its members the payment on their birthday of as many cents as their number of years.

Most respectfully submit the above proposition. Then followed the resolutions ordered by the committee on resolutions, which were read and approved. They are as follows:

Whereas we have read the resolution in regard to Children's Band we recommend that it be done as far as practical.

Resolved, That each auxiliary have a question book at every meeting for the benefit of members that wish to be enlightened in missionary work.

Resolved, That the mite box agent be authorized to secure by correspondence, or otherwise, a local agent at each appointment in the district who shall see that one of our folding mite boxes be placed in the hands of all ladies of our church who are not regular members to our women work. That this agent order boxes to be sent to each of their local agents as soon as the necessary number be ascertained.

Resolved, That the delegates of the district meeting at Ridgeway in behalf of the association return a vote of thanks to the Ridgeway ladies for their delightful appetizing lunch, and heartily forgive them for setting aside the cold lunch, and also that thanks be returned the gentlemen most heartily for the sincere kindness of last evening in getting us to our respective places of rest during the storm, each man gallantly bearing a gossimer and an umbrella.

Resolved, That we extend hearty thanks to the choir for their excellent music, and also to the pastors for their presence and hearty co-operation in our work.

Resolved, That our thanks be tendered to the program committee who gave us such a beautiful entertainment in the songs and recitations rendered and the essay furnished for the occasion.

Resolved, That the ladies of Adrian district association heartily co-operate with the ladies of Detroit in maintaining a reading room, and that we will endeavor to send articles of interest, maps or books to aid in the work and that we will, when in Detroit, manifest our interest by visiting the reading room in the central church.

After an excellent piece of music entitled "Reapers," by a trio consisting of Mrs. Horsman, Miss Arner and Barlow, the congregation again assembled in the capacious dining room.

EVENING SESSION.

After an anthem by the choir, Rev J. W. Clack conducted the devotional exercises.

A recitation by Lena Swirk, and an essay by Mrs. Clough of Ann Arbor, on India, filled the formal part of the program. The trio given in the P. M. was repeated by request. The president then called upon Rev. L. C. York of Bellville, who made a few spicy remarks complimentary to the women in their work. Then the President addressed a few parting words to the delegates urging them to be active and make the best possible use of the meeting now about to adjourn. A choice anthem was sung by the choir, and thus ended one of the most successful and enjoyable district meetings yet held in connection with Missionary work. Many compliments were given to the local society and Ridgeway people for the hospitality shown and the entertainment given to visiting delegates. The choir also came in for its share of praise, the president stating for one, that the music furnished at this meeting had been the best given at any district meeting of the society.

The next meeting will be held in Oct. by the Manchester and Sharon circuit and held at Manchester.

BRITTON BUDGET.

Quite a frost Sunday night but farmers report very little damage to crops.

Britton still grows. Several new buildings under way already and more promised. We need a mill and can give one a good support.

J. C. Beckler has his new brick store ready to plaster and it is an ornament to the place. His house is progressing finely and promises to be a comfortable and commodious one.

R. Wiggins has a good frame house ready for the masons.

Wm. Britton has moved the old barn again and added twenty feet in length, and is putting on a fine gable roof making it one of the finest barns in this section. He also has the masons at work on the foundation of his new house, which for roominess and comfort gives good promise.

There is a rumor on the breeze that we are to have a new firm; if it proves true will keep you posted.

L. A. Babcock received his appointment as post master and is making preparations to assume his office. We promise him a satisfactory term.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

The choir now sits in new chairs purchased by the church social society.

Quarterly meeting services were held at the Free Methodist church last Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. Joseph Osborn was able to attend the missionary meeting last week. Her many friends were glad to see her out again.

Mr. and Mrs. Boss have moved to Holloway so that they might be nearer their friends, Warren Holdridge's people who have had the care of Mr. Boss during his late affliction. He is now only able to sit up a short time each day but hopes to be able to get around with crutches pretty soon. The old people have lived here a long time and gained many friends who now regret their change of residence.

Those who assisted in entertaining the strangers who were here last week Wednesday and Thursday, did themselves great credit, by the willingness and united spirit manifested during the Missionary meeting. Ridgeway takes the lead yet when she undertakes anything of this kind.

Decoration services will be observed Monday, May 31st. The Post at Britton have charge. The program will appear in due time.

Mrs. D. W. Loree is visiting friends at Mattawan.

Prof. H. C. Wilson will superintend the schools at Northville next year.

Corn is being planted very irregularly this year. Time will tell which proves best, early or late planting.

Quarterly meeting next Saturday and Sunday. Presiding Elder Joslin will be present and preach Saturday evening and Sunday morning.

School close this week Friday one month earlier than usual to allow the work of constructing the new building to be begun. Miss Hattie Moon has had charge of the school the entire year which she has conducted to the unusual satisfaction of the district.

The cemetery does not present a very attractive appearance this spring. Every one who has a lot should feel an interest in making it look tidy between now and decoration day. Many of the head stones are leaning badly and some have fallen over entirely and need resetting. The cemetery fund on hand or available amounts to something over $300. Why not appropriate a sufficient amount of this to place the yard in a more attractive condition. This is surely a matter worthy the consideration of the board of health.

The death of Mrs. David Coryell occurred last Tuesday morning. She will be much missed in this community and in the church of which she was a very active member. She was very sick about a month since when it was supposed she could not recover, but did sufficiently to be out again and attend the church of her choice. Her final sickness was of a severe character, terminating life in a very few days. A feeling of gloom rests upon this vicinity and much sympathy is expressed for the bereaved family.

ONSTED ODDS.

Mrs. G. R. Daniels is slowly recovering from her illness.

D. A. Sigler has completed the sidewalk in front of his residence.

Boys, don't forget to take your woodchuck scalps to Lee & Son.

Rev. E. B. Sutton, of Adrian, organized a Good Templar's Lodge here last Saturday night.

A. M. Butterfield went to Detroit on a business trip Monday.

Onsted is soon to have a hotel. A number of men and teams are at work now digging the cellar and drawing stones. Report says the proprietor intends to have it done by the first of July.

Henry A Verrier has just returned from Kalamazoo, where he has been to see to the testing of the boiler of the steamer he is building at Devil's Lake. The boiler is made by G. H. Dutton & Co. It is made of steel stamped to bear a strain of six thousand pounds to the square inch, and the boiler is tested to two hundred pounds hydraulic pressure. Mr. Verrier is a good mechanic, and is taking all the pains possible to have a safe and comfortable boat and deserves to be well patronized. The float will be launched this week, and will be finished by the time the excursion season commences.

The Rev. Wm Stout, Wharton, Ont. states. After being ineffectually treated by seventeen different doctors for Scrofula and blood diseases, I was cured by Burdock Blood Bitters." Write him for proof.

PRATT, KANSAS.

Since our last "sorth" everything has been booming as lively as ever. Real estate keeps advancing and changing hands every day. The agricultural trade is very lively. Blain Brothers are doing a very large business with the Junior Deering binders they have taken orders and sold 62 up to May 6th. There are a good many coming in every day from all parts of the United States, some for speculation, others for work. The demand for carpenters is more than supplied and wages are being cut down some. The houses are mostly small, two and three room houses, and are very quickly built and mean shells when complete. What is needed most is a hotel with good accommodations. Two or three nights this week there was'nt a place to be had at any of the public places.

Business among the merchants is very dull. Some say they are not making expenses. Farmers are planting corn and some have begun cultivating. Oats and wheat look very well, but need rain very much. Several mornings this week it has been very foggy and damp. The wind has kept up a steady gale nearly all the week. Thursday, about eleven A. M. a sand and wind storm struck the village from the north-west. The sand flew like a cloud of smoke. The streets were so black with dust that it was impossible to see across the street. The little children that were on the street were so blinded with the dust they could not see or get their breath. The merchants went out and picked them up, took them in their stores and cared for them until the storm was over, or till their parents could find them. After the storm everyone looked more like a native of Africa, than a native born American. All the loose sand was blown out of the street leaving a hard, smooth surface.

There is considerable excitement here over the Rock Island R. R. and the Santa Fe R. R. also. The prospects are that both roads will come here in the next year. The Santa Fe has been surveyed and work is being done on the grade near Kingman.

Pratt will undoubtedly become quite a place in a few years, as several heavy moneyed men from the East have been investing quite extensively of late. As it is mail time, I will close for this time.

MR. POWDERLY ON THE BOYCOTT

The following letter is taken from the New York Star.

The press has condemned the boycott as practiced by the workingman. What has it to say of the boycott as practiced by the employer of labor.

Let me state a case as it occurred during the early part of this year. A manufacturer, employing hundreds of men, learns that the men have organized an Assembly of the Knights of Labor. He at once discharges every man of them. The men did not ask for shorter hours, more pay, or a change of any kind. A committee waited upon the manufacturer to ascertain his reasons for the discharge of his employees. His answer was "They have joined the Knights of Labor, and I will not employ a member of that society. I can manage my own business myself."

The men have been turned out on the street for exercising their rights under the laws which allow them to "pursue happiness" in their own way. They have been boycotted; their places have been filled by imported men. Will you give me your opinion, editorially, of such action as that?

Would you advise the men to sever connection with the order of Knights of Labor in order to regain their former positions? If so, would you advise them to give up their religion should the employer resort to the same coercive measures? In case the men belong to the Masonic order and the employer discharges them and refuses employment to them until they abandon that society, would you advise them to leave it in order to secure employment? If not, what would you advise? In case an employer makes war upon the Masonic order, would a discharged member of that organization be justified in telling a brother Mason of the injury done him? If the brother Mason is a merchant, and is handling the goods manufactured by the man who discharged his fellow member, would he be justified in refusing to handle these goods until the manufacturer made amends by re-employing the members of the order? Up to the present time the press has dealt with this question from but one standpoint. I believe it will deal fairly by it from all sides.

A copy of this letter is mailed to each of the leading journals. Do me the favor to make your reply on or before the 15th of this month if possible, and oblige the undersigned with a copy of the same.

Very truly yours,
T. V. POWDERLY.

SCRANTON, Pa., May 15.

THE CONGRESSIONAL CANVASS.

ADDISON, May 18, 1886.

EDITOR HERALD: I see you favor the renomination of Col. Eldredge for Congress this fall, and I wish to join my voice with yours in insisting that he accept, by so doing I not only speak for myself, but for the Democrats of this section, who admire Col. Eldredge as a soldier and a statesman.

We do not forget, that four years ago, when the Republican nomination in this district was considered equivalent to election, Democrats shrank away from the Congressional nomination and positively refused to take it. At this time Col. Eldredge, against his wishes, accepted it because he was a true Democrat. He made a gallant fight and was elected. He proved a valuable representative and was returned to Washington defeating one of the strongest Republicans in the district. Now the Republicans are pretty sure to renominate Capt. Allen. If they are bold enough to put up a defeated candidate, would it be weakening on our part if we don't insist that the old war horse who beat him before should beat him again?

Col. Eldredge is the man to nominate, whoever their candidate may be. He has made a safe, honest and faithful representative.

I see the Republicans are boasting that the second district will be wrested from the Democracy this fall. Whether it will be or not depends upon the wisdom of the Democracy in selecting a candidate. If we go before the people with Col. Eldredge he starts out with hundreds of soldiers and conservative Republicans, who will endorse his excellent public record and thus insure his election by a handsome majority.

AN ADDISON DEMOCRAT.

THE LABOR PROBLEM.

In beginning this second article in the series which I am invited to write, [illegible] of the working man, I remark that the general condition of labor in this country is not commensurate with its needs, nor its deserts, is generally conceded and amply proven by statistics. That railroads may pay dividends upon watered stock the laborer is employed 10 hours a day, fined on the road the bonds of kings or czars. That railroad kings may buy legislatures and courts, the foreign must sell their wheat and corn at less than it costs to raise it. The shoe shop goes busy and the employe of the mill has no bread, and yet the price of wheat or the wages of labor has no influence upon the price of the products of labor. The shoe manufacturers combination regulates the price of shoes, and the number of months in the year the shops may run. The Western Miners' Association regulates the price of lead, and how much shall go through the barrs. The freight on the farmer's grain is regulated by the railroad pool—everything is regulated by combinations and conventions except the wages of labor, which is left to competition and the "law" of supply and demand. Taking advantage of these conditions, hiring labor where it is cheapest, and selling the products of that labor where it is highest, heedless of results, capitalists have brought about a state of affairs in which strikes and lockouts seem to germinate spontaneously.

I do not wish to go into any theoretical discussion of the relations of capital and labor. That labor is the creator or first cause of capital; the charitability of capitalists in employing labor at all, when they could live on the interest of their money—these are themes for political economists of the Edward Atkinson and Prof. Sumner school. What most interests the workingmen of America, and the people generally, is a practical, definite solution of the difficulty. The remedies which the workingmen themselves suggest may not be the true ones; but inasmuch as the problem most nearly affects them, as to them they give their best thought, it may be well at least to know their views. In the first place, the laboring men demand of Congress the repeal of laws upon which are based the monopoly of land, means of transportation and money. While 200,000,000 acres of land have been given to railroad companies, nearly as much more is in the possession of home and foreign syndicates, controlling in many instances 1,000,000 acres each. Capitalistic syndicates are buying up the land, or getting it by fraud, and then these lords of the soil charge such rents as to drive our population into the cities where they are used by the barons of the factory to reduce wages, or are starved like rats in a trap. At this time 23 per cent of our population is congregated in large cities, and this tendency of population to concentrate is one of the alarming effects of land monopoly. Cobbett compared London to a great wen on the fair face of England. Chicago and New York are social carbuncles upon the American body politic.

The railroad monopoly, by taxing all traffic what it will bear, is virtually in a position to command all prosperity or produce all ruin. Today the railroads, like an iron boa constrictor, encircles the continent in its deathly embrace, extorting toll from farmer, merchant and manufacturer, robbing labor, dipper and then, by going into the hands of a receiver, fleecing the stockholders. It is in railroading that Mr. Gould has made a fortune of $100,000,000 in 20 years, while Rev. H. W. Beecher, in 40 years, has had from all sources an aggregate income of only $770,000. It must be remembered, too, that Mr. Gould's roads are always bankrupt and in the hands of a receiver. If they are not when he assumes control, he gets them there as soon as possible. The inference would seem to be that there is more money to be made out of a road that does not pay expenses than one that does; but really the gain is in being able to use the United States courts, marshals and troops to terrorize any who might feel inclined to object to work for him at 90 cents per day.

These are the principal demands of Congress by the laboring men. The money feature is too intricate to be discussed here. It is claimed by them that the issuing and power to control the volume of money in circulation has been surrendered by the government to corporations, national banks, and that these, in conjunction with other corporations, contract and expand the volume of money in circulation at their pleasure, that the money of the country is periodically "cornered" and locked up in banks, for the purpose of causing failures and bankruptcies.

Aside from the legislative remedies suggested by the workingmen in their conventions, assemblies and unions, there are social and economic remedies proposed. The first of these in point of time is arbitration. As an immediate and available means of palliating the intensity of labor troubles arbitration is unquestionably of great value. Much of the difficulty arises from the want of an understanding between the employer and the owners of factories are stockholders in a joint stock company, and have nothing whatever to do with the business but to receive their dividends. The entire management is left to superintendents, who think they benefit their employers most when they least employ, antagonize and reduce the wages of the employes. The third report of the New York Bureau of Labor Statistics, just issued, showed that over 80 per cent of the 921 strikes in that State in 1885 were caused by the opposition of organized capital to the organization of labor. It was money unions locking out labor unions. Evidently the remedy here is to bring the parties together and let them fully understand each other. "Come, let us reason together," is a divine injunction, which, if adopted as a motto by both capital and labor, would do much to harmonize all differences and put us on the road to a better industrial system and to an industrial prosperity. The miners and mine operators of the third Illinois mining district have just closed their convention, at which an arbitration board was selected. Four miners and four operators were elected, these to elect a ninth man from among the citizens. This board met this week in Springfield, elected Hon. Milton Hay as the ninth man, and proceeded, without difficulty, to satisfactorily adjust the prices of mining all over the district.

Col. W. P. Rend, an extensive coal operator in the Hocking Valley districts of Ohio, stated before a legislative committee of that State, that strikes were ultimately traceable to two causes—inordinate greed of gain on the part of employers, and their unwillingness to meet their men upon a level and explain to them the situation and to hear in turn their grievances. A large number of States, notably Ohio, Massachusetts and New Jersey, have passed laws authorizing boards of arbitration, and Congress recently enacted such a law. Of the strikes of the past year 246 have been arbitrated by the Executive Boards of the Knights of Labor, district and general, and a large number of strikes prevented by arbitrating differences before strikes occurred. But as yet no vigorous measures have been taken. The arbitration laws in existence all say "parties may," and not "parties shall;" hence many employers refuse to arbitrate with high priced men when low priced men stand at the doors of their shops ready to work at any wages. Police, militia, blood follows, as a natural result. Nothing would do more to harmonize labor troubles, while a competitive wage system continues, than the mutual acquaintance and understanding between the two forces which would come from arbitration. I am strongly in favor of a compulsory arbitration law which shall forever render strikes and lockouts impossible, if it can be shown that such a law would so prevent these strikes. But, after all, arbitration is but a remedial measure. It will do as a pain killer; and while it will doubtless prove an excellent poultice for a boil, it has about it no properties to purify the blood. While there is anything to arbitrate, the question is not settled. To be efficient, these laws must be compulsory, courts must be instituted for the purpose, and in time these courts will be bribed and bought, like our more pretentious ones; laborers will accuse their own men of "selling out," and the ultimate result would be strikes against the terms of arbitration. A prominent capitalist said of arbitration: "It would only make more contracts for us to evade."

As a bridge across the Red Sea of present labor troubles, as a link in the chain of a peaceful industrial progress, the value of arbitration cannot be overestimated. As a finality, as a solution of the question, it is deceptive. Peace has nothing to arbitrate.

What we want is not arbitration of our quarrels, but the end of quarreling, unison of purpose, perfect peace between the two factors of production—capital and labor. Peace, but not the peace of slavery. In my next article I will give a sketch of the two real remedies for our trouble, the extent to which they have been adopted, and the success achieved. These remedies are profit sharing and co-operation. Let us have done with monopolies of land, transportation and money. Let us come together as employer and employe, upon the basis of a thorough understanding of each other's needs, and then we can discuss the other steps to be taken, and the material to be used, in weaving a wreath of perfect peace about the brows of these twin children of our civilization.

—In order to better the condition of the village clergy the Holy Synod of Russia encourages the establishment of loan and savings banks exclusively for clergymen. —Mrs. Maggie Van Cott, the evangelist, says that during the past seven years she has delivered 1,978 sermons, conducted 5,094 meetings, spent 8,148 hours in churches, written 8,199 religious letters, brought 12,667 seekers to the altar, traveled 71,270 miles, received 4,330 converts on probation and baptized 1,086 persons. Mrs. Van Cott was born in New York City in 1830.—N. Y. Tribune.

—An observant spectator, who attended a very fashionable church recently, returned to his hotel. "Did you have a good sermon?" he was asked. "Good enough for anybody," he replied; "but the people didn't listen to it." "Why not?" "Well, if you ever go to a church like that, and keep your eyes open, you will discover that the men go there to look at the women, and that the women go to be looked at and to look at each other." Now is this true?—Chicago Journal.

—The Concord (N. H.) Monitor points out that one of the greatest of the advantages of the new school law is its flexibility. Scholars can be placed in the schools which they can best and most advantageously attend. Under the old district system, this was practically impossible. A boy might live at an equal distance from a school of ten weeks and one of twenty; but if it happened that his home was in the district in which the ten weeks school was held, he was compelled to attend that school.

—Talk about equality of the sexes! A man was clubbed in a New York theater, for keeping his hat on, and it was in evidence that he sat in the back row. It was not a very high hat, either. HOME EDUCATION.

of an Important Question.

That affection which pervades every happy household and transmutes the most menial services for the comfort of those we love into acts of pleasure, often misleads a mother to take burdens upon herself that belong to her family. She does not reflect that she is fostering a spirit of selfishness and laziness in her children that will bring their future, and render them disagreeable to others, as well as hinders their general improvement. It is [illegible] easier for her a thousand times to do a thing herself than to show others how to do it, or to wait on their slow movements when she is in a hurry, that it is not surprising that the quick, active mother does really [illegible] to a mere machine for running the home.

Of this fact she may rest assured. What she may gain in the gratitude of her family (though this is doubtful), she loses in their respect, and when respect steps out, indifference and frequently contempt, is sure to step in. Let Johnnie put away his own boots and hat, call Katie from play to hang up her tippet and sacque. They may not do it as neatly and quietly as the mother might wish, but, for all that, it is their place to do it. If they heedlessly rush in with muddy feet, let it be their work to sweep up the mud, even if they do it in a careless, slovenly way. Better be imperfectly done than that the mother should do it for them. It takes patience and valuable time to train a family of stirring boys and girls to wait on themselves, but it is positive unkindness to them not to do it.

One of the requirements of a friend of mine was, that her little boy should fill up the wood-box each morning before going to school. For a few days the task was promptly performed, but one rainy morning Benny slipped off, leaving the box empty. His mother having occasion soon after to replenish the fire, discovered that he had shirked his duty. What did she do? In her mind it was a momentous question. Should she overlook the neglect this time, it being the first offense? Would it not be easier to go to the wood-house and get the wood herself, than to go through the rain to bring her son to do it? But far more than present expediency or easy methods, she regarded the importance of impressing Benny with the idea that the work was his, and not hers. Accordingly overshoes and waterproof were donned, and taking her way to the school-house, through the driving storm, she had Master Benny excused for half an hour to perform the forgotten task, thus settling the matter beyond a peradventure for all time to come. Had she filled the box herself that morning, she doubtless would have continued to do so half the winter, or been obliged to each time regularly remind the boy of the job—a task far more wearing on a busy mother than any child dreams of.

It is a mistaken idea that five or six hours of school daily should furnish a boy or girl exemption from performing light duties about the house. Allowing sufficient time for recreation and sports, that child is happiest who is frequently occupied in doing something useful. It dignifies and fills him with a respectful self-consciousness and a confidence in his own powers that leads him to successful ventures on his own account as he grows older.

Praise is a most potent factor in developing the latent powers of a little one, and lends an impetus to its desires to help; especially is this so if we repeat to it any little complimentary hotice or remark made by outside acquaintances on its good conduct. Very few children realize that their actions are noticed by older people, and while it is unwise to lead them to think they are objects of constant notice, it is often productive of much good to let them know their behavior in public places, their politeness at home, etc., are occasionally commented upon by ladies and gentlemen. A boorish boy or girl who enters the parlor at home without a bow or salutation to the visitor who may be present certainly can not hope to be remembered as pleasantly by the guest as the one who has a smile and a "good morning" ready, or a simple recognition of some sort.

A mother is always mortified in company to be forced to ask: "Johnny, can't you say how d'ye do to Mrs. Jones?" or "Katie, did you speak to Mrs. Smith?" when her child comes in and looks around with a rude stare, or totally ignores the presence of a stranger. These bad manners sometimes arise from bashfulness, but, if so, a parent can not too carefully and assiduously help the victim to overcome it. A certain reticency is always pretty in a half-grown boy or girl, but it can be carried to so disagreeable an extent that it impresses one almost as unfavorably as the pert chatter of those given to forward children who interrupt the conversation of their elders every minute or two with their opinions, and who can be silenced only by a succession of positive and severe reprimands.

There are some exceptions, but it may be safely set down as a rule that the actions and conversation of children are true indices of their home atmosphere.

A child who is familiar with the titles of good books, though he knows nothing of their contents, who expresses himself easily and grammatically, betrays the fact to every observant person that his parents are people of culture. The little miss who descants of the fashions, tells how much the plush on her cloak cost, the number of ruffles on her last new dress and fluently describes the latest styles in hats, just as fluently tells to the world that her mother is a silly, rapid creature, whose highest aim is to outdo everybody in dress.—Harry Green Grimes, in Country Gentleman.

—The neglect of stock in the spring entails heavy loss all through the summer; especially is this true with horses that have to carry the burden of spring work. Without making superfluous flesh, they should be gradually fed up and kept at work sufficient to harden them, so that when the plowing has to be done, they will be in good working order.—Western Rural.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our Regular Correspondent

WASHINGTON, May 14, 1886.

[illegible] advanced and thousands of measures have been presented that cannot have a chance of being passed or even considered. Still new bills pour in every week, and others will continue to come until the session expires. Among the latest new entries is one for imposing a fine of $10 on our lawmakers for absence at roll call without leave. It has been suggested also that the fund thus accruing from Congressional delinquencies shall be appropriated to defray the expense of Congressional funerals.

It was Representative Beach of New York who proposed this penalty for absence. It was also he, who, some weeks ago, introduced a resolution to have the rules of the House so amended that all eulogies of deceased members should be delivered in the House on Sundays, and that on such occasions the public shall be admitted to the floor of the House as well as to the galleries. This is to provide an audience for the eulogists. One of the features of the present plan is that as soon as the memorial services begin, the Congressmen nearly all desert their seats and leave the orators to talk in an empty hall.

Speaking of bills reminds me that up to this date 8,740 measures, besides 571 resolutions have been introduced in the House of Representatives alone this session. Of these, the House has passed 174 public, and 655 private bills. This seems to be very slow work, but a frequenter of the galleries who knows that almost every unimportant question gives rise to a protracted debate, does not wonder that legislation lags.

The bills already introduced exceed by several hundred the whole number presented during both sessions of the last Congress. And do you know what will goes through? I mean the output through which each one of these thousands of bills passes? The experience of a House bill is varied. Some of them have come to be old veterans by serving in many Congresses, and are sallowed and shrivelled with age.

After a bill is introduced it is read twice at the clerk's desk. If then its numerous hieroglyphics not in line is held upon its back to show more it is to be consigned. Then it is numbered and registered in a book and printed. The most active part of its existence is being printed. If it is a full run it is printed six times. It is printed when first introduced; then it is reported from the committee it is printed, when it is passed by the House it is over is it is again printed. Then the Senate prints it. When it is reported by the Senate committee it is again printed, and again when it becomes a law. After that it has to be printed in the statute books. Meanwhile it has been towed away in the document room and on the calendar of the committees, has been discussed and probably hissed and cut to pieces; has been objected to and threatened in the House, and solemnly sat upon in the Senate. This is the experience of the simplest and most unimportant bill. The appropriation bills suffer more at the hands of the printer than this. They are first printed as estimates, then as unofficial forms of the bill, then the bill as adopted by the committee is printed. When it passes the House it is printed, and again when it reaches the Senate. It is next printed as it passes the Senate. When it comes out of conference if it goes to conference it is printed as an act, and after that it is printed in the statute books.

A bill that has never been in Congress before and is fresh and new, has literally come in the pocket of a member as fresh and new as itself, or has been written by some insinuating person outside, and introduced by request. The average member of Congress although he delights in introducing as many bills as possible, does not like to write them. He will frequently take a bill that has done service in many different causes, and will chop and hash and interline it, and patch it together as a new bill. Many of the private bills have done service through many Congresses and for many persons, merely the name in it being changed every time it was introduced. It has been suggested as a means of preventing the House being flooded with so many bills, that every bill introduced must be in the hand writing of the man who offers it.

The disagreeable operation of forcing liquids into the head, and the use of exciting snuffs are being superseded by Ely's Cream Balm, a cure for catarrh, cold in the head and Hay Fever. It is a safe and pleasant remedy being easily applied with the finger. It is curing cases which have defied medicine. Price 50c.

FOR BURNS, SCALDS, BRUISES and pain and soreness of the flesh, a grand household remedy is Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. Be sure you get the genuine.

Bryon never uttered truer words than when he said: "Physicians end or end us." But while doctors agree, all the world has agreed that there is no remedy equal to Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

Lesson 8. May 23.

JESUS AT BETHESDA.

John v. 1-16. Golden Text, John v. 6. Time, A. D. 28, probably about the Passover, though the exact time is not a settled question. Place, Jerusalem, at the pool of Bethesda.

The country was astir. It was the celebration of one of their feasts and the people had gathered from far and near in the ancient city of Jerusalem. Jesus was there. Walking through the streets of the city, quietly watching the crowds and noting the varied incidents peculiar to such occasions. He came to a large pool of water, which was called Bethesda, "house of mercy." On its margin, along its steps, in the porches which charity had built at its side, were numbers of people afflicted with incurable diseases. There was a legend that at certain seasons an angel came down and troubled the water, and whoever first stepped into the pool after the troubling was healed of whatever disease he had. Such legends were common and were eagerly believed by the people and hence the great number of those whom Jesus found waiting for the moving of the water. He looked pityingly upon them. His heart touched with compassion. He could have healed them all with a word, but that would have defeated the great purposes He had in view. Yet, turning to one poor cripple, who had been diseased for thirty-eight years and who was friendless and alone, He asked him, "Wilt thou be made whole?" The man knew nothing of the character of his questioner and simply told of his misfortune in having no one to help him into the pool and how that others always got there before he did, and so one chance after another slipped from his grasp. "Rise, take up thy bed and walk," said the Master, and the poor cripple rose, gathered up his sleeping mat and went on his way. It was the Sabbath day and such an event naturally drew a vast crowd together in a few minutes and the miraculous cure was soon the all absorbing topic of discussion in the city. Jesus had quietly passed out amongst the crowd and so escaped identification, but later in the day He went into the Temple and there found the man he had healed. "Behold, thou art made whole." He said. "Sin no more, lest a worst thing come unto thee." The man at once went to the authorities and told them who it was who had healed him on the Sabbath day.

The storm of opposition which had been gathering in ecclesiastical circles for many months now found ready expression. Here was a man who did not work in harmony with them, and hence was not to be tolerated. And here was a man who healed the sick on the Sabbath day in defiance of their law. They gathered round Jesus with their fierce denunciations and brought Him before the authorities on the charge of Sabbath breaking. But His masterly defense threw them into confusion, as He declared Himself to be Divine, the Son of God, and co-equal with God, and they were obliged to set Him free.

It is a remarkable scene. There are the judges and authorities eager to convict the accused if possible. There is the man who was healed of his disease and then brought this storm upon Jesus. There is the Master, calm, dignified, patient, divine. This was, in a sense, the crisis of His life. Up to this time He had been practically unmolested, but from henceforth His movements were jealously watched. He was harrassed, and finally betrayed. This was the beginning of the end.

LESSON THOUGHTS.

1. The spiritual Bethesda has a cure for every one.

2. God gives us strength to do as He commands us.

3. We do not wait for emotions or feeling, mere troubling of the water, but turn your eyes to Jesus, the Savior of the world.

4. The Sabbath is yours. Make it holy by your deeds and lives.

The Verdict Unanimous.

W. D. Sult, Druggist, Bippus, Ind., testifies: "I can recommend Electric Bitters as the very best remedy. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles and was cured of Rheumatism of 10 years' standing." Abraham Hare, druggist, Bellville, Ohio, affirms: "The best selling medicine I have ever handled in my 20 years experience is Electric Bitters." Thousands of others have added their testimony, so that the verdict is unanimous that Electric Bitters do cure all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys or Blood. Only a half dollar a bottle at Last Saturday was a gala day for the slow-going people of Van Wert county. About nine o'clock the street parade was formed and marched through the principal streets, and presented as fine a display as was ever witnessed in the town. Everyone pronounced the show excellent, and second to none. The proprietors and managers are perfect gentlemen in every respect.—Van Wert, O., Republican.

A special from Montreal to the Detroit Free Press tells how two officers arrested two young fellows named [illegible] for stealing $5,000 from the Royal Bank of Lowell, where Nuthall was clerk. Nuthall was searched and $1,585 found on his person. Stacey only had $30 in his possession. Both belong to respectable families in Lowell, and had purchased bicycles at $130 and proposed to leave for the West in a day or two. We are sorry to hear that the wheels were temptation enough for the lads to make a lift on the till in order to procure them.

Two weeks ago the Adrian Bicycle Club (No. 3) was organized under rather peculiar circumstances. It seems that Bert —— applied for admission to the L. A. W., with the statement that he was a member of the Adrian Bicycle Club. The business manager of the club objected to such prevarications, and accordingly informed the L. A. W. officials. In order to clear the lad, a number of his friends clubbed in and organized what they called the "Adrian Bicycle Club."

The lovers of bicycling sports were favored with an examination of the "Apollo," a very fine looking wheel, which is owned and was ridden over by H. Hedges, of Adrian, last Saturday afternoon.

Geo. Graves and Herbert Hedges, of Adrian High School, were in the city Saturday afternoon, taking in the sights. We saw them headed for the Globe Mills and wondered if they were going in bathing.

Bicycling racing is announced on the bills for next Saturday. Who is going to take the belt?

League Meet of the Michigan Div. L. A. W. is to be held in Detroit on June 24th. Let all interested attend and make the "meet" a grand success.

League ticket No. 7065 has been lost. The finder will confer a great favor by returning it to Levi C. Hayden.

Economy in cost of twine per acre.

Our BUNDLE CARRIER saves the labor of at least one man. The bound bundles are left in heaps and in line convenient for shocking, and thus labor is saved in performing that work. Another saving, and one that should not be overlooked, is of grain that is shelled and lost with the usual mode of delivery, by dragging the bundles together by hand when shocking, also by the trampling of the horses at corners—its use enabling the driver to keep the corners clear of bundles. We claim that we have the only successful bundle carrier.

We handle our own Twine and make it Specialty of keeping the best quality on hand and sold as low as any other house of equal quality.

The Clinton Local of last week contains a column of abuse heaped upon the editor of the HERALD because we have seen fit to discharge a correspondent and tell the truth about her. We have only a word to say in reply. It is evident that Mr. Miles heard Mrs. Gray's story. It is equally evident that he has not heard the other side. Now, it happens that we are fully posted on both sides of this controversy, and we have no desire to have any further participation in this Franklin neighborhood quarrel. If Mr. Miles chooses to thrust the Local into the fire and get scorched, that is his privilege, but we respectfully decline. We also decline to be drawn into a controversy with Mr. Miles on this subject. When a newspaper editor opens his columns to a scurrilous attack on a brother editor without a scrap of testimony to substantiate it, except the word of a correspondent who has been discharged for persistent and wilful falsification, he puts himself beneath the notice of an honorable competitor.

AN ANNIVERSARY SERMON.

At the Presbyterian church last Sunday morning, an anniversary discourse was given by the Pastor Rev. W. H. Babbitt, that day being the 8th anniversary of his settlement over the congregation. Allusion was made to the pleasant relations that had subsisted between the pastor and people. The year just closed was stated to be the 50th of the church's existence. In it 40 members of the congregation had been removed by death. There had been 20 added to the membership, nine of them on profession of their faith. The Sunday school was growing in attendance and a large proportion of the members of the school were regular attendants at church. The importance of training children to attend the Sabbath services was dwelt upon and also of teaching them to observe properly the Lord's day.

The success of the efforts made to reclaim the unevangelized in the large cities last winter was spoken of as an encouragement to labor for the extension of the truth here.

The example of Mr. Pitts, long a deacon in the Tabernacle Congregational church, New York city, during the pastorate of Rev. J. D. Thompson, D.D., and a most ardent and successful worker in the church, and who at his death was a resident of Tecumseh, and an elder in this Presbyterian church, was quoted with commendation and urged for imitation. The silent growth in Christian character, which had been going on as the result of church services, and ordinances, and fellowship, was noticed. Also the fact that much good was being accomplished in ways that did not attract public observation. The vices and temptations of our modern civilization were made the theme of remark. The havoc made by intemperance in the ranks of the young was deplored, and all those forms of dissipation with which the young were tempted away from church and home on Sunday. An increasing interest in the benevolent and missionary work of the church was reported. The amount given for these objects this year, ending May 16th, was stated to be almost $1000.

The interest taken in the social gatherings and the weekly meetings for devotion was spoken of and the wish expressed that it should be still farther cultivated. A brief sketch of the way in which a pastor's time was spent was presented. The number of calls made in the year was stated to be about 400. Request was made that when the pastor's services were required he should be consulted beforehand concerning the time of the engagement. The church was stated to be out of debt and in a generally prosperous and encouraging condition. The discourse closed with an exhortation to those not yet thoroughly identified with the church, to give themselves to the cause it represents and to all to join hands and go forward with faith and courage to do the work of God.

W. & S. W. ANDERSON & Co.

Quite a stir has been created in the newspapers over the sale of a "peach blow" vase at the Art Sale in Baltimore for $18,000. A dispute has arisen as to whether the vase sold for $18,000, or only $15,000. Be that as it may, Henry E. Anderson has a fac simile of the celebrated "peach-blow" which he is selling at a figure within the reach of all.

A serious accident occurred to Robert Owens last Saturday afternoon. While at work tearing down the walls of the old West Branch school building, one of them fell burying him under it. He was picked out of the debris in an almost unconscious state and carried home on a dray, where it was found he had sustained severe bruises about the head and shoulders and the skin was all torn off from his left hand. He was immediately cared for and is now doing as well as could be expected.

The fire department was called out last Monday evening at about 8.40 o'clock in double quick time, the fire proving to be in Steger's photograph gallery over Wright's drug store, but before they could be of any service it was put out by a Babcock extinguisher and hand grenades. About $20 worth of scenery in the operating room was destroyed. The fire was started by a lamp exploding in the hands of Mr. Steger's son, who was also burned a little about the hands and clothing. The fire department made excellent time and were throwing water three minutes after the alarm sounded.

In the tent devoted exclusively to the menagerie division of this enterprise are so many rare attractions and interesting studies that one finds considerable difficulty in selecting a starting point of description. The circus proper is truly one of the neatest and cleanest divertisements of its kind ever offered for the suffrages of Detroit audiences. It is worthy of special observation that the proprietors actually give their patrons more in the way of a circus than they advertise to give. This is carrying conscientiousness into a field of operations where it has not hitherto resided long enough to become very well acquainted. Let the public remember this when they hear the Barr Robbins show mentioned.

N. Morse went to Elkhart, Ind., last Monday.

Mrs. M. A. Freeman spent last Sunday in Toledo.

E. C. Rauch, of Monroe, was in town last Monday.

John Thorp, of Toledo, was in town last Sunday, attending the funeral of Lyman Thorp.

All persons indebted to me will please call and settle their accounts, as I intend to go out of business.

GEO. HEESEN.

We have received from C. H. Smith, a copy of the Wilburn Argus, a new paper just started at Wilburn, Ford Co., Kansas.

The blanket matinee, which was advertised to take place on Bills' track last Saturday, was postponed till next Saturday.

The W. C. T. U. of Tecumseh meets in the opera house every Friday P. M. at 3 o'clock. A cordial invitation to attend these meetings is extended to all.

We are indebted to J. D. Arner for a copy of the Kansas City Times, which contains an account of the big cyclone which struck that city on the 11th of May.

Ed. Williamson is canvassing the townships of Clinton and Tecumseh for Gough's last work, "Platform Echoes." He ought to sell a large number of copies in these towns.

The ladies social of the Universalist church will meet Thursday, May 27, in the afternoon and evening, at the residence of Homer Bickford, the farm known as the Mosher place, on the Adrian road in Raisin. All are invited.

F. A. Dewey, of Cambridge, went to Lansing, May 17th, to meet with the State Pioneer Historians; also to assist in making arrangements for the annual State Pioneer meeting, which will be held in the Capitol, at Lansing on the 8th and 9th of June.

Capt. C. R. Miller, of Adrian is favorably mentioned as the candidate for Congress on the Republican ticket this fall. Capt. Miller would make a lively race, and he is well equipped for the position in case the official honors should fall to his lot. The Republicans could go farther and fare worse.

Mrs. M. A. Freeman, of Tecumseh, wishes to call the attention of the ladies to her large line of Millinery just received, including Laces, Trimmed Goods, Flowers, etc. She also carries a nice line of Hair Goods, Switches, etc., and everything at the lowest possible prices. The ladies would do well to call at her rooms and examine her stock.

Another clew to the Crouch tragedy has been found. Some bloody clothing, consisting of two shirts and a pair of overalls, was found under an old stump on the Crouch line fence, by Gilbert Wilson, who lives on a farm adjoining the Crouch place. Ella Shannon has identified the shirts as being the same ones she saw behind a chest at Dan's house shortly after the Crouch murder.

Thursday was a magnificent day. The streets were filled with people. Barr Robbins' great show arrived in the city at an early hour and pitched their tents on the old fair grounds. The street parade at 10 o'clock was one of the best ever seen in Fremont. The circus was an excellent performance and was witnessed by huge audiences, both morning and evening.—Fremont, O., Journal.

On Tuesday evening, the 26th inst., the Hotchkiss family of bell ringers will give an entertainment at Clinton. The troupe is a very fine one, and the proceeds will be given to the Episcopal rectory fund. The concert is held under the auspices of the ladies of St. John's church, which is a sufficient guarantee that it will be a success. We hope to see a good delegation from Tecumseh in attendance.

A SAD AND FATAL ACCIDENT.

Lyman Thorp Run over by a Train of Cars near Knob Noster, Mo. and Killed. The Remains brought Home for Burial.

Last Friday morning our citizens were startled by the intelligence that Lyman Thorp had been run over by a train of cars and killed. No particulars of the accident were given, but a simple statement of the fact, and that the body would be immediately cared for and sent home over the Wabash route. Not until Monday were the full particulars received, when Mrs. Thorp got the following letter from John M. Carr, giving the details of the sad affair. Knob Noster is a small village located on the Missouri Pacific R. R., about 25 miles west of Sedalia and 50 miles east of Kansas City.

KNOB NOSTER, MO., May 14, '86.

MRS. LYMAN THORP.—Though a stranger to you I feel it a duty prompted by sympathy to you in your distress, to write you the particulars attending the death of your husband which occurred at this place on yesterday evening, the 13th inst. He came into our town on a train from the west at about 3 o'clock P. M., did some canvassing and made a few sales of his wares, then went to the depot where he made a sale and had started for the hotel which is up town. Just at that time the fast mail was due, 4:32 o'clock. It does not stop here, but came thundering down at a high rate of speed. At this time Mr. Thorp was walking down the platform which runs parellel with the track. The engineer of the train saw him, but as he was on the platform, he had no thought that he would attempt to cross the track in front of the train, but just as the train neared the crossing Mr. Thorp turned and started across. The engineer whistled, but too late, as he was already struck by the pilot, or cowcatcher as it is called, and hurled into the air a distance of about thirty feet, striking the ground with his shoulders and back of his head; he then slid along on the ground a distance of thirty feet before stopping. The citizens soon gathered, and finding him unconscious, conveyed him to the hotel, where he partially recovered conciousness, but not sufficiently to make any communication although he was given a pencil and *paper to enable him to do so. Medi*cal aid was summoned and all the at*tention given*, possible, but to no purpose, as he peacefully breathed his last in about one hour and a quarter from the time he was struck, which made it about six o'clock P. M.

Being a stranger we were compelled to search his person and effects for a clue to identify him. The search revealed some business letters and also one from you and little Inez. He was washed and a suit of clothes bought, and put on him as tenderly as though he had been one of our own citizens. He was placed on ice in order to preserve the body until you could be communicated with as to what disposition should be made of the body. A telegram was sent you as soon as he was hurt, and another at his death, neither of which have been answered at this time, 2 P. M. 14th. The coroner is now holding an inquest on the body.

I have endeavored above to give you all the particulars, but should there be anything else you wish to know write me and I will do anything that I can to satisfy you.

May He who doeth all things well, bless you and support the fatherless children, is the sincere wish of your strange correspondent.

JOHN M. CARR.

Accompanying the remains were a floral wreath and a cross, with cards bearing the following words of consolation:

To Mrs. Thorp and Children: Please accept this floral wreath as a tribute of respect to your beloved husband, and the deep sympathy for you in this hour of affliction. It was made by the young ladies of our little city who wish to be remembered.

Respectfully,
YOUNG LADIES OF KNOB NOSTER.

To Mrs. Thorp and Children: Please accept our heartfelt sympathy for your deep affliction. The floral cross you will please consider indicative of the respect and tender care given to your beloved husband while with us. We are most respectfully your sympathizing friends,

W. C. T. U. LADIES.

The funeral services were held last Sunday afternoon at four o'clock, at the family residence, Rev. J. Phelps officiating. A large concourse of peo*ple assembled to show their sympathy* for the afflicted family. In addition to the floral offerings which were sent with the remains from Knob Noster, several beautiful designs were furnished by friends here in Tecumseh.

The deceased was 59 years of age on the 6th day of January last. He was born at Watertown, Jefferson Co., New York. When three years old his parents moved to Tecumseh, and this village has been his home ever since. He was married on the 3d of July, 1865, his wife, like himself, being a deaf mute. The union proved to be a very happy one. His widow and three bright, intelligent children are left to mourn the loss of a kind husband and father. One sister, Mrs. Hutchins of Detroit, and one brother, John Thorp of Toledo, survive him.

For the past two years Mr. Thorp had been traveling through the Northwestern states selling a patent apple corer, and was *realizing a fine in*come from the business. His untimely death blights the prospect opening before him for accumulating a nice property. He was a man of strict honesty and integrity, kind hearted and generous, and devoted to the *welfare of his family. Notwithstand*ing the infirmity which cast a shadow over his life, he was always cheerful, always temperate, and industrious and performed to the utmost his duties as a husband, father and citizen. He was universally respected and his sad death will be universally mourned.

CLIPPINGS AND CONDENSATIONS.

The Strawberry season is likely to come on several days earlier than usual this year.

Prof. Bird has been re-engaged as Principal of the East side Union school for another year.

The Dundee Reporter has begun its fourth volume. Bro. Carr makes an excellent newspaper. He deserves all the patronage he gets and more too.

Walter Fowler, of Tecumseh, is dividing his time between earnest researches in materia medica, in Dr. House's office, and playing Beethoven's sonatas on a slide trombone.—Adrian Times.

The "Pennock" road-maker is being tried by the village authorities this week. It is doing good work, *and appears to give better satisfac*tion than the "Waldo," the machine tried a week or two ago. The "Pennock" machine, if any, will probably be purchased by the village board.—Blissfield Advance.

One of our subscribers came in the other day to notify us that his hens were all on a strike. He said his wife sent their little girl out to the barn to hunt for some eggs, and in a short time she came in saying: "Ma, I guess our hens have struck, as I can't find an egg, and there's a dozen hens standing around, doing nothing."—Adrian Press.

The editor of the Clinton Local began his career in a printing office when he was a mere lad, and following is the explanation he gives of his apparent ungodliness: "Shortly after our advent into the printing office, the minister looked straight at us, and in the course of his remarks he said: 'I tell you, brethren, we must keep the DEVIL out of the church.' We have not been there since."—Adrian Times.

Here is another trick that needs watching: "One sharper agrees to buy a farmer's land, and pays him $25 to bind the bargain. Another comes along and offers $500 more, and gets the promise of it, if the farmer can buy off No. 1, who soon comes around and insists on the fulfillment of this contract, but will give up for $200. This the farmer agrees to, and pays back the $25 and the $200, and the second purchaser never turns up.

Dr. Comstock, formerly of Weston, who rented an office and hung out his shingle here a few weeks ago, quite unexpectedly disappeared last Monday. He left behind no suffering patients and we are happy to say no sorrowful creditors; but whither he went deponents saith not. It is claimed that his hasty departure was owing to anticipated further trouble with his wife, whom he left or she left him, as the case may be.—Morenci Observer.

The County Gossip of the Adrian Times contains this item:

Where is Scove Stacy's hermitage? He alleges that Blissfield is to have the first circus of the season, on the 29th inst., but has heard never a word about Burr Robbins being in his town on the 28th. Jerusalem! Scove, come over and look at our bill boards.

Very handsomely put, but if the young man will wipe off his spectacles he will find an announcement in last week's HERALD that Robbin's show was booked for this town on the 28th. Whatever sins of omission or commission we may be guilty, we never omit to announce the advent of a circus.

Prof. Wilson, of the West Side school has accepted the superintendency of the Northville, Wayne Co., schools, for next year, at a salary of $900. Mr Wilson is a teacher whom the first District will be exceedingly sorry to lose, and whose place they will have no little difficulty in refilling. He has not only held the school up to the good standard it has occupied so many years, but has succeeded in advancing it quite a few steps. His wife, who has also taught in the primary department for a number of years will also retire from the school, as will also Miss Kate Willett, assistant to Mr. Wilson, who accepts a similar position in the Hudson school.—Blissfield Advance.

Those clever fellows, the lawyers, continue to smile contentedly, while the Bohemian oat troubles grow deep and still deeper. On Monday Jerome Miles, one of our brick and tile manufacturers, instituted a suit against that wealthy and enterprising farmer, Robert N. Sims, to recover the amount of a note which he (Miles) had paid Sims. The latter gentlemen, in his rather extensive oat operations, sold ten bushels of the cereal to Mr. Miles and received his pay in tile. Mr. Miles has retained as counsel J. R. Crowell; the same active attorney whom the B. O. agent, Armitage, engaged. Next Tuesday is the "return day" of this case, which will afford a new and interesting kind of test in the general fight against the Bohemian agents and note holders.—Morenci Observer.

Card of Thanks.

I desire to publicly express my gratitude to my numerous friends in Tecumseh and to those good Samaritans in a distant state, for their aid and sympathy in my recent affliction.

MRS. LYMAN THORP.

I wish to express my sincere thanks to the gentlemen who were so prompt in putting out the fire at my rooms. It would have resulted in a great loss to me, having I have lately bought a large book of photo material that is not been covered by insurance.

The boys know just what to do on such an occasion, and I am glad to live among them.

F. H. SPENCER.

Capt. C. R. Miller, of Adrian, was in town last Tuesday on business.

Under good management great actors are wonderfully and artfully advertised. Railroads, patent medicines, agricultural implements, &c. are extravagantly advertised; but there is nothing more successfully advertised than the "White" sewing machines. No line of merchandise is better or more favorably known than are the "White" machines. Every lady who has used them vouches for this statement. Over a half million "White" machines in that many homes, give the "White" advantage over all others.

—All kinds of fruits at Rawson's.

—The offer of a beautiful Bracket Lamp to purchasers of the "White Sewing Machine" extended to June 15th. Old sewing machines in good running order, $5 to $10. Tricycles and Bicycles for sale at low prices.

G. P. SPARKS.

—Come and try the new brands of cigars just received at Rawson's—"Extra Edition" and "Pinar del Rio," clear Havana filler and Samantha wrapper.

—Do you want your house painted? Call on Chiverall & McNeil.

—Landgraf has been with the people of Lenawee Co., in the sale of Sewing Machines 17 years, and can be depended upon in a fair deal every time.

—Do you want your carriage or wagon painted? Take it to Chiverall & McNeil.

—Do you want your rooms papered and decorated? Engage Chiverall & McNeil to do the job.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

The pretty village of South Macon, Mich., contains four acres, nicely situated, with a station that in one corner. Through the center of the village is a brook in which will run the year round. Within the bounds of this little farm you will find a great many forms of plant and animal life.

I wanted introduce you to day to one of the most curious of its inhabitants. Put on your rubbers for the sun has just risen and the heavy dew still lies on the grass—and we will take a walk out into the yard.

Almost the first thing which attracts your notice is a little heap of dried mud rising from amid the grass. It is three or four inches across, and from four to six inches high, and in the center is a round hole about an inch and a half in diameter, down which you can thrust a stick for some distance. Walk on a little further and you will find many of these tiny mounds; they appear in the most unlooked for places. Here is one in the middle of a hard beaten path; it is composed of earth as red as brick dust; not far off is another whose material looks like black muck mixed with sand of the same color; still further is another, built right in the midst of my onion bed. It is of stiff blue clay; still others are yellow, white or gray. The builders of these mounds evidently had an eye to variety. Their bright and varied colors correspond with the prevailing styles of house painting at present.

Look carefully at these little piles as you pass, and you will see fresh, sticky mud on the top of nearly every one. Remember it is early morning. Nowhere will you catch a glimpse of the workers, but by the traces they have left you may know that they have been busy toilers during the night. And let me say right here that all their work is done at night. In the two years I have been here, I have never seen one of them at work. Here is a mound built half way up the steep bank of the little stream. It looks like a miniature castle; something as I can imagine the mud towers of Persia look, of which we had a description in a recent number of Harper's magazine.

You find no fresh mud on the top of this one, which is about six inches high, but instead, the hole is neatly capped over, and you see written there as plainly as if in words, "No admittance except on business." The proprietor has finished his castle and retired from active duty. Close beside one of these mounds lies a skeleton, bleaching in the sun. I am sure, that like me, your readers will be eager to fathom this mystery. So we will go back to the house and get a spade, and make it our "business" to investigate. It takes but a touch of the hand to topple over this little castle, which though well and firmly built, is still to our hands, but a "castle in the air." Crunch goes the spade into the moist ground; down, down it goes following the course of the hole, one, two or three feet, till water is reached, and here, enjoying his snug and, as he thought, secure quarters, is the builder and owner of the castle. Let me introduce him to your readers. This is Sir Crow-fish, at your service.

He is not a handsome fellow. His body is covered with a horny armor, for Sir Knight must be able to defend himself against enemies. He has a scaly tail which he curls up under his body, and for his fore arms he has a pair of huge, ungainly pincers, which he is not slow to use when occasion requires.

And the skeleton? Well, there is not so much mystery about it after all. When his lordship has grown too big for his armor, the result of eating hearty dinners, he comes up and casts it off, and before long another and larger shell has grown to take its place. The cast off armor looks for all the world like the live knight that once wore it, but when you take it up you find it is only the empty shell.

Yours truly,
CHARLES S. DUTTON.

ONSTED ODDS.

Fred Wooden and Mrs. J. E. Gibbs are still on the sick list.

J. & P. Spaw commenced the masonry work on William White's new house Monday.

Onsted has a lodge of Good Templars. It starts in with forty-five charter members.

S. G. Aten is the first man we have heard report wheat headed out. On Monday he found a wheat head six inches long. Pretty good for May 24.

David Corwin intends to move to Marshall about June 1st. He will continue to work for the M. & O., but expects to work in the shops instead of on the road.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Spaulding of Cerogso spent Thursday night at this place. The house in which they were living was burned on Tuesday night previous. They lost a considerable portion of their household goods. They were insured so their financial loss will not be great.

Hayner & Langstaff's Uncle Tom's Cabin Co. exhibited here Monday evening. The show is fair, but the tent is altogether too small for such places as Onsted. About a hundred men and boys took reserved seats on boards laid on the ground in front of the stage.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS.

BY REV. P. B. FITZWATER.

LESSON IX. MAY 30. JESUS FEEDING THE FIVE THOUSAND. John vi. 5-14. Golden Text: I am the living bread which came down from heaven. John vi. 51.

The place of this miracle was the plain of Batanea, on the N. E. side of the sea of Galilee.

Nearly a year has passed since our last lesson, a year which has been full of wonderful events in the life of our Lord and those with whom He came in contact. Crowds daily gathered to hear Him speak and they continually brought their sick and disabled to Him for healing. With His disciples He took a boat and went over the Galilean lake to a spot which was uninhabited and lonely, that He might the more easily hear his disciples tell the story of their recent missionary work, and that He Himself might have needed rest. His movements were watched and on His arrival He found a large concourse of people waiting for Him. As His boat drew near the shore He could see the grassy slopes covered with people who had followed Him. Passing amongst them, He healed their sick with a word or a touch divine, and then seating Himself He taught them of those higher spiritual truths, which He came to teach and died to seal. Toward the close of day His disciples became anxious on account of there being such a large crowd, 5,000 men, besides women and children, out in that lonely place, without food. They wanted Christ to send them away so that they might go to the neighboring villages and buy food for themselves. But he told His disciples that they must feed the multitude. An inventory of their stock of food revealed five barley loaves and two small dried or pickled fishes.—They tell the story of the large quantity required and their own inability to fill it, to Christ, who at once gives orders to have the people seated in companies of fifties and hundreds. Thus sitting in companies, their richly colored Oriental costumes bright in the glow of the setting sun, made a picture which reminded Mark of a flower garden, and he describes them as sitting in ranks, or literary garden plats. Then Jesus took the loaves and the fishes and blessed them and gave to His disciples and they gave to the multitude and when they all had eaten enough, there were still twelve baskets or wallets full left of the fragments. There was more in the end than there was at the beginning.

Impressed with this wonderful miracle the people determined that this was the Messiah. Their idea was that the Messiah would be a temporal ruler who would strike the deathblow of Roman power and set their country free. They began whispering among themselves and it soon became apparent that they desired to take Jesus to Jerusalem and proclaim Him king. This temptation of material power had always been before Him and He sends His disciples back to the boat, and dismissing the multitude to their homes, retires to a lonely place to pray. Tired of waiting, the disciples push off from shore and are caught in a terrible storm. When it seemed as though they could not possibly survive it and make land they are suddenly startled by seeing Christ walking on the water. At His word the wind is hushed to silence, the storm obeys its Master, and they reach the land in safety.

LESSON HINTS.

1. Christ can still the storms of life.
2. Christ feeds the hungry multitude with the bread of life.
3. God uses means. He bids us distribute the bread.
4. Christ always helped those who had what they might.

The Thirty-ninth Star of the Union.

The Bridgeport Times says editorially: "The admission of Dakota into the Union is a subject of much importance. In the debate upon the question in the United States Senate on Dakota's bill, and which is elaborately printed in the Congressional Record, Senator Vest, of Missouri, paid a high tribute to the merits of an article of world wide repute which is manufactured by a Baltimore house. Coming from such a source, this praise is gratifying, although legislators of other commonwealths have most publicly spoken in a similar manner concerning them. Hon. W. A. E. West Erskine, of the South Australian and Hon. Godfrey Sidney, of the South African Parliaments. Both of these gentlemen, like Senator Vest, said that the article referred to, St. Jacobs Oil, is an absolute cure for rheumatism and takes away all pain. It may be added that by a recent order of the Receiver General of Inland Revenue of Great Britain, St. Jacobs Oil will in future be admitted free of duty to Ireland and several other British isles. No house better deserves such success than The Charles A. Vogeler Company, and certainly none has met with more.

How many bald heads you see. Care, worry, disease, dissipation. These do it. Parker's Hair Balsam stops falling hair and restores gloss and youthful color. Exceptionally clean, elegant a perfect dressing, not greasy. Prevents dandruff.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, May 21, 1886.

The United States Senate is busy with the peoples money. It has passed a remarkable pension bill which, it is alleged, Senators are too intelligent and many of them too honest to have voted for, had they known that it could never become a law. The new measure grants a service pension, pure and simple, to every person who fought on the Union side during the late war, and who is not entitled to a pension by reason of disability incurred in the service, but is now disabled and dependent upon his own exertions for support. It gives all such persons a pension of from $4 to $24 a month, and it also provides pensions for the dependent parents of men who died in the service, or from disabilities contracted therein.

The attack made upon Speaker Carlisle in his own city of Covington because of a recent appointment, which he was influential in having made, is not considered here as likely to result in any harm to him, personally, or politically. The Speaker is very popular in Congress with both parties, and the usual comment is, in effect, that his constituents cannot afford to retire him for the satisfaction of a grudge relating to spoils.

Many of the admiring friends of Lieutenant Greeley, the Arctic explorer, are urging his appointment by the President to be major and assistant adjutant general in the place made vacant last week by the death of Colonel Benjamin. Many newspapers, notably in the West, have joined heartily in the proposition. Their wishes are confronted, however, with a statute which provides that appointments to this position must be made from among the "captains of the line" of the army. As there is no prospect of Lieutenant Greely becoming a captain at an early date, the proposed appointment is an impossibility.

After scores of years of patient waiting the French spoliation claimants obtained a hearing before a federal court, began their argument, and this week a decision was made in their favor. The celebrated claims arose from seizures by French privateers of American merchant vessels between 1793 and 1801. They were pressed by the United States upon France while France urged other demands upon us. Finally, by the treaty of 1800 the two sets of claims were set off, one against the other, and dropped from international controversy. Then the owners of the spoliation claims began to urge them upon the United States on the ground that by surrendering the rights of individuals for a national benefit the Government became bound to pay the citizens injured. Two acts were passed by Congress providing for payment, but one was vetoed by President Polk, the other by President Pierce. Finally Congress by an act approved by President Arthur, sent the matter to the Court of Claims for examination.

How some of the old merchant shipowners of President Jefferson's day would cry out from their graves if they could see into what a condition their descendants have let their pocketbooks and papers. Stock, bonds of assignment, pieces of the marine papers of administration and other documents which would be valuable as evidence in the specialty business, but, lost, always seem to go to the paper mill or to the fire. Few of the heirs of the sufferers from French spoliation have had the energy in the decade recently gone by to take care of such valuable papers which would be generously paid for if they could be found and given to their owners.

When Secretary Bayard and his daughters appear out from home walking or driving, they are clad in the deepest mourning. The Paragons of the young in his department are scarce. The Secretary wears a tall silk hat, with a band of mourning extending to within half an inch of the top. He walks with a light step however and looks well. I also noticed when the Bayard family were radiant along Pennsylvania Avenue in their carriage that their coachman and footman were in mourning livery. They wore black suits buttoned close up to their necks, black gloves and neckties while their tall hats had black bands around them and black rosettes at the top.

TECUMSEH, MICH., MAY 27, 1886.

Rev. Sam Jones has undertaken the task of banishing base ball from this country. We are fearful that he will find it a more difficult task even than was the conversion of Chicago.

County politics are already beginning to simmer, and the Congression-al pot is beginning to bubble. Don't get excited, gentlemen. It is a good many weeks before election day.

The base ball fever promises to develop into a very general epidemic this season, especially in Michigan. The extraordinary success of the Detroit League club has stimulated the formation of clubs in the interior cities, and the smaller towns are following suit. Tecumseh should be made at once to reorganize the Tecumsehs.

The Jackson Program is responsible for this item.

The types generise to some small cross-mistakes sometimes. An advertisement in a neighboring town wanted "Wheels for sale of cars." He must be advertising horses in Chicago paper, the types insisted on putting in the letter "c" instead of "h" in the advertisement. Read "Wheels for sale of hars." The young fellow didn't get mad, but made a reasonable charge for the error.

Who is in favor of hiring your boy out for a year?

If there is anything in the signs of the times, Grover Cleveland is the only candidate for the Presidential nomination. As yet he has not been nominated, but he will have a fine chance if the Democratic party should be unable to agree upon a candidate. If Randall and St. John should be nominated, it would be difficult, if not a very rash thing, to run Cleveland against the ticket. The Democratic party could have no better ticket than Cleveland and Hendricks, and it is quite certain to come to this arrangement.

Memorial Day will in more general than ever before be observed by the people of this country. It is striking that those who are most in sympathy with the principles for which our soldiers fought are most ready to forget the sacrifices made by the soldiers to secure to us the blessings of a free government. It is well and proper that we should be reminded of our indebtedness to the men who saved our country from dismemberment and ruin. The memory of the soldiers and sailors who fought for and gained our country should be cherished by the people for all time. It is well

HIBBARD'S RHEUMATIC SYRUP.

A GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER.

RHEUMATISM is caused by a retention of Morbid Matter in the system, and there is but when this matter attacks the HEART and kills instantly. The celebrated Dr. Cox, of Philadelphia, states that nine tenths of all fatal cases of

DANGER

HEART DISEASE

The New York Night School and the Good It Accomplishes.

[illegible] night school is only a night session of the day school—instruction in the day-school studies rather than in branches specially [illegible] fairly entered into the battle of life and who have no time to give to the feeling of their way through the many departments of education. Of all those who enter the night school [illegible] find what which is [illegible] to the needs of their lives, and [illegible] out discouraged and disheartened [illegible] educational methods generally.

In New York they have an evening [illegible] school [illegible] rather a school for [illegible] in special lines. It opens the first Monday in October and continues for one hundred and twenty nights. The requirements for admission are not severe. An applicant must read, write fairly well, spell decently, and understand arithmetic as far as vulgar fractions and their employment in the transactions of ordinary business. The applicant who is admitted is allowed to choose his own studies. He has his choice of Latin, grammar, political science, algebra, geometry, penmanship, bookkeeping, anatomy and physiology, German, French, Spanish, phonography, composition, architectural and mechanical drawing, free-hand drawing, chemistry, reading and declamation. He may take any one study, though he is expected to take two. Not more than two except in special cases. The purpose, it is seen, is to enable a person to acquire knowledge in that direction which he finds essential in his work or aims, or in which he is deficient. During the course he may abandon one study for another with the consent of the principal. If he has one study and thinks he has enough of it at the end of one hour, or if his occupations give him but an hour, he may go away of the end of the hour; or he may come at the beginning of the second hour. A student may spend one hour in a low class in one study and his next in a high class of another if he is fitted for it. The attendance averages one thousand, the pupils ranging in age from fourteen to sixty-five years. The older ones are of two classes—those who wish to brush up in a long-neglected study with which they have been familiar in youth, and those whose business or taste makes an acquaintance with a new study desirable—generally, in such cases, a foreign language. Some who come to brush up are fathers of boys whom they desire to aid in their studies. The majority, however, are young men from fourteen to twenty years old who are engaged in some occupation during the day. An interesting account of the school says:

"Of the 1,000 pupils, fully one-half study arithmetic and book-keeping. Not more than 40 take to Latin, 25 each to political science and the algebra and geometry course, which eventually runs into trigonometry and thins them out still further. In the three nightly grammar classes the attendance is from 150 to 175, and about the same number struggle with penmanship. The students of anatomy and physiology are comparatively few, not averaging more than 20 in each of the two classes. German is the most popular foreign language for study, engaging the attention of 150 students nightly. Spanish comes next, with probably two-thirds as many students, but it is increasing in interest yearly as young men grow to appreciate the business probabilities of development of our commercial interests in South America and Mexico. French is not much cared for, not half so much as Spanish, taking the number of students as an indication. About 175 young men start out at the beginning of each course with bright hopes of becoming expert phonographers, but at least one-third of them are brought to grief by the hooks and circles and word signs, and abandon the study before the season ends. There are forty students in the lower and thirty in the higher classes practicing architectural and mechanical drawing. Free hand drawing engages the earnest interest of an average of 125 pupils. The drawing classes are, from some points of view, the most interesting in the school, and the results of their labors being such as can have tangible demonstration, enable the getting up of a very pleasing and highly creditable exhibition at the termination of each course. Every thing that the drawing students require in the way of tools and materials is furnished to them gratuitously by the city. The chemistry class only numbers about twenty-five students, all of whom are during the day employed in businesses wherein a knowledge of this science is desirable, if not absolutely requisite. The principal has one general assistant and twenty-five instructors to aid him.

Lectures are given to the political science classes on pertinent topics—on labor strikes and other timely matters—and the instruction in physiology is practical and experimental.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

NO REST FOR HIM.

The Victory and Consequent Tribulation of a Criminal Lawyer.

Major Gassaway, a prominent San Antonio lawyer, seemed tired and worn out on returning to his residence.

"You look tired, dear. I suppose you have had a hard day's work again in court," said Mrs. Gassaway.

"Yes, I'm very tired. I've had a difficult case, but I've won it."

"You had better take a cup of tea, and then go to bed and take a good night's rest."

"No rest for me to-night. I'll have to sit up and watch the stable with a shotgun to see that the carriage horse is not stolen."

"Why, who is going to steal it?"

"You see, I was defending one of the worst horse thieves in Western Texas this afternoon, and I cleared him. He is free-loose now, and I am afraid he will come around to-night and steal my horses. Nobody's horses will be safe until that double-dyed scoundrel is out of town."—Texas Siftings.

the brain of any person and my will, by means of the nervous aura communicated through my fingers. Now [illegible] I will arouse your powers of pride and eloquence. Here, after some preliminary preparation, he touched the back and front of my head with his forefinger. I instantly became [illegible] the most creature in the world, and my tongue kept pace with my thoughts so that I addressed an imaginary audience with great fluency on my fitness for the Presidency of the country. With a passe [illegible] I became dull and stupid, and he succeeded in making me [illegible] so impossible to pen that he gently cut off one of my fingers without my feeling it in the least. Although I commanded [illegible] Another pass and I was [illegible] will power [illegible] him—for I [illegible] reasoned out the whole modus operandi of his discovery. Leaping toward him, I dipped my finger in a certain liquid which I instinctively knew to be right. I touched him at random and willed him to work. Instantly he began to count the glass bottles in the room; I willed him to work faster. His brow contracted and he began to estimate the number of square inches in a glass retort near at hand. Faster yet. He became intensely absorbed and worked out the most difficult mathematical formulae. I could now positively feel my will power, as it was so intense. I pressed him more and more. His brows contracted till they nearly covered his eyes. The veins on his temples started out. He passed from calculus to some unknown mathematical science, which he created step by step! Faster!

With a shriek he fell forward dead upon my breast. Intense work had produced an extreme case of that chemical change called softening of the brain, and the grayish white matter came pouring from his ears, nose and mouth, dripping down my clothing and falling in pools upon the floor, till his head was an empty shell.

The light burned dim, the storm shrieked without; I was alone with the corpse upon my breast, but nothing could allay the stimulation of my thoughts. Hideous images rose before me; imps and demons menaced me—pressed upon me—and then all was blank.

I repeat it, this story is true. What this man wickedly used for his own ends may be rediscovered to the benefit of humanity. May God prosper the search.—Louis Le Grand Beaulieu, in Trinity Tablet.

O'BRIEN'S POINTS.

The Kind of "Tips" Which the Dead Mining Magnate Gave His Friend.

This is the manner in which O'Brien, the dead mining magnate, is said to have given a point to an old friend:

"O'Brien, I hear they have struck it in Con. Virginia. If so, I'd like to get a little."

"O, pshaw! No such thing. Don't touch it!"

The old friend went immediately and bought all the Con. Virginia he could carry. Fortunately the stock advanced rapidly, and he commenced to think about selling. He called upon O'Brien again, and the following interview took place:

Old Friend—Good morning, O'Brien. I see Con. Virginia is advancing. There are rumors on the streets of a rich find. Had I better take in a little? Too bad I didn't have some a few days ago!

O'Brien—Yes, it was unfortunate; but you see I did not know what they were doing there at that time. Yes, you had better buy what you can. I think it will go higher.

The old friend loses no time in getting to his broker and ordering his Con. Virginia sold immediately—"street or board."

Ever afterward, when speaking of the lucky turn in Con. Virginia, he never failed to give his friend O'Brien due credit for putting him in the way of making a fortune; and when, on being consulted as to the prospect of any particular mine, took great pleasure always in saying that he bothered himself very little about it, as he "always gets his points from Mr. O'Brien."—Sacramento Record-Union.

WOMAN'S WEAKNESS.

The Clever Hit of a Youth Who Understands the Softer Sex.

The other morning a boy about fourteen years of age knocked at the door of a house on Brush street and asked the woman if she didn't want the snow cleaned off the walk.

"How much?" she cautiously inquired.

"Thirty cents."

"I won't pay it. If you want to do the work for ten cents you can go ahead."

He leaned on the handle of his snow shovel and looked thoughtful, and she finally quitted.

"Well, what do you say?"

"It's just as that woman around the corner told me," he replied. "I shovelled off her snow and she gave me fifty cents. I told her I was coming to ask you, and she said——"

"I don't know her. What business is it to her?"

"Yes, but——"

"What did she say?"

"She said I'd get left. She said that any woman who wore a plush sacque and passed it off for a three-hundred-dollar sealskin would be mean enough to go out nights and shovel her own snow."

"Boy," whispered the woman, as she turned white clear around her neck, "I want you to clean off the snow. When you are through I'll give you a silver dollar and I want you to go around and tell that woman that any one who buys and wears dollar-store jewelry and fourteen-shilling shoes hasn't got sense enough to fall off a bob-tailed car!"—Detroit Free Press.

Tecumseh Herald

TECUMSEH, MICH., MAY 27, 1886

To-day issues of the Herald begins the twenty seventh volume. On the 28th day of May 1859, the first number of the Herald was printed in a small Washington hand press in a small room in the second story of a rickety frame building which stood near the present site of Union [illegible]

[illegible] was James H. Perry, and the material of the office was purchased with money raised by contributions from citizens of the village. The total value of the office at that time did not exceed $500. In February 1861 the paper was sold to Lott Sholes & Co. who conducted it until the following September, when they sold to W. H. Stout. On the 25th of the same December he sold to Wm. Richard. In April 1862 Mr. Richard sold to Sheperd & Benedict and in October of that year the paper passed into the hands of Richard, Baxter & DeMott. In the latter part of 1863 Mr. DeMott retired and Richard & Baxter published the paper about two years, until December 1865. Mr. Baxter then retired and Wm. Richard owned the concern for eleven years. During this period he rented it one year to Ralph Stockbridge, two years to Geo. & Chas. Spafford, one year to W. A. Nunnocks, and one year to M. Castle. On the first of January 1876 he sold the establishment to C. M. Burlingame, who conducted it till Nov. 15, 1879, when he sold it to the present proprietor.

During the eleven years and a half that we have conducted the Herald many changes have taken place. Its improvements have been made and the value of the office since then has increased more than six fold. With the new material and facilities which we are constantly adding to our office, we are enabled to meet the growing demand for better printing and a better class of work. A BIRTHDAY SURPRISE

Tuesday, May 25th, was the 75th birthday of Miles Ferris Bond, and a house of the [illegible] Mrs. Alice Sutton and daughter, three brothers, William, Wesley and Charles Bond, their wives and a few friends moved quietly in and took possession of the Bond homestead. The surprise was complete. The table overspread with the substantials and delicacies was hung out which beguiled Chas. Bond and family [illegible] The [illegible] friends [illegible] For [illegible]

SATURDAY'S RACES.

[illegible] race track last Saturday afternoon proved a very successful as well as enjoyable affair. A large crowd was on hand to see the fun, the grand stand being [illegible] The track was in excellent condition and some good time was made by the horses present, although the time was announced from the judges stand, as the owners did not want their horses given a record. Trotters were entered from Adrian, Milan, Macon, Ridgeway and Tecumseh. There were six races during the afternoon, which caused lively excitement among the spectators. Taking it all in all, it was a day of pleasure and profit to the Globe Mill clan.

Free for All—Allen's Cambridge Maid, Weaver, a Norvell horse, Bills' [illegible] and Harmon's Texas gem of Saline.

Green Race: Westfall's Maud C. of Macon, Chatfield's Old Bob of RRiver, Kelsie's Fannie K. of Milan, and Parks' Egg Boy of Tecumseh.

The Named race was a walk-away for Barnes' Bingo, who took the lead at the start and had no trouble in carrying off the blanket. In the three year old race Charlie Snell's little horse showed "get there" qualities that was surprising in so young an animal, and had no difficulty in coming in first in two straight heats. Cambridge maid had an easy time in winning the Free for All, getting the first two heats, and making good time. The Green Race proved to be the most interesting of all, and was the only one in which the three heats were contested, but was finally won by Maud C. taking the first and third heats.

Bingo was given a warming up race, and made it easy in 2:35. He has a record of 2:33. The following is a summary of the races:

A TRIP TO EUROPE.

Lovers of art and literature will be interested in the auxiliary party now being organized by Miss E. Cora DeLay to join Dr. E. Pourjes's educational party, which sails from New York on the magnificent new steamship "City of Rome" June 3rd. The trip includes all the principal cities of Europe and offers advantages superior to those of any other parties taking other routes. Letters of recommendation are certain to persons joining these tours, thus according ladies perfect safety in accompanying the party without escorts. A competent conductor familiar with the details of foreign travel and European languages takes charge of each section, and relieves the tourist of all trouble in care of baggage, carriages or hotels. In a word, all the traveler has to do is to secure his ticket, embark on the city of Rome, and then surrender himself for three months to the unmixed pleasure of the voyage and the exhaustless wonders of the old world. The tour embraces 42 days and costs $375 and upwards according to choice of rooms on steamships. A week will be spent in London, a week in Rome, seven days in Paris, with three days at Versailles, Fontainebleau, Chartres, Rouen, Havre, Dieppe, Amiens, Abbeville, Boulogne, Calais, Dover, Canterbury, Rochester, Chatham, Gravesend, Tilbury, Southend, Sheerness, Queenborough, Flushing, Antwerp, Brussels, Waterloo, Cologne, and the famous Rhine region, and the foremost cities of Germany and Switzerland. Mrs. Dr. Pourjes will accompany the party on the trip as chaperon. We understand Miss DeLay has secured a number of persons from this city to join the party.

AROUND THE GLOBE ON A BICYCLE.

TEHERAN, March 9, 1886.—I start a continuation of my journey around the world. Gen. Makaloff, the Russian Minister at the Shah's Court, promised me yesterday that he would telegraph to Gen. Kaufmann at Asterabad, to remove all official obstacles from my route through Central Asia and Siberia. The Russian correspondent of the St. Petersburg Nova Vremya who [illegible] horses has offer[illegible] to take up or offer [illegible] intended to carry out his proposition. I shall therefore start out alone, trusting to get through the Central Asian Khanates without a guard, as safely as I did through Kurdistan and other places. My route then will be thro' Meshed, Merv, Bokhara, Samarkand and Tashkend, and on into Southern Siberia. In Siberia I shall probably touch at Tansk and Irkutsk. From Irkutsk I shall, if I find it even remotely practicable, strike south through Mongolia and endeavor to reach Pekin. If that course is found to be impossible, I shall reach the Pacific coast by way of the Amoor Valley. The distance from here to the north of the Amoor is not far from 6,000 miles—a pretty long pull for a bicycle over the camel paths and desert wastes of Asia, and by a route where no extra tires nor anything can reach me. But the distance is merely a question of time, health and perseverance; and if my tire gets worn out, I can no doubt improvise makeshift tires from raw hides.

By the time this reaches you I shall probably have reached Merve or Bokhara. My bicycle is in excellent condition, my own health is splendid, and everything seems to augur well for a successful termination of the journey around the world. I beg leave to express my thanks for many letters and newspapers from the wheelmen and others in various parts of the United States; they have been highly appreciated, and, whenever possible, replied to. Some will doubtless arrive here after my departure. They will be forwarded to Yokohama, Japan. With the best of luck it will take me six months to reach that place by the route I intend taking.

THOMAS STEVENS.

The Adrian boys were again in town last Sunday, part of them going on to Saline.

We made a few mistakes in our report last week. It was Walter Graves not George Graves, that was over here with Bert Hedges. Also the "Apollo" which we announced as belonging to Hedges is owned by Walt Green.

Tramps Attention! Here is a chance for you. Rogue Riderhood has a good looking suit of clothes which he will exchange for the rags of any lousy and romantic tramp's dress suit.

Our merchants report a very dull week so far, but they don't expect business will brighten up much until the farmers get through planting, and then they can get time to come to town and trade. There is a brisk demand for oat straw in the second ward.—Adrian Press.

The tale of a dog Monday morning is a momentous question came up for solution on the streets, it relating to nothing less grave than the ownership of a dog which Charley Kumacher had secured by trading a watch, and the capacious maw of which he had filled with costly grub during a couple of months. It appears that Rial Packer claimed to have put up a stake and name for a man who said he owned it, and thereupon Packer took possession of the animal. Young Kumacher, failing to recover the watch which he traded off, slyly repossessed himself of the cur, and spirited it away to Weston, where it was to be kept for him until Monday, when he intended to get it on his way to Muskegon, Mich. But Packer spoiled that plan by having him arrested for larceny, and on being led before Esq. Baker, Kumacher curiously enough pleaded guilty to the charge as read. He was then assessed $8.50 fine and costs, failing to pay which he should inhabit the county jail 20 days. Kumacher at first doggedly refused to liquidate, or accept any assistance; but in a few hours he changed his mind, and so was able to take the afternoon train for Muskegon. But, like that other important question, "Who struck Billy Patterson?" it is yet an unsolved problem as to who did really own that precious dog.—Morenci Observer.

PRICES ARE TUMBLING all over the country. Big strikes and consequently dull trading have been the cause of stagnation in all kinds of business. I have lately bought a large stock of all kinds of Photo materials of best qualities at greatly reduced prices, to be able to give my patrons as good or better work than can be got in any of the surrounding towns. Bills are coming in and I must pay them, consequently I will make Cabinet Photos at the low price of $2.50 per Doz. and card size at $1. per Doz. until the 15th of June. Now is your time to secure first class Photos at low prices. Remember the time and come early. My reputation in giving good work is well established since the short time I have been in Tecumseh, and I am in a better condition than ever to satisfy every one.

At Riverside, Cal., a grocer advertised that he would deal strictly on the cash principle. Next day came one of his oldest customers and asked for a loan of five dollars. "Certainly," said the grocer, handing him a five-dollar gold piece, "will that be enough?" "Yes," replied the customer, "I just wished a little money with which to buy a few groceries," and he turned away to give his orders to a clerk, while the grocer stood wondering where the cash system would finally lead him.

PRATT, KANSAS.

Since our last order we got everything dried up. Tuesday and Wednesday were quite cloudy and nothing much wind stirring but Thursday and Friday formed up for lost time. Friday it rained a little and has quite cooled. It is very dry and farmers say that wheat is injured by the dry spell. It is pretty dry for [illegible] but a good soaking rain is needed very badly.

There were several new houses put up during the past week, and about as many covered wagons equipped for the wild west passed through here as usual.

Prof. Cass L. Miller of Mich., returned from a visit to Michigan Saturday night, and was greeted by his many Pratt friends on Sunday morning at church, showing they appreciate an honorable man in the right place. Mr. Miller took charge of the school Monday morning, which is prospering with credit under his supervision.

A committee have been canvassing the village and county with the view of organizing a county fair association and have partly purchased a site for the grounds. The rink is being fitted up for a hotel, as hotel accommodations are very poor and those coming and going continue to increase.

Real estate is still advancing and changing hands very rapidly. Lumber is teamed in here from Kingman, a distance of 45 miles, and costs 25cts. a hundred pounds, as everything is retailed by the hundred. Lumber is worth from $15.00 to $20.00 a thousand and not very good quality of her. It is our third grade. Shingles 16 inch are worth $1.50 a second quality at that. A small planing mill would be a good investment little after the railroad gets to running. Also a brick yard as there is only a small hand yard here. The right man with one of Brewer's pressed brick machines could make a good thing out of the investment.

With the exception of winds, Kansas is a fine state to live in, as the people are very social and wide awake to business. The railroad bridge that was partly swept away by the cyclone last Tuesday at Kansas City, is the one we crossed in coming here.

PRATT via RIDGEWAY.

After four weeks on the prairie amidst wind-sand storms, real estate and loan agents, we packed our Saratoga for the return trip to the land of peace, having an impression made on our minds in youth that will remain till old age claims us as its own, to be contented and let "well enough alone."

Kansas is a fine State in many respects, but it has its drawbacks as well as the rest of her sister states. The sun does not set in Kansas, but far beyond, neither is it all gold that glitters in the distance o'er the rolling prairie, but sand-draws, dugouts and sod-shanties on the claim. Kansas is a good place for a person that has plenty of means to start with, but it is no place for a poor man, or a person that depends on days work for a living, but a man with money can invest it in a manner that will bring in a good return, as interest is 10, 11, 12 per cent a year and 2 and 3 per cent a month. Taking everything in consideration the Eastern States are as good as the west for a living and enjoyment.

Greens Cannonball filled for us at the Nennesech House at 6 A. M. Wednesday, and in company with Will Nobles, started on our journey leaving Burt alone on the prairie to seek his fortune and spend his time in the the office of land agent A. J. Miller. It was a clear, fine day, with a gentle breeze from the north-west. After 8 hours ride behind four mules, for a distance of 45 miles, we arrived at Kingman, and left on the 3.P. M. train over the W. V. W. R'y for Newton, where we changed cars taking the A. T. V. St. Fe R'y., arriving in Kansas City at 6 A. M. Thursday, and changed cars taking a reclining chair over the Chicago & Alton R'y to Chicago. As we left the city we saw the bridge that the cyclone played with, taking one of the spans off from the piers and landing it in the Missouri River. For some distance out of Kansas City over the C. & A. R'y the country is not very fine, but the most of the way through Missouri the land is very good and crops look fine and the farmers appear to prosper. We crossed the Missouri River at Glasgow at 10.40 A. M. and crossed the Mississippi at Louisiana at 2.30 P. M. The day being clear the scenery was splendid. We crossed the Illinois river at Peari at 3 P. M., arriving at Blooming at 9 P. M., and stopped there until 12.15 A. M. Friday, stopping at Jolief for breakfast. It is a large place and quite picturesque, as the blocks and large [illegible] are built of white stone for miles [illegible] The state [illegible] and [illegible] the walls are built from the stone and present a grand appearance in the morning sun. The country through Illinois is really good generally. Wheat and clover looks fine. We arrived at Chicago at 7 A. M. and was transferred to the L. S. & M. S. depot and left on the 8.30 A. M. train, and had the pleasure of seeing the lake. Crops through Indiana are up to an average. We arrived at Elkhart at 12.25, and took a stroll around the city and in our meanders ran across our old friend Palmer Hamilton, who gave us a very cordial invitation to stop with him until our train left. We had a very pleasant visit with them all. Parm is still firing on a passenger engine running from Chicago to Elkhart and occasionally making a trip to Toledo. Parm, still retains the pack of making friends, which we observed as we passed along the street and through the round house. We left on the 8.35 P. M., arriving at Hillsdale at 12.30 Saturday morning and with our grips in our hand we gently tapped at the door of none other than that of G. W. Jackson, who was reclining on a downy bed of ease, but he very willingly let us in, and after the usual greeting, we retired for the night, only to be aroused suddenly by the alarm of fire. None but those present and across the street ran out w' the pleasure of a fire by moonlight. G. W. was very anxious to go to the fire, and after a vigorous struggle in the moonlight to locate the scene of destruction, was compelled to retire. In the morning we were told that the fire was at Jonesville. We spent Saturday and Sunday with G. W. and family. Sunday afternoon we took a walk through the cemetery, it is a very fine one which Hillsdale can be proud of. We left for home Monday morning, arriving in time to take dinner with mother. As we look about the little village we think she takes the cake yet, and prefer Old Michigan to Kansas.

BROOKLYN BALLAST.

Cyclones have dodged, burglars neglected, and tramps for otherwise, yet our streets are daily lined with teams and people who come find sufficient amusement to induce them to repeat visits. Don't imagine the above named slights indicate dullness.

There are grov is about wheat, dog-fights and street recitals, enough to entitle little B to a front page in geography, and what there is'nt would fill the rest of the volume.

Besides natural advantages we have a talking machine, and if people don't know each others' business, its their own fault.

The old folks are going, and D. R. Ayres' mother has gone. We are apt to think such relics of primitive days, far off and devoid of enterprise; but Braight Wright found a piece of newspaper while repairing an old house wall last week, that proves pioneer Jacksonites to have equaled the latter day saints in push, pluck and style. Letters of June 1st, 1848, are advertised; virtues of patent medicine extolled, and the public informed that the Baltimore convention has nominated Lewis Cass for President, and William O. Butler for Vice President. The Philadelphia convention chose Z. Taylor and Millard Fillmore; that the Mexican war was ended, and for these reasons the best place to buy the necessaries of life is at G. W. Raneys, Empire block, opposite Dr. Graff's hardware store, Jackson Mich. The Patriot printer then used smaller type and filled fewer columns than now; but his paper was no less readable, and his ink and spelling remains unspoiled by long imprisonment in limey tomb. There is not enough of the scrap left to tell whether the Editor flattered subscribers opinion of woman suffrage or moulded them with hammer and tongs logic, but probably the latter or it could not have lasted so long, so it is fair to credit the old folks with work that ranks No. 1 when resurrected.

A gold watch chain bar and a few links attached, was lost on Sunday by the minister, which he would be much pleased to have returned to him should it be found.

The school house building committee have at last got the plans and specifications perfected, and have put up notices advertising the work of construction. Bids to do the work of mason or carpenter work received separately or together. Contractor to furnish all material. Proposals will be received to and including June 15th. Plans and specifications are in the hands of the director, where they can be seen by anyone who may desire to prepare estimates for doing the work.

DECORATION DAY.

Decorationday was observed here on Monday. Eaton Post at Britton took charge of the arrangements which proved complete. At 12 m. people in and about Britton came together and soon formed a fine procession headed by the floral car containing young ladies dressed in white, who had charge of the wreaths and loose flowers. Following the car came the Britton band and the G. A. R. company, who led a long procession consisting of the Christian Sabbath School and citizens. At Ridgeway a halt was made for a few minutes to complete the arrangements and get in order those who had gathered to unite in the proceedings of the day. From Ridgeway the procession moved precisely on time, making a fine appearance, being nearly a half mile in length. At the cemetery the flowers were distributed, the wreaths among the old comrades, under command of John Britton, and the bouquets and small flowers among the young ladies and children. These formed the line which marched first to the grave of Leroy Mead, where the formal service of the company was given and the decorating began. Each grave, 18 in all, of comrades was visited and upon which was left two wreaths besides other flowers. After each grave had been thus decorated, the company halted at the stand where the Commander completed the memorial services by a short address to his comrades. Then followed the exercises, consisting of singing "America," prayer by Rev. J. W. Clack, which was marked for its fervency and appropriateness. An original poem by Rev. E. W. Borden which was well received indeed, another song, then the oration of the day by Rev. James Wright which was highly complimented and well adapted to the occasion. After music by the band, and closing prayer the procession reformed in the order previously given and returned to the village where it broke up. All seemed pleased with the proceedings of the day, and many were the compliments given to those who had charge or assisted in the services and program. The band boys gained thous'ds of much credit and merited the many compliments they received.

The Magazine of Art.

The frontispiece of the Magazine of Art for June is Constable's Hay-Wain, a picture for which the original owner gave about £70, and which was recently purchased for a fabulous sum and presented to the national gallery by a Mr. Vaughn. "Guilford" is the subject for a most enticing pen and pencil study. Guilford is not mentioned with any enthusiasm in guide books, but it is filled with fine examples of early English architecture. Besides old houses it has a Norman castle, two fine churches, a ruined chapel with a Town Hall and Hospital that are sufficient attractions of themselves for the lovers of the picturesque. This paper is followed by one on Alexander Cabanel, who, though we may not personally care for his art, has many and enthusiastic admirers. A portrait of the painter is given, also a reproduction of his famous "Desdemona." Following close upon the heels of this is a paper on "Some English Carriages," which are illustrated by some curious cuts. An interesting paper on "Needlework as Art," and a copious supply of notes close a very entertaining number.—Cassell & Company, 35 cents a number, $3.50 a year in advance.

WEDDING BELLS.

A beautiful wedding occurred at the house of and Brainard [illegible] at the house of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Clarkson, to witness the marriage of their daughter Ella, to Mr. Mark J. Pennington.

Promptly at seven o'clock Miss Blanche Mead took her place at the piano and played the wedding march, during the execution of which, the bridal party took the places assigned them. Miss Hattie Osgood, of Macon, acted as bride's maid, and Mr. Will Osgood, of Morenci, as best man. The marriage service of the Reformed church was performed by Rev. Chas. S. Dutton, pastor of both bride and groom. A deep hush fell upon the company as the young people took upon themselves the solemn vows of marriage. Then came the congratulations and good wishes of friends and neighbors. Having passed bravely through this part of the trying ordeal, the newly married couple led the way to the supper table, where, under the efficient management of Mrs. James Clarkson, a corps of willing helpers placed before the guests a bountiful repast. This part of the program was carried out to the entire satisfaction of all present. The cake, made by the bride's own hands, bore witness to her good qualities as a housekeeper. Interest was added to the occasion by the presence, at the head of the second table, of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Osgood married the night before. About one hundred and twenty five guests sat down to the tables. The bridal gifts were numerous and valuable, betokening the esteem in which both parties are held. The bride was becomingly dressed in brown satin. The floral decorations were simple but tasteful; especially noticeable was a large horse shoe suspended in the doorway, to call down good luck upon the pair as they passed beneath.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarkson are so well known and so universally respected, that the marriage of their daughter Ella was an event of great interest to the community. She herself is loved by all who know her, a dutiful daughter, a most loving sister, a continual beam of sunshine in her own home, she goes now to brighten the home of another, not less worthy, not less respected than she. After taking a trip via, the lakes to Petoskey, in company with Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Osgood, Mr. and Mrs. Pennington will settle in their home at Pennington's Corners, where they will be glad to welcome their friends.

ONSTER ODDS.

Children's Day will be observed at the church next Sabbath, June 6th.

Alma Howes, who is attending school at Raisin Valley Seminary, was home last Sunday.

A missionary Concert will be held at the church Sunday evening, June 13th.

Mrs. Inglesby is kept very busy dressmaking, and has had to secure help to keep up with her orders. We hear her work well spoken of.

The grangers have an ice cream festival to-night, and the Good Templar's are talking of having a strawberry festival in the near future.

Decoration services were held at the church and cemetery last Saturday afternoon. The exercises were good and it was voted to decorate again next year.

Miss Addie Daniels was thrown from a pony last Thursday evening. She was quite badly bruised, but no bones were broken. She is rapidly recovering.

If we are correctly informed before this appears in print, Robert Compton and Mrs. Nelia Wood will be married. Rumor says Wednesday is to be the wedding day.

We understand that a man from Napoleon was somewhat angry Monday morning. He had been at work on the hotel and went home to stay over Sunday. He walked back, a distance of fourteen miles, and was at his boarding place at breakfast time. When he presented himself for work he was coolly informed that his services were no longer needed. Queer time to discharge a man.

Renews Her Youth.

Mrs. Phoebe Chesley, Peterson, Clay Co., Iowa, tells the following remarkable story, the truth of which is vouched for by the residents of the town. I am 73 years old, have been troubled with kidney complaint and lameness for many years; could not dress myself without help. Now I am free from all pain and soreness, and am able to do all my own housework. I owe my thanks to Electric Bitters for having renewed my youth, and removed completely all disease and pain."

OUR NATION'S HEROES.

As children of One God and friends of one country, we have assembled to perform the sad yet pleasant ceremony of paying our tribute of respect to our Nation's Heroes. To again express our love and admiration for the brave soldiers and sailors who with their lives sealed their devotion to their flag, their country and humanity. I intend to make these words of Holy Writ the keynote of my thought and the moving spirit of my work. "And He shall Judge Among the nations, and shall rebuke many people: and they shall beat their swords into plow shares, and their spears into pruning hooks. Nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." I have been moved to speak to-day upon our Nation's Heroes, not from any antipathy of feeling, not because I have political prejudices or new issues to proclaim. I am to speak for no party, to advocate no old or new political or financial measures. That right I can express elsewhere than here. I propose to speak as a servant of the Most High, as a humble, yet I trust devoted disciple of the Master, as a lover of human justice, honor and heroism. God help me to speak for the uplifting of the human race, for a nation's good, for freedom's sake, for my country's prosperity, for the enfranchisement of the kingdoms of the earth. To speak of the love I bear, of the reverence of my soul, for our Nation's Heroes, our country's sacred dead. DEAD, did I say? No, not dead, but living still in those memories which can never die, living in the hearts of loved ones in remembrance which eternity cannot erase. Living in history which makes our land so hallowed in the great American heart, and which for the generations will proudly proclaim and sacredly cherish. Living in every patriot our, which when heard, stirs the blood which flows in our veins. Living in every star and stripe of our dear old flag, our ensign of victory, union and peace, our rightful trust and pride, loved by every son and lover of freedom, honored in every land and saluted on every sea. Heaven grant that my words may not engender strife, or cause one emotion of anger or of ill will to stir your hearts. I know you are too noble and patriotic for that, your souls too large to harbor any unkindness of feeling, and I know your generous hearts will not permit you to be offended.

Why not honor? One in mightiness of deed, and determination of purpose, one in the unity of the spirit and in the bonds of peace. One in prosperity and one in magnanimity of soul. Our fathers, yonder sons on earth, one most nearly in spirit speaks to us to-day from exalted heights, these words, now uttered, with the benediction of Heaven. "The Union cannot be separable, now and forever." I am sure that the God of the nations is speaking, that we rise in our manhood and strength, in our patriotism and modesty, and on hand take on the armor and garments of right, kindness and peace. Let to-day [illegible] and [illegible] as [illegible] shall be [illegible] are but crystallized human sacrifices. To destroy such pedestals would be to destroy such pillars of our national fabric that rest with humanity, the warp of which is the nerve and sinew of human hearts. That cannot be done for it has been woven in the great loom of God's unerring and unchanging providence. Let us then lift up our hearts to the almighty, and in memory of our nation's heroes, perceive our true path of national duty, national honor and national peace. And while we decorate their graves, with the buds, leaves and blossoms of the beauty of early summer and while our hearts are made red and white and blue, with the clustering flowers of gratitude, bursting from the soil of human love, let us so build our institutions, so frame our laws, so watch our country's good, and so protect her rights, that the principles for which our forefathers and our nation's latest dead, fought, bled and died, will live forever. God forbid, that from their graves, the flowers placed thereon, and the sacred memories we cherish, we borrow for an instant any sentiment of hatred or feeling of revenge. Our nation's heroes do not ask it of us. Robed as I believe they are in angel beauty in God's upper house, they are speaking to us in the very spirit of Heaven. "Beat your swords into plowshares, your spears into pruning-hooks; neither lift up the sword against nation, nor learn war any more." Long ere this, bountiful, God-blessed nature has covered the scars and much of the destruction of yonder battle-fields with verdure and perfumed them with the breath of blossoms. On them, shall we learn no lesson from this magnanimous, generous and forgiveness on the part of the infinite Father? Oh, I ask, shall we hold to our feelings of petty spite and take no lesson from that charity which suffers long and is exceeding kind? Which beareth, and hopeth, and endureth all things, and at last turns all things into goodness and its eternal beauty? Yet I think it befitting, that with one common consent all over our land, we gather in those places where our nation's heroes rest, and commemorate their names, speak of their deeds, and with our tears, our gratitude, our psalms and our prayers, beneath the arches of Heaven, in this grand temple of the Supreme, make them hallowed in our souls and sacred in our history.

When we pause to think what we are, how deeply we are indebted to others for the gift and perpetuity of freedom and of equal rights, should we not thank the Eternal for such heroic men? Such Spartan souls born of American mothers. With them in the camp, on the field of carnage, in their nightly slumbers or where the contest buried its bolts of death, our honored ones were accompanied with the love and the tears and the prayers of mothers. All noticed and heard of Heaven. Can these mothers forget their loved ones gone? Can wives let their husbands who perished in the struggle go unremembered? Come then fathers, mothers, wives, sons and daughters. Come friends and comrades, let us once again strewe their graves with blossoms, water them with our tears and remember them before the world and at the throne on high. Let us remember that as Christ died for the human race, so these laid down their lives for a free people and a united country. Tack of heroes. These our shine them all. Next to Christian martyrs they wear in glory the purest crowns. They died that others might live. What memories are associated with this hour! What a cloud of witnesses encompasses us! Though we term them our national dead, yet they live as a [illegible] to us. [illegible] stalled host, as for an instant they pass in grand review. Feel you not the influence of their noble spirits? Have our heroes bled from Concord, Lexington, Bunker Hill, Bennington and Bunker Hill. They sacrificed on the fray on the wide waters of the ocean, from rivers deep and broad and long, from the conflict which won Perry's victory on our own inland sea. They come from the carnage of Antietam, from the heights of Fredericksburg and from battles march and battle, on how those red rivers and ridges trouble with their tread. And who dare deny that at this hour on Decoration Day, with angel presence, they make room among us, yes, and with shouts of welcome. They come from the marsh and the [illegible] from the sea, from Western slopes and Southern cotton fields. They come from Paris, from Belgium, from Fort Donelson, from Shiloh, from Gettysburg, from Lookout Mountain and Missionary Ridge, from Vicksburg and Atlanta, from Fort Fisher and Savannah, from Mobile and Spanish Fort, from Petersburg and Richmond, from Appomattox and Lee's surrender. They come from the battle-fields of Virginia and Pennsylvania, from the northern and southern prisons, from the northwest and from the Pacific shore, from the Rio Grande and Mexico, from the Gulf of Mexico and the Atlantic, from Fort Pillow, Andersonville and St. Philips, wherever our brave boys in blue made freedom tremble. They come from sea and land with victory upon every banner. Our country is peopled with oh, what a costly ransom! Enough yes enough, to wipe away a nation's wrongs. What sacrifices! Human souls, tears, prayers, blood and lives. Help us, Almighty One, we pray thee, to learn from these the price of peace. May we remember the gulf-stream, and beat our swords into plow shares, our spears into pruning hooks and learn war no more. It is a glorious thought that our Nation's Heroes did not die for Kings or monopolies or power. They fought for right against wrong. They contested for human good, for liberty and for union. Behind their ranks as [illegible] a mighty [illegible] freedom took refuge, and at times disputed and trembling she waited the issue. Her mantle had been dishonored and trained in the dust. All hail our country's defenders, our nation's martyrs! In solid phalanx they stood and liberty is full secure. To-day she remembers them with her smiles, and tears and flowers. Here with devotion she comes and angels join with her in her prayers and anthems of praise. And it cannot be otherwise than to their souls God has whispered eternal peace.

Liberty touched with undying glory. Is it true that in the ripeness of the times all evil is culminate in blood? Is it, as some assert, that nature in each demands only evil for but demands a new sacrifice? Think it in every step in the religious advancement of the world, stands the cross before the crown. Ere victory has been won and recorded in the eternal [illegible] has been scored in the children of men, the Messiah of humanity to have crucified. My God, why hast thou forsaken, [illegible] the depths of human souls when freedom has been once [illegible] [illegible] but shall [illegible] are but crystallized human sacrifices. To destroy such pedestals would be to destroy such pillars of our national fabric that rest with humanity, the warp of which is the nerve and sinew of human hearts. That cannot be done for it has been woven in the great loom of God's unerring and unchanging providence. Let us then lift up our hearts to the almighty, and in memory of our nation's heroes, perceive our true path of national duty, national honor and national peace. Here with devotion she comes and angels join with her in her prayers and anthems of praise. And it cannot be otherwise than to their souls God has whispered eternal peace.

Upon their graves we may [illegible] many a blossom, decorate their tombstones with garlands,—this is well,—but grander than all that, God has planted upon their sleeping breasts the [illegible] [illegible] care it will bloom in beauty forever. I love to stand here and lift up my voice in songs of our nation's heroes. I glory in the thought that they are ours and have no parallel in human history. I love to speak of their heroism and with reverence proclaim them the saviours of our land. These gave their all, love of friends and home, love of kindred and humanity, love of right and truth and God, and laying down all upon the altar of sacrifice they died. They have sanctified. There is not a valley, nor hill nor mountain, nor river, lake or sea in this broad continent of ours but feels something of the influence which animated these noble souls and the victory they helped to win. That triumph created a new epoch in the records of men. Because of heroic hearts freedom still lives and there is to-day as never before an eternal radiance resting upon her soul and heaven's approval upon her brow. In the old mythologies we read, the noble, the brave and the good, were changed into stars, and whenever a hero left the earth a new star shot out into the blue dome above in twinkling splendor. As a doctrine I believe it false, but as a symbol it is sublime. Our nation's heroes are not dead, they have been translated, and from the heaven of freedom shine out as everlasting stars, still as a hope and joy and a light for generations yet to be. God grant, that as the stars in yonder firmament shine down upon their calm resting place, so may His love bless them and us, and our hearts be moved anew with hymns of lofty cheer and praise and uplifting prayers of gratitude. Let us then keep in our souls and before our eyes the glorious conception and vision of a great, free, wise and united people. One in mind, one in purpose, and one in love from sea to sea. Thus shall we wreathe for our nation's heroes, for ourselves and our children's children, garlands of everlasting forget-me-nots. Thus go from strength to strength in liberty and from grace to grace in the kingdom of heaven. "Thus our sons become as plants grown up in their youth; our daughters become as corner stones polished, after the similitude of a palace. Then shall our garners be full, affording all manner of store; our sheep bring forth thousands and ten thousands; our oxen will be strong to labor; there will be no breaking in or going out and no complaining in our streets." Then will the kingdoms of the earth become the kingdom of our God and of his Christ, and the key-note of the psalm of humanity be: "Happy is that people in such a case; yea happy is that people whose God is the Lord." Let us not forget, this is our new anniversary. To-day what memories are renewed and all over the land upon the graves of our Nation's Heroes there may be seen flag, wreath and flowers.

Decoration Day assures that those who are gone cannot be forgotten and upon human souls remembrances are engraven that will outlive all chiseled lines or names made upon monuments of iron or stone. Let these sacred memories of husband, brother, father, son, lover, friend and comrade be transfigured anew to our minds and upon them rest forever the benediction of heaven. You tell me, even at this hour, though twenty years and more have come and gone since the struggle, "that it was a priceless sacrifice." Yea, verily, is my answer, and as such the angels record it, but above it in the language of heaven is written "the priceless gain." During the past year what lines have been written of the conflict, enough to move as anew to prayers and to tears. One magazine, "The Century," has pictured the contest in vivid terms, thus handing it down to generations as a part of our nation's history, having no parallel in all the annals of mankind. It tells for human valor and love, for humanity, liberty and God. During the year the Blue and the Gray have met again face to face, heart responding to heart, hand clasping hand, and tear answering to tear—not that as of for in '62, but as lovers of one country saluting in unison the old banner, promoters of one common welfare, friendship and unity. Such scenes make the cradle of peace sublime. Twenty-five years ago, May 23d, 1861, the First Michigan Infantry passed in review before President Lincoln at Washington. To-day our nation's martyr might look upon it, nearly all pass in grand review upon the eternal peace plains above. The 25th anniversary of the invasion of Virginia by our army occurred a week ago to-day, May 24th, 1861. The first Northern regiment to cross the line was from this State, but to-day the most heroic men, with their commanders, have crossed the line of time over into the great eternity. Since last Decoration Day the world has parted with its [illegible] our national sorrow. Hero after hero at one time our country's destiny was largely committed, has gone to join the Grand Army in heaven. How [illegible] our brave boys in blue of one time marched and battled, fought or slept, or died death for freedom, died upon the mountain top and only as a nation's ex-President, not only as one whom the world has honored, and with a soldier's fortitude, but with a Christian's hope and victory and peace. He was as heroic at Mt. Morgan as upon that memorable and tremendous contest at Shiloh. Let the values and deeds of our Nation's Heroes be perpetuated in glory for ever. While human years are spent as marshall under the banner of country and freedom and the emblem of Christendom, and together keep step to the divine music of liberty and truth, of peace and concord, of humanity and God.

LOWELL, MASS.

Messrs. C. I. Hood & Co., Gentlemen—It affords me much pleasure to recommend Hood's SARSAPARILLA. My health has been such that for some years past I have been obliged to take a tonic of some kind in the spring, and have never found anything that brought results so satisfactory as your Sarsaparilla. It tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me feel like a new man. Respectfully yours,

J. P. THOMPSON.

One of our prominent business men said to us the other day: "In the spring my wife got all run down and could not eat anything. Passing your store I saw a pile of Hood's SARSAPARILLA in the window, and I got a bottle. After she had been taking it a week she had a rousing appetite, and it did her everything. She took three bottles, and it was the best three dollars I ever invested."

THE DANISH CURE

AND THE LADY WHO INTRODUCED IT INTO THIS COUNTRY.

[Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, May 31.—This city is famous as a place for the development of talent—not simply the talent that takes to the beaten track, but unheard of talent. New York furnishes a field of activity for every gift under the sun, it can hardly be, for we know how to handle the market. I have noticed this more in the case of women than men. The latter have the entire range of professional, industrial and commercial pursuits to turn to for a livelihood, but women have only a few avenues open to them. This makes it awkward for the unmarried, but furnishes a fine chance to the inventive to turn some peculiar gift, taste or acquirement to practical account.

And they do turn these things to account. I could name nearly a dozen women who earn honest and often enviable incomes by means as far below a hoped by man of woman. These are the starters of new industries, for what one woman does successfully others will imitate, and so every new thing becomes in time a recognized profession, business or industry—one of the things that impoverished women turn over in their minds in perplexity and fear when they face the greatest of all problems, "What shall I do to be saved from want?"

One day, when in a house of a friend, a handsome carriage, drawn by two spirited ponies and engineered by the most dignified of coachmen, stopped before the door. Somebody said, "Here comes Mme. Schott. I know you will be interested in her."

Then, in response to my look of inquiry, the lady went on to explain that Mme. Schott was a wonderful woman; that she was a practicing physician, who did great things without medicine; that she had introduced the "Danish cure" into this country, and by means of it made herself rich, honored, and somewhat famous. "Yes," she continued, "and she possesses the faculty that all the schools haven't been able to acquire—the faculty of rejuvenating her patients. Withal, she is an interesting character and pleasing lady."

A few minutes later a lady entered the parlor with a springy step and a carriage that was poetry itself. Her motions were quick and graceful, like those of a delicate bird, yet by no means undignified. She had the grace and cheeriness of youth, a face that, although not lineless, had no look of age about it, and a form, like a girl of 20. She was Mme. Schott. She began to chat in a voice as bird-like as her movements, and so deliciously Danish in accent that I could only understand a word here and there.

Later I became well acquainted with her and learned her history, a brief sketch of which I give that it may encourage other women to seek within themselves for something that can turn to substantial account when a vocation is needed.

Mme. Schott, whose Christian name is Wilhelmine, is the daughter of Danish parents of the highest nobility of Denmark. She early gave evidence of the self-sufficient spirit which has won her an honorable place in life by objecting to certain matrimonial plans which had been formed for her by those in authority. Determined to be something on her own account, she left her home and went to her uncle in Copenhagen, Dr. Emile Fresch, who was physician to King Christian VIII. He presented her to the king and queen, who were so much interested in her beauty and spirit that they offered to be father and mother to her.

Having always a special fondness for the study of the mechanism of the human body, and a natural desire to cure diseases, she devoted herself to the thorough study of anatomy and physiology, while other young ladies of her rank amused themselves with social pleasures. Under her uncle's tuition she learned the practical duties of a physician, with no very strong hope of ever turning her knowledge to account. There, while visiting an institution for the treatment of the sick, she first saw the "Danish cure" practised. She was strongly impressed by its workings and, eager to become a practitioner, was instructed in this science of manipulation, which has been an important branch of medical science in Germany and Denmark since the Fifteenth century. In Denmark the study of anatomy is taught, not as here, in the dissecting room alone. After the usual course of study the student enters a department devoted entirely to studying the action of the mechanical parts in living subjects. A practitioner of the Danish cure must be able to detect instantly, upon examination by the hands alone, a displacement, contraction or abnormal condition of any muscle or cord in the body.

Meeting an American lady and hearing much of the beautiful new land across the sea, soon after finishing her study of the "Danish cure," Mme. Schott was stricken with the American fever, that insidious disease which year by year penetrates farther into the hills and mountains of Denmark, Sweden and Norway and carries away the young and strong, leaving the parents desolate. So, to America she came with her new friend, thirty-two years ago, and here in the land of which she had long thought and dreamed she has lived the most useful part of her life.

All her plans of finding a vocation were dissipated soon after her arrival by the inevitable experience of falling in love and marrying. Her husband, now deceased, had been an editor in Copenhagen. In 1848 he became a political exile. He came to this country with much money and was robbed by a friend. When he died Mme. Schott found herself thrown on her own resources. Womanlike she took to embroidery, not realizing that her medical acquirements were a valuable capital to operate with. One day at the house of a friend, she saw a little boy afflicted with spinal disease, who was so lame he couldn't walk. Pityingly she took him in her arms and rubbed his back. Every time he saw her afterwards he begged to be taken up and rubbed. After each manipulation he was much better. His mother begged Mme. Schott to come daily and rub him. This she did, and cured him without a drop medicine, though she refused to take any pay for it. This incident seemed to be the beginning of a curative career for her in spite of herself. Ailing women begged her to manipulate them, and her "Danish cure" became famous before she had really determined to practice it.

A prominent physician, who had many so-called incurable patients with spinal disease, sent them to her, in the belief that she could at least alleviate their sufferings. This she did, with her warm, magnetic hands, which unerringly sought out the diseased and shrivelled muscles, and rubbed them into action again, and in many instances she effected a perfect cure.

From that time till now she has been constantly busy. Her patients are women and children only, and of the upper class exclusively. Indeed, her treatment is a luxury that the poor cannot aspire to. Each treatment of an hour's duration is booked at $4; any longer time is charged accordingly. A visit and treatment at a patient's house is $10. These prices are cheerfully paid by Mme. Schott's patients, who esteem it a privilege to be received by her at all, since, on account of her popularity, a chance to be treated is difficult to obtain.

Many a time she works over patients from 7 o'clock in the morning until 1 o'clock at night. Her all-conquering hands are really much failing. The truth is her "Danish cure" is a laborious, exhausting process which many ladies would avail themselves of if the price were twice as high as it is. Every muscle, feeble cord or shrinking tissue is rubbed into healthy action. The patient is really made over anew by a process that is delightful. I know several ladies who really believe this time. Schott can make them actually young. These people attribute other results, already as a matter of keeping off the effects of old age, which comes to all at the other end of the lane. Madam showed me a book in which her patients and their friends enter their testimony, very unsolicited, in the shape of letters to the undersigned. William Burtless, and such assignment recorded in said Register's office on the 4th day of January, 1886, in Liber 112, of Assignments of Mortgages, on page 505, upon which mortgage there remains now due and owing the sum of Nine Hundred and Twenty-nine and 00-100 Dollars, and no proceedings at law or in equity have been taken for the collection thereof.

Notice is therefore hereby given that by virtue of the power and provisions in said mortgage contained, for the purpose of realizing the moneys above mentioned and interest at seven per cent to accrue thereon, costs of foreclosure and sale, and including an attorney fee as provided by law, I shall on the 17th day of May A. SEANCE ROOMS.

A Glimpse Into a Public and Private One in Boston.

[Special Correspondence.]

BOSTON, May 31.—At The Banner of Light office they have a séance room, and on every Tuesday and Friday afternoon they have a séance, and the spirits are called up to tell their stories. The platform at one end of the long hall contains the solemn chairman of the séance, seated at one end of a table. Behind him is the medium, through whom the spooks are compelled to talk, if they make any communication whatever, even "Yes, yea," or "Nay, nay." On the other side is the lady stenographer, who puts down all the spirit says. The lady at the organ furnishes the music. The audience must be in by 3 p. m., and the door is locked until 4. The rows on the two front benches have been coming here for seventeen years, and are not yet quite satisfied whether the communications received come out of a spirit or the medium. The people on the next two benches have been coming here for the last ten years in hopes of getting a word from the dear friends with whom they quarreled like cats and dogs when they were in the "mortal form." The next two rows are chronic doubters, trying hard to believe. They have been coming here for the last eight years. The remainder of the audience are here because they don't know what else to do with themselves, and always come to a free racket on principle.

This is an interior view of one of Boston's 100 "spiritual mediums and séance rooms." The customer is now getting the following information for his $1: "You will succeed in all you undertake this month. Your aunt is often with you. She is much happier in the summer land than she was here. You will make a pile of money this month. Plato is your guardian spirit. Trust to him. He will guide you. You are a beautiful character. We have much to tell you. Come again soon." PRENTICE MULFORD

TECUMSEH, MICH., JUNE 3, 1886

Notwithstanding all the big and little guides we that have been posted up by all the various factions either in the county the Hickory Club, Knights and Thrifty and still we failed enough quality to make a very [illegible] Monday evening, our Marshal Falconer has been the fortunate [illegible] the attention of the fair sex of this village and when it was announced very many weeks ago to come with a supper costuming every member left the place with alacrity. Mrs. V. E. R. very kindly offered her pleasant home and Monday, May 31st, was decided upon as the date. About half past six of that evening you might have seen various nondescript figures assembling from all directions at the home of Mrs. Fox. Conking whence the party started. Here they took carriages and were driven through Main street and then out upon the Adrian road to their destination. The time there was spent very agreeably until 10:30 when they were invited to a lunch at the Six Jolly Fellowship Porters. Here a surprise was waiting. The way was led to the second floor of the carriage house which had been fitted up as the den of the story, the Six Jolly Fellowships. Mottoes familiar to frequenters of that dostery appeared on the wall. Miss Abby Patterson with [illegible] represented all undue levity, and many of the usual company of the inn were there.

A very elegant supper was found waiting to be disposed of, and it did not last long. Let us speak of the characters as they are ranged about the table. At the head sat Mr. Venus [illegible] and soured by the reverses he had suffered in love. His sole consolation was his art, the art adulation of [illegible] which he had with [illegible] and their loves of different nationalities. Next sat Miss Abby Patterson [illegible] Next sat Rogue Hunter Poor and a poor half starved [illegible] Next came the Widow [illegible] consisting of the two daughters Bess and Lucinda, their dignified mother, and their uncle and further [illegible] the Chorus. Supper finished, speeches were in order. They were very neatly proposed by Sam Weller, toastmaster. Responses were given by Mr. Rollin, Miss Abby Patterson, Rogue Hunter, Miss Betty Higden, Professor Pinch, [illegible] Venus, Miss Weller, Sam Weller and Mrs. Higden. Soon after the [illegible] the company broke up.

A word can say too much in praise of the kind thoughtfulness and hospitality of their entertainers. The unanimous feeling was that they had been royally received, and that the affair had been a complete success in every respect. All agree that Miss Hogan, who so presided over the affair, as organizator, deserves large praise for her successful efforts to keep the club up to its object and make it not only entertaining but profitable as well.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON, May 28, 1886.

The President's alleged matrimonial venture is giving the country so much time for him to make an official announcement in regard to the matter. It is quite certain the conflicting reports that continue to circulate will not get their quietus from other way. The whole world is interested in love, you know, and the President is supposed to be about to commit matrimony. Very little credence is placed in the reports now, a great many even of the long prosing theses of Sunday sensations. His face is shrunk in lines of old, but a feature of the sensation is giving the gossips new food that will serve them for many a day. A lady called summoned sufficient courage to congratulate him upon his approaching marriage and he thanked her. The incident will have to be taken by sober minded people for what it is worth.

The following bulletin of the President's condition was posted up at the White House this morning 8 A. M. Temperature, 98; pulse, 70; respiration normal. 10 A. M.—unchanged. 11 A. M.—The same. 12 M.—Ditto. No further facts could be ascertained from private secretary, clerks, doorkeepers, cooks or chambermaid, and the few newspaper men, hack drivers and policemen standing about the portcochere of the President's house looked up at the sign beside and decided that the wedding would certainly take place when it occurs, if it ever does. Indeed so many stories are afloat regarding the President's marriage that it is difficult to tell what is true and what is mere guesswork. It is generally conceded that he intends being married very soon after Miss Folsom's return from Europe, but beyond that nothing definite is known. A report bearing upon this subject came out just now, which seems based upon [illegible] of the others. It is that the President intends going to New York for the purpose of meeting Miss Folsom, for her arrival. The only person who has the President's entire confidence in the matter is supposed to be Col. Lamont who has all along been as [illegible] as an Egyptian mummy and has met all inquiries with the remarks, "I don't think it will rain."

The country seat which Mr. Cleveland has purchased near this city was built [illegible] It is an old stone house, [illegible] one of the Georgetown hills, and commands a view of the Potomac almost as far down as Mount Vernon. It will need a good many repairs before it is ready to be occupied by him. He is the third prominent purchaser of an ancient colonial house. Secretary Whitney was the first, and Gen. Logan the second.

Congress is giving attention to a great many things just now. Chinese immigration, bogus butter, pensions, the local district of Columbia matters, the Military Academy, secret service appropriation bills and for [illegible] the Department of Agriculture. The suspended and other subjects have come up for discussion during the past week.

The most of them have [illegible] that the immigration bill is not likely to pass, but that it is to pass in view of the convictions of a vital sort in both Houses of Congress. The House of Representatives has been canvassed and stands about two to one against the bill. Yet it is certain that it will pass. It is [illegible] to know that when it comes to a vote it will pass by a majority of at least fifty. "We hunters know it is wrong," said one of them yesterday, "but we don't care to vote against it. That's the simple fact. We are afraid of the following elections."

Representative Morton of Penn deserves the thanks of the House of Representatives for boldly defying the president in Congressional etiquette. While speaking in debate he was requested by the chair to suspend his remarks in order to allow the Secretary of the Senate to deliver a message from Gen. Grant. He declined politely but firmly, to do so and the secretary was obliged to wait until he had finished. The custom of both houses in this respect is a mere form of the emptiest sort. More than one fine flight of oratory has been spoiled by interruptions for which there was absolutely no need. A message from the Senate to the House is pure formality, and its oral announcement could be dispensed with altogether without damage to any interest. Why, then, should it be permitted to mar the charm of a speech or break the force of a closely woven argument?

JESUS—THE BREAD OF LIFE.

John 6: 22-40. Golden Text, John 6: 34. Date, April, A. D. 29. Place, Capernaum.

The meeting occurred upon a [illegible] of grain lands. The greater part of the people of the preceding night had here and there [illegible] some [illegible] to Capernaum, but the Master, who read their hearts, passed their question by and at once spoke to them of the real desire of their hearts. They were expecting a Messiah who would be a great military leader, and who would revive their national glory and bring them into a condition of ease and plenty. They shared the common feeling in this regard and the miraculous feeding of the day before was an incentive to them to expect still better things in the future. Christ knew their desires and designs, and He told them to seek the Bread of Life, which would supply their every need and without which they could never enter into His spiritual kingdom. They had their preconceived notions of the Messiah, and were unable to understand His teachings, and supposed He referred to some special works which they must perform. "What shall we do," they asked. A voice from the crowd—probably some Rabbi who was present and wished to entrap Him—demanded a sign, and reminded Christ that Moses gave manna from heaven to the children of Israel. This striking event in the life of Moses had made a deep impression upon the Jewish mind. With the years it had grown in force and picturesqueness, and ascribed wonderful powers to him. It was taught that as Moses was the first savior of the people and gave them manna, so the second Savior, the Messiah, would also give them manna from heaven. When Christ spoke of Himself as the Bread of Life, He was promptly asked for this special sign, which the Jews had been taught to expect. No doubt the mocking question expected to demolish the claims of Jesus at once, but His answers so satisfied many of them, that they cried, "Lord, evermore give us this bread." And then He taught them the beautiful truth that all who believed on Him shall take of the Bread of Life and partake of the living water which shall secure to them everlasting life. These things would have been easily understood by them if they had not been blinded by their preconceived notions of the Messiah. Starting from common figures expressive of devouring the words of the law, one of the popular sayings was, "In the time of the Messiah the Israelites will be fed by Hillel in the form of bread." Christ adopted the usual figurative language to which they had been accustomed and taught the world that in Him we have spiritual bread which alone can give us spiritual life.

LESSON THOUGHTS.

1. Doubt the hollowness of the world and feed on the truths of Jesus.
2. Satisfy the soul's hunger by believing on Christ.
3. Seek living not for the comforting but spiritual life.
4. Obedience first is the way to eternal life.

NOTES FROM WISCONSIN.

MONROE, GREEN CO., WIS.

You little expect to receive a letter from a correspondent located for the present about 75 miles east of the Miss River, in Monroe, the county seat of Green Co., a beautiful town of over [illegible] inhabitants surrounded by a specialed farming country. The production consists of cheese, butter, cattle and hogs, all of which from what is exported in the market are daily sold. Limburger, Swiss and Schweiger are names given to the cheese, and there was last season a large amount of tobacco raised. The farmers raise no wheat, but get their supply of flour at the stores in town, the most of it coming from Minneapolis. From appearances the merchants of this town are having a good trade. It has been quite cool for the past week, but no frost. The pastures are grand feed and well covered with stock, mostly cows for dairy business, and stock cattle for beef. There is a large portion of foreign born people. They manufacture a large quantity of brick of the yellow color. They have the usual number of churches. I must say that this is a fine country, and conquers well with old Lenawee. I left old Lenawee on April 30th and arrived here May 1st at 7:30 P. M., and a more fortunate trip could not have been hoped for. The wheat and clover looks through southern Michigan never looked better. Apple trees in bloom, but not a peach blossom was to be seen. It had rained enough so we had no dust. We came to Chicago, thence to Milwaukee and here. There is some excitement here as regards the riots at Milwaukee, the Monroe [illegible] strikers are having been called, they left with about [illegible] strong. We shall remain here some time and then seek new scenes and people. A now stopping at Brandhorst, Green Co., a [illegible]

UNION MEMORIAL SERVICES.

As announced in the HERALD last week, a union meeting was held at the Presbyterian church last Sunday evening in which all the congregations of the village took part. Beers Post, G. A. R. and Co. C. marched to the church in a body and were recorded the body slips in front. Long before the hour for services to commence, people began to assemble, and when the opening voluntary was sung the edifice was crowded in every part. Music had been specially prepared by the Presbyterian choir and it is needless to say that it was finely rendered and most appropriately selected. The pulpit services were conducted by Rev. W. H. Babbitt, assisted by Revs. Potter and Adkins. The sermon, by Rev. T. G. Potter, was entirely extempore, and hence we are compelled to forego the pleasure of printing it. It was a magnificent audience to address. Inspired by the auditory, the theme and the occasion, the reverend gentleman delivered a most eloquent discourse. We present a synopsis of the same which will show the general tenor and salient points of the sermon. He choose his text from John 15-13: "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."

Some of the wonders of redemption as exhibited by our Lord Jesus Christ. Its Source—Infinite self sacrificing love. It's Nature—Salvation; is only the implanting, germination, development, maturity, and eternal perpetuity of Divine Love in the human Soul. The Law of Love, the most imperative and exacting of all in existence. Christ met all the demands of that law as our friend—Died for us.

Our veterans can understand and appreciate the meaning of self sacrifice as they review their own history.

The nature of their sacrifice, and what it involved. Leaving home with all its endearments and associations. The forsaking of business enterprises and business prospects. Surrendering their personal liberty and accepting military subjection. Enduring exposure, toil, privations and dangers. Many fell in battle, others died in hospitals, or languished in prisons. Some have returned maimed and with wrecked constitutions, and we thank God that many are yet with us vigorous. Their presence is a wholesome restraint upon evil doers.

The motives which actuated these men to make such sacrifices.—Not the mere love of adventure. Not mercenary, there were no prospects of gain. Not military ambition, they did not aspire to fame of this kind. Not hatred of the enemy—to fight was only regarded as a duty. The motive was the love of Liberty, of Justice, of Country.

5. The glorious victories they won, on many a bloody field. They met and vanquished powerful courageous and determined foes, until treason was hushed into submission.

6. Our obligations to these heroes both dead and living.

7. An appeal to those sacrificing men to manifest their personal appreciation of the Sacrifice of Christ, by accepting him.

The sermon was intently listened to and gave the utmost satisfaction.

FARMERS' SOCIAL CLUB.

The Farmers' Social Club will hold their annual picnic June 12th, at Wells' landing, Sand lake. The season being so forward it has been decided to hold the picnic one week earlier than expected. A committee of ladies will furnish plates, cups and saucers, knives and forks and spoons; all others are requested to take as few plates as possible, except platters. It will be a great favor if all taking meats of any description will cut them up before leaving home. Those having strawberries are requested to take them that we may have an abundance. Take plenty of table cloths and dish towels, and don't forget coffee pots, pitchers and dippers. Let the members turn out and have a good old fashioned day of fun and recreation. To the Franklin & Tecumseh club we send greeting as we expect they will be at Putnam's landing the same day. May the lake bear upon its waters a jolly crowd, and may we have a day of unalloyed pleasure.

By order of Committee.

The HERALD job rooms turned out a pamphlet of forty six pages last week. It was a lecture on the Code of Medical Ethics delivered by Prof. Frothingham, of Ann Arbor, before the Students Social Science Association in December. It was published by the request of the medical students. We consider it one of the best jobs ever issued from the HERALD office.

The June Magazine of American History is a strong and intensely interesting number. Six articles of antiquarian and historic prominence precede three of current War literature—nine in all, and each a treasure in itself. The "Sketch of San Antonio," with which the number opens, touches upon some of the most exciting events in the history of Texas, and is as readable as a romance; its illustrations of the old mission buildings carry us back to the beginnings of America with wonder and admiration. From early Texas to modern Canada seems but a step, and Dr. Bender's argumentative paper is a striking feature of the issue. Then comes Mr. Bancroft's forcible essay on "Self Government," which no intelligent American can afford to miss—every school-boy should study it as part of his education. The several departments are crowded with matters of the first interest and importance. This magazine is a veritable necessity in every good Library collection. Typographically it is not excelled by any periodical extant. Publication office, 30 Lafayette Place, New York City.

Rev. F. Adkins and several members of the Baptist church are attending the Lenawee Association, which is in session this week at Monroe.

The members of the Tecumseh and Franklin Farmers' Club will please remember the picnic at Putman's Landing, Sand Lake, on June 12th.

The Adrian District S. S. Institute will be held at Morenci next week, June 8th and 9th. A lengthy program has been prepared. Several members of the Tecumseh M. E. church will attend.

Bain's tribute to this age and this country, if heard by every man, woman, and child in the United States, would do more to harmonize the sections than ten sessions of Congress.—Mt. Sterling Sentinel.

Never before was a Lewiston audience so well entertained as on Friday evening, Nov. 7, 1884, while listening to "Boys and Girls, Nice and Naughty," by Geo. W Bain.—W. L. Owens, County Superintendent, Mifflin County, Pa.

An ice cream social for the benefit of the Britton Band will be held at Britton's hall, Britton, on Tuesday evening, June 8th., '86. The Macon Band has been invited to attend. A good time can be relied upon. Let everybody come and help the Cornet band.

James Dunnigan is the agent at Tecumseh for Carroll & Boardman, of Jackson. This is a heavy firm and they deal in all kinds of bottled summer drinks, such as birch beer, ginger ale etc. These goods are having an extensive sale, as they are not intoxicating and no license is required to sell them.

The Michigan State Pioneer Society will meet at Lansing, next week Tuesday and Wednesday, June 8 and 9. Among the papers to be read are one by F. R. Stebbins, of Adrian, on "A trip to Lake Superior thirty years ago," and one on "A trip from Buffalo to Lenawee County in 1829" by F. A. Dewey, of Cambridge.

The Presidential wedding last evening was a very quiet affair. Jeffersonian simplicity was exemplified in a way to shock the aristocratic society of Washington. The masses of the people, without distinction of party, will heartily congratulate the President upon the wisdom shown in taking a lady of the White House.

Bain possesses in a marked degree that indescribable magnetism of appearance that characterized Clay and Douglass. By that magnetism and his matchless eloquence he held the sweltering, surging mass of humanity spell bound by appeals clothed with the most beautiful language ever heard in Kansas.—Kansas City Times.

OUR FALLEN HEROES.

HOW MEMORIAL DAY WAS CELEBRATED IN TECUMSEH.

A Fine Procession. A fine Program and a Large Crowd in Attendance.

Memorial day was observed appropriately or successfully observed in Tecumseh, think it was this year. The weather was delightful, the committees were most efficient, the literary program was excellent, the music was fine, the procession, which superb and not an incident of any kind occurred to blur the harmony of the occasion.

Shortly after one o'clock the different organizations that were to take part in the parade began to put in their appearance and the procession was formed on West Chicago street in the following order:

1—Knapp's Band.
2—The Decorating Committee of boys and girls.
3—Beer Post, G. A. R.
4—Co. C, M. S. T.
5—Tecumseh Cornet Band.
6—Officers of the Day, Choir and Common Council.
7—Macon Band.
8—Citizens in carriages.

C. A. Slayton and Fred. Rosacrans officiated as Marshals and had charge of the procession from the time it started until its return from the cemetery. The line of march was east on Chicago street to Ottawa and thence north to military square. Having arrived at the square the different sections of the parade formed around the soldiers' monument while the citizens and spectators nearly filled the remaining portions of the square, on foot and in carriages. The shade of every tree was utilized and hundreds of people stood during the entire exercises beneath the rays of a scorching sun. Upon the platform were seated the choir—the regular Presbyterian church choir, with Miss Mary Anderson at the organ—the officers of the day, and the members of the Common Council.

Prof. D. A. Hammond officiated as President of the day, and announced the program of exercises from the rostrum in the following order:

2—Prayer, Rev. L. Barnes.
3—Music, God Save our Union, by the Choir.
4—Oration, Our Nation's Heroes, Rev. J. M. Getchell. (We give this in full on the second page.)
5—Music, Cheers and Tears, by the Choir.
7—Music, Nearer My God to Thee, Wheeler's Brass Quartette.

The procession then reformed and proceeded west on Shawnee street and thence north on Union to the cemetery, where the most impressive portion of the ceremonies will be performed.

Having entered the city of the dead the procession marched direct to the circle near the west end of the grounds. Upon approaching the mound to be decorated Beer's Post and Co. C. formed in open procession, facing inwards, while the decorating brigade of juveniles passed through and were saluted by all. Around this mound Beer's Post formed two sides of a hollow square, Co. C. one side, and the Common Council, Choir and Bands the fourth side.

The beautiful Memorial Service was then rendered from the G. A. R. ritual, the chaplains being taken by the Commandery Adjt and Chaplain of the Post. This service was beautifully and impressively rendered.

Mrs. Elizabeth Moore then recited that well-known poem, "Over them over with beautiful flowers."

The children's brigade was then distributed through the grounds, a boy and girl being stationed at each grave to be decorated, and at a given signal the bugle call sounded and the graves were simultaneously strewn with flowers. At the same moment the G. A. R. comrades decorated the mound in memory of the distant dead who sleep in unknown graves. One of the floral emblems was a beautiful pillow of flowers with these words woven in the center, "Unknown Graves."

The choir then led in the national hymn "My Country 'tis of Thee," the entire company of spectators joining, after which the benediction was pronounced by Rev. L. Barnes.

The procession then reformed and with measured tread left "God's Acre" with a consciousness that duty's call had been performed in memory of our fallen heroes.

AFTERTHOUGHTS.

The clerk of the weather was in his happiest mood and could not have conducted a finer day.

The floral committee did their work well. The supply of flowers was abundant, and they were very tastefully arranged. Mrs. A. W. Mills and Mrs. S. P. Hosmer are entitled to special mention for their labors in this direction and their arrangements of the children's brigade.

Knapp's band was at its best. The members never played better and they added a new sprig of laurel to their previous reputation.

Co. C. turned out about forty rifles and their new stand of colors made its best appearance in public. The new silk banner was the cynosure of attraction of the parade. Capt. Wood has his company in a high state of discipline and he has abundant reason to be proud of his men.

The Tecumseh Cornet band showed what careful training and practice can accomplish. Their fine uniforms added much to their appearance.

The Macon band also added materially to the musical part of the program. Macon ought to be proud of her band boys, and Beers Post owe them a vote of thanks for their presence and assistance.

The procession was the finest and the crowd the largest ever witnessed on a similar occasion in Tecumseh.

Beers Post turned out nearly 100 strong. The labor of getting up the celebration devolved upon them and they carried off the honors. The success of the affair was due in a great measure to the untiring efforts of Commander Mills and Adjt. Hosmer.

A pleasing episode occurred during the exercises at the square. Four comrades, without the knowledge of the rest, went to P. J. Weiling's residence, one block distant, conveyed him in his arm chair to the grounds and seated him on the platform. His unexpected appearance was a surprise to all and he was greeted with hearty cheers.

The entire program of exercises from first to last was a grand and unqualified success.

Card of Thanks.

In behalf of Beers' Post No. 140 G. A. R. we wish to extend our hearty thanks to the choir and bands who furnished us such excellent music on Memorial Day; to Rev. J. M. Getchell, Rev. L. Barnes and Mrs. Elizabeth Moore, of Ann Arbor; also to Co. C., M. S. T., for their valuable and appreciated assistance, and to all who assisted in making the occasion the grand success that it was. And especially do we wish to thank the ladies constituting the floral committee, and the boys and girls who performed the parts assigned them, in such a magnificent manner. Your efforts to properly commemorate those who now constitute the Grand Army of the Immortals, will ever be gratefully remembered by the boys in blue.

—WOOL, WOOL, WOOL.—Having made satisfactory arrangements with Wm. H. Bold, of Monroe, Mich., to buy wool designed for Tecumseh market, I am now prepared to pay the highest market price for all clean well washed wool. My advice to those having wool to sell is to wash your sheep and then let them run until the wool is thoroughly dry, and then clip. Wash your early clippings and tags, clean and put them in sacks for fleeces. But never put unwashed tags inside your washed wool. Put your wool up in a neat compact manner, and then you can expect to get the highest price of the market. At the present outlook the prices will be paid.

Bills are coming in and I must pay them, consequently I will make Cabinet Photo's at the low price of $2.50 per Doz; and card size at $1 per Doz, until the 15th of June. WASHINGTON WOMEN.

THEIR CHARACTER AND EFFICIENCY AS UNCLE SAM'S EMPLOYES.

Their Salaries and Work—A Romance of the Treasury—The Money Counters and the Owners of Dead Letters—Old Lady Clerks, Etc.

WASHINGTON, May 8.—The government clerks employed in the departments at Washington number 16,000, making an army larger by half than that of the Napoleon in each department will be found men and women of all ages and conditions, young and old, married and single, handsome and homely, graceful and awkward, [illegible] and [illegible] Washington life [illegible] an [illegible] of life [illegible] and [illegible] of [illegible] salary.

IN CHARGE OF THE REGISTERED LETTERS.

It is a fairly well paid set of troops. Fifty-eight hundred of its number receive salaries which range from $900 to $1,800 a year, and all, from chiefs to privates, are allowed a vacation of one whole month, at almost any time of the year they choose to take it. Many of these clerks receive higher than $1,800 a year, and some range as high as $2,000. The cabinet minister gets this, and he is nothing but a clerk of the highest grade. Many of his assistants or bureau officers receive from $2,000 to $2,500, and there are great many clerks who are paid by the day, and whose fees are as much as a congressman's salary.

This army of clerks never strikes. It is content with its wages and it has no reason to complain of its hours of work. These hours are practically only six daily. The departments open at 9 o'clock, and the clerks are expected to be at their desks at that hour. They work steadily until noon, when they have an hour for luncheon. At 1 o'clock they are back at their desks, and at 4 their day's work is done.

The treasury contains between 3,500 and 4,000 clerks. It is the largest department of the government, and the scene at its doors at 4 p. m. is one of the sights of Washington. At this moment four human streams pour forth from its various exits and the streets become crowded in a moment.

LEAVING THE TREASURY BUILDING.

It is amusing to watch the characters. Here goes a dashing young lady with a lunch basket in her hand, dressed in the latest fashion and with a new spring bonnet resting jauntily above her banged curls. Beside her is a gay young man in a derby, who chats with her almost lovingly as they pass out together. In front of her is a plainly dressed old woman, who probably keeps a family out of the $720 a year which she makes by copying papers all day long, and back of her is a long thin dude with a collar as high as a shirt cuff, and a pair of enormous ears. Further back, there is a widow in mourning, and as you look at her you wonder whether her husband was a soldier. In the same crowd there is a middle-aged man in eyeglasses, who has a pink face and hair as white as frosted silver. He might be a diplomat, if you met him anywhere else than in that crowd of clerks. But you know that he has been in the government service since the days of Jackson, and that he has had relatives for years among the statesmen of the land. Then there is the young man who is always reading a paper and getting therefrom the gossip which he will vend about the hotels in the evening, and in the crowd behind is the stately looking old man in black and old style hat, and the hard featured clerk, who was probably a political striker, and who has gotten his position through influence.

A COUPLE OF ELDERLY CLERKS.

There are 4,000 women in the government departments at Washington, and among the best looking and most intelligent ladies of the capital live to be employed. They come, as a rule, from good families. Many of them are the widows of brave men, the daughters of ex-governors and ex-congressmen and now and then you will find the relative of a president or a cabinet minister. Many of them have traveled widely, and the great majority are educated and refined ladies. They do all kinds of work, and receive salaries ranging from $720 to $1,800 a year. As money counters they are much more expert than the men, and the rapidity with which they can count thousands upon thousands of dollars without making a mistake makes your brain whirl as you watch them. These money counters get about $75 a month, and they count millions of dollars every month. At one side of each one on the table lie great piles of greenbacks, done up in packages as they come from the press. I am speaking now of the redemption bureau of the treasury. These bills are old and dirty. The strip of paper around each package of bills states where they came from, and will go to all parts of the country. The clerk takes the top off, and, moistening her fingers with a wet sponge in front of her, she counts the bills like lightning. And, if the package is not right, she refuses to take it and sends the package back from which the bills came. Just again the loss falls on the poor, poor, ignorant man who has made a mistake, and it does not pass a counterfeit without showing it to you. Each clerk has a sponge and the money is taken off their salary. The sponge is provided, and they simply overcome it and after a number will make a hundred mistakes before they make one.

Not long ago a set of these money counters was engaged upon a lot of $1,000 notes. She had been handling the package for the first time for an hour or more, when she was counting a package she will say this seven inclosed with the name of the bank which she put on the table beside her. At last she came to a package that contained only ninety-nine notes, and on looking for the scrap was terrified to find that it had fallen among the others. She was sure she knew the name of the bank, but she could not prove it. The bank was notified and refused to acknowledge the mistake and the poor girl was forced to pay the $900.

Both sexes of clerks at Washington work in the same department and it is often the case that young men and young women have desks side by side. There is no restriction as to their social intercourse, and it is a matter of surprise to outsiders that so few marriages occur among the clerks. It is not that the girls are not good looking, nor that they are not good, neat and intelligent. And it is not that the men are not noble and attractive. Washington living, however, is expensive, and it is contrary to the rules of the department that two members of the same family should hold positions under the government. The ladies in the departments earn enough to keep them respectably, and they do not care to marry a man who has no larger income than themselves and have in the end not as much pocket money as before. Many of the marriages which do take place are with men outside of the departments, and it is not an uncommon thing here for a good looking clerk to marry a congressman, a senator, or a news paper correspondent. Miss Theodora Wood, who is to be Stanley Matthews' wife, was a government clerk when she met and married Judge Theakes, a former commissioner of patents. Stephen A. Douglas married a department clerk, and Attorney General Brewsters' wife, although she was Robert J. Walker's daughter, was working in the departments when he fell in love with her.

I don't think women are justly treated in the departments. Men who do the same class of work often receive higher salaries than the women, and a $1,400 clerk and a $1,200 clerk are employed on the same work at times, and the $1,200 woman perhaps does the most. It was in 1862 that women entered the service as copyists and counters at a salary of $720 per year. They were not eligible to clerkships. At the same time the men appointed to clerkships received $1,200 a year, and later, when the salary of such women was raised to $900, men doing the same work were paid as much as $1,200 and $1,400 per annum. In 1870 women were made eligible to clerkships, and since then they have been promoted until now two receive $1,800 a year. But the high priced women clerks are very few, and men who do as good work receive as a rule better pay and are more certain of holding their positions.

The young men, in the departments, as a rule, have no one but themselves to care for, and if you ask them why they are not married they will tell you that their salary is not large enough for them to support a wife. Nearly all of the single women in the departments have others depending upon them. Many of them are the sisters or brothers to school, and many of them are widows, who in this way support and educate their families.

Some of the old lady clerks are very fine looking, and some of them had noted careers in society before going into the department. One I know was the daughter of an ex-governor, and another, perhaps the most beautiful of the white haired ladies of the treasury, was the widow of an Ohio governor who was a great friend of President Lincoln. Another Ohio governor has a daughter in the departments, and one of the fine old ladies of the pension office, now a great grandmother, is a Kansas woman who was the first woman clerk ever elected by a legislative body in this country. These old lady clerks dress well, and among them are some of the most agreeable talkers in Washington. Their hearts are young, though their hair is white, and they are almost as fascinating now as when they were the belles of their native states.

OPENING DEAD LETTERS.

The women in the bureau of the dead letter office business, and it is wonderful how much this business amounts to. During the past year 4,800,000 letters were received at the dead letter office, making an average of 15,000 for every working day. Nearly 4,000,000 of those letters were never called for at the post offices to which they were directed, and 112,000 of them were sent to hotels and reached there after the guests for whom they were intended had left. The ladies of the dead letter office look over these 15,000 letters which come in daily. One set does nothing but open the letters, another reads and sort them, and another examines and redirects them to the proper places. A great many of the letters are misdirected. 1,000 of this kind come to the office every day. These misdirected letters are redirected, if possible, without opening, and sent to the persons for whom they were intended. Women who understand foreign languages are engaged in this business, as many of the letters are written by foreigners. Many of the letters contain money, and last year there was $53,000 in cash among them, and more than $1,500,000 worth of drafts and money orders. Eighty-four thousand letters contained postage stamps, 33,000 photographs and 25,000 articles of merchandise. All of this matter must be returned to the owner, or, if that is not possible, the money is covered into the treasury and the merchandise is sold at auction.

In 1884 there were 27 male clerks in the dead letter office, and 78 female clerks. The annual pay roll of the male clerks was $37,400, an average of $4 41 per day. The annual pay roll of the 78 female clerks was $73,420, or an average of $3 31 per day. The men did practically the same work as the women, but they received $1 more a day for it, and had the money work been done by women, the government would have saved $9,311. Had the men done all the work at the above rate, the pay roll would have had to be increased $24,155. It would seem that an equalization board ought to be appointed, and that Uncle Sam at least should give his nieces the same pay as his nephews when they do the same work.

Is the civil service of the government a good place for women?

It seems to me that it is. The hours of labor are short, the work is not such that it overtaxes the system, and the labor is honorable. The salaries are better than women can make in almost any other occupation, and the associations are what the women choose to make them. There used to be an idea that women in the departments were as a rule questionable characters; that they were indebted to politicians solely for their appointment, and that the appointments were often given in the way of a bargain for questionable relations with such congressmen. There may have been instances of this character, but they are by no means common, and ninety-nine hundredths of the women in the departments today are as pure as any in the country. The civil service reform has remedied the chances for an evil which has always been exaggerated, and no woman who wishes to be honest need fear that she will be insulted without cause while working for the government.

The government clerks stand well in Washington city. They are far above the average of the intelligence of men doing the same character of work which they do throughout the country, and association with them can hardly be detrimental to women. Washington is a pleasant place in which to live. It is expensive or cheap, as one wishes to make it, and it is to be in the future the great educational, social and literary center of the country. There is no reason why women should not undergo the civil service examination and partake of its advantages.

FRANK GEORGE.

WOMEN DOCTORS ABROAD

Admitted to Practice in the Glasgow Infirmaries.

[Special Correspondence.]

LONDON, May 18.—Two women graduates of the New York Eclectic College of Medicine, Dr. Emma W. Higley and Dr. Chase, created something of a sensation in Glasgow recently, by being the first women doctors ever admitted to practice in the Glasgow infirmaries. There are two colleges and infirmaries there, the Western, connected with the university, and the Royal, the largest in Great Britain and over 100 years old. Dr. Higley devoted herself to the surgical wards, while Dr. Chase chose the medical wards. The chief surgeon of the Royal had never even seen a woman doctor, though he received them with great courtesy. The gawky Scotch students were respectful, but dumb with amazement. In external applications the Glasgow doctors are believed by many to be far ahead of Americans, but in internal treatment they haven't gravitated a great distance from the dark ages.

Dr. Higley was a resident of Cincinnati during several years. She is the wife of Warren Higley, who was judge of the police court there. Less than three years ago the Higleys located in New York, the judge devoting himself to the law, while Mrs. Higley took up the study of medicine, and in two winters in college accomplished what usually takes a student three, and sometimes four sessions to acquire. She is now abroad, devoting herself to hospital practice, and in the coming autumn will open an office in New York for the regular practice of her profession.

She does this from love of the practice of medicine, not from necessity. It is a noticeable and significant fact that the women who are the growth of the present day, as it were, take very kindly to careers of activity in their profession. They are fond of nursing, and go honestly to work to win them. The times are more propitatory for them than ever before. Public sentiment is broadening and avenues are opening to women that have long been open only to the sex of brawn and beard. Let us take courage, the world moves.

CATARRH—A NEW TREATMENT.

From the Montreal Star.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern medicine has been attained by the Dixon treatment for catarrh. Out of 500 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent of patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent nostrums and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissue, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination and accomplished his claims. The Catarrh is practically cured and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure Catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured Catarrh. The Application of the remedy is simple, and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favorable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King street, west, Toronto, Canada, and inclose stamp for their treatise on Catarrh.

One Flint lady counts $100 profit in silkworm culture on a small scale.

A little handbook recently published treats on what to do in cases of sprains and other accidents. St. Jacobs Oil is mentioned as the remedy that should at once be applied. It is the greatest pain cure on earth, and costs only fifty cents a bottle.

There are three Knights of Labor lodges in Battle Creek. The last, Lincoln assembly, organized last week.

In view of a threatened epidemic of coughs like that of a year ago in Philadelphia, the Health Commissioner of Maryland officially recommends Red Star Cough Cure for all throat troubles, as being free from opiates, safe and sure, and having none of the harmful features of other cough mixtures. Only 25 cents.

My liver was so fearfully disordered and I felt so feeble and languid that I scarcely took interest in anything. Tried all the so-called remedies without relief until I used Parker's Tonic, which effected a permanent cure.—David Bash, Little Rock, Ark.

—If a profusion of blossoms upon the apple trees are an indication, there will be a great apple crop in Southern Michigan this year.

What is more disagreeable to a lady than to know that her hair has not only lost its color, but is full of dandruff? Yet such was the case with mine until I used Parker's Hair Balsam. My hair is now black and perfectly clean and glossy.—Mrs. E. Sweeny, Chicago.

—A Lansing lady complains that the card clubs offer all the excitement of gambling though there is no money staked.

Ely's Cream Balm is an article of undoubted merit. It has no rival as a catarrh remedy. It is pleasant and easy to use, being applied with the finger. It is absorbed, cleansing the passage of poisonous virus and healing the sore and inflamed membrane. Beneficial results are obtained from a few applications and a through treatment will cure. Price 50c.

I have used Ely's Cream Balm for dry catarrh to which eastern persons are subject who come to live here. It has proved a cure.—B. F. M. Weeks, Denver, Col.

A WONDERFUL OCCURRENCE.

(Detroit News)

The interest awakened in an important occurance at Jackson caused a representative of this paper to visit that city. He registered at the Hurd House and engaged Hon Frank L. Smith, its proprietor, and ex-member of the State Legislature, in conversation.

"Mr. C. De Denio, a man very well known in this community, was probably the worst wreck physically of any man this country has ever seen. He was——"

Mr. Smith stopped suddenly, and going to the door called in a man who was passing. It was Mr Denio, who said:

"I am what people call 'resurrected.' From a slight attack of rheumatism, growing out of a cold, I grew worse until my limbs were swollen fearfully and my right side entirely paralyzed. Any one who has had rheumatism knows what I suffered. The doctors were very faithful, but they did not help me. They administered morphine constantly, but it could not kill the pain. Indeed, during my raving, I declared I would shoot the doctors if I ever recovered, which of course, I was not responsible for. I looked and longed for death. But yet you see me in perfect health. Do you want to know what it was that saved my life, virtually raised me from the grave after the doctors and my friends had abandoned me and even my wife all the while? Hood's Sarsaparilla. Syrup the best medicine ever known for purifying humanity."

Mr. Denio was as naturally short-set, and so the wretch called him the "Hump." He was formerly a resident of Jackson, and no one ever dreamed he would get well. Everybody knew his condition. He was well known at the Hurd House, where Mr. Denio was a very sick man, has gone over the state of the market, and he is now in perfect health. Our readers may be interested to know that he is a resident of Detroit, and can be seen by any one who may call at his residence, 305 Orchard lake avenue. We have no interest in the matter, but we know that Hood's Sarsaparilla is the best blood purifier and should be in the hands of every sufferer and induced to take it.

A FEW OF THE LYRICAL LITERATI OF WISCONSIN.

The Dangers of Firing Guns in the Northwest—Tornados on Railroad and Boundless Health—Poets Who Are Fond of Other Poets.

MILWAUKEE June 1.—It is said that one cannot fire a gun in the state of Wisconsin without hitting a poet; that women take their hands from the dough to write sonnets of true classic form and spirit; that they compose poetry while doing the family darning; that men turn from the duties of office, from the perils and pleasures of travel by land and sea, from the dull writing of briefs and the duller writing of sermons to construct the stately chant royal or the dainty ballade or rondeau.

One unappreciative mortal, hearing the first statement, declared that he wished it were true—there would be more cases of "didn't know it was loaded."

It is further said that these same writers have formed themselves into a mutual admiration society, and spend the time not given to rhyme making in plaiting wreaths of laurel for each other's brows, so to speak. Neither of these statements is strictly correct. True it is that the glorious northwest has poets galore, but they do not go about the streets in droves, with eyes in fine frenzy rolling, manuscripts in hand; and, though they love each other dearly as brothers and sisters should, they have been known to write each other down as well as up. Neither one nor the other makes much difference with the public. It makes up its own mind. It likes or dislikes or is indifferent without much regard to the opinion of any one individual.

But the public likes personalities. It likes to know how poets, romancers and the like look, act, talk what their tastes and habits are, where they live and how, and if they do not care for an opinion upon the merits of their work they like to know of its method. Some of these I am going to tell.

At the mention of Mr. Eben Rexford's name one-half of those who read it will probably begin to hum "Silver Threads Among the Gold," while the other half will assert that its "Only a Pansy Blossom." Mr. Rexford wrote the words of these two very popular songs, thereby securing a through ticket to immortality, via the hearts of the people. He lives in Shiocton, Wis.

Here he writes verses, cultivates flowers, writes articles upon their culture for half a dozen magazines, weaves romances and performs the duties of postmaster. By appointing him to that office the government shows that it bears no ill-will to poets. He is a bachelor and, what is most unreasonable and aggravating, a contented, happy one. The world which "loves a lover" has had him the victim of a hopeless attachment, or true to a "memory," many times, but there seems to be nothing in facts to bear out the suspicion. He seems unromantically content with his single estate. He has no taste for general society. While he enjoys a good play, lecture, concert, he is not tempted by the glittering fascinations of the church social. A Whittier-like shyness has been attributed to him. It has been said that he ran away from an editorial party last summer. He disclaims the shyness and scoffs at the idea of being afraid of any editorial gang; says he has seen too many literary folk to stand in any awe of them. Which shows what a disenchanter nearness is, or else what reckless bravery is his! Mr. Rexford openly and unhesitatingly declares that he is not a genius. If he has not indeed the divine madness, he has the poetic gifts and the excellent characteristics of modesty and good sense. His admirers, however, are many and grant him far more than he claims, which is a heavier fate than falls to every poet. His writings are in good demand. He makes such an income from his literary labors as enables him to gratify his tastes, some of which he admits are expensive, and to lay aside something each year for the proverbial rainy day. It should be added that Mr. Rexford is a very good looking man. And who needs the encouragement of good looks to keep at an a poet?

Mrs. Sarah B. Robertson of a farm near Fond du Lac, Wis., A generous prosperity makes it possible for her to have all the pleasures of country life, with few of its cares and labors. It is of her it is said that she never written a treatise upon a circumstance of pursuits, or taken a prize at a fair for the traditional golden butter, though there isn't a doubt but she could do either if she tried. She has a passion for flowers, and is what is called a lucky hand in their cultivation. A broom stick set in the earth by her would feel it a duty to bud and blossom. Mrs. Robertson and her son are capital of a happy home. Among young people she is a favorite, at home, room and out of it. She has the rare power of making women her enthusiastic friends, men admire and reverence her. In conversation she is earnest, stimulating, and yet restful. There is an atmosphere of sweetness and sincerity about her that inspires confidence. Personally she is fair to see, with something of that indescribable look that one imagines poets should have. Tall, with fair, pale complexion, blue eyes, chestnut hair that ripples from a white forehead to the back of a shapely head. She writes good stories and beautiful poems, excepting in the department of love, in which she has a surplus of that divine discontent which is at once the strength and the salvation of the poet.

Carrie Bell is of medium height and slender figure, with beautiful hazel eyes and an abundance of reddish brown hair, with which she too nearly covers a fine forehead. Her features are irregular; the beauty of her face lies entirely in its expression, which is by turns thoughtful, tender, sparkling and inspiring. She is a conversationalist of transparency and intensity, fully free and self-praise. She has fine conversational earnest, witty, with a happy theory for getting at the heart of things. One of her literary friends says of her, "She always puts me in tune, or higher and better work." The basis of her character is sincerity; the hearts of her friends may safely trust in her.

She is not so fond of society as society is of her. Wealth and position do not affect her estimate of people. She knows them for what they are, and is faithful in her attachments, however to friends of her early days.

Miss Perry stands in the front rank of western poets, writing fearlessly, intensely and consistently, taking a true artist's delight in her work. Her literary efforts appear every where. She is represented in various collections of prose and verse, from selections by Kate Sanborn's "Wit and Humor of Women." She is in constant receipt of letters, congratulatory, appreciative and inquiring, resulting from admiring strangers. Her home is at Milwaukee.

In another letter to the News, I shall have more to say about the poets, and a word or two about the writers of prose who dwell on Wisconsin soil. A dozen list of literary matters is made up within the borders of our quite extensive state.

CLINTON, MICH., JUNE [illegible], 1886.

When [illegible] kind friend [illegible] our good [illegible] he makes another wager. [illegible] to him? It is [illegible] of the [illegible] Grover Cleveland, president of the United States, and not the "[illegible]."

[illegible] today [illegible] large contingent of people [illegible] into the village and [illegible] before and after the exercises [illegible] very brisk.

[illegible] was a success in every respect and much praise is due the enterprising workers and kind citizens who lent their aid to make it so. The program was not perhaps, as elaborate as at some other places, but was very effective, commendable, and was enjoyed by the visitors very much. The exercises were held at the cemetery, and the program was as follows—Song by the choir; prayer by the Rev. W. P. Wastell; Recitation by Miss Davis; Address, Rev. J. St. Clair; Reading, R. Randall; Song by the choir after which the young ladies of the floral committee closed the exercises by decorating the soldiers graves.

G. W. Hough of the Evening News was in town Wednesday.

The ladies of the Episcopal society will hold a strawberry and ice cream social at Town hall this week Friday evening.

The union memorial services were held at the Congregational Church, Sunday evening, Rev. E. P. Peirce officiating to a crowded house.

[illegible] fall a little [illegible] and many limbs were unscrewed from [illegible] on a basswood tree upon the farm of Ezra Simmons, in Franklin, a few days since, supposed to have [illegible] there deposits.

The ladies of the M. E. Church will [illegible] a meeting at the home of Mrs. Hawes, in Bridgewater, Friday afternoon [illegible]. A general [illegible] is extended to all lovers of [illegible] who may be present.

Dr. Burlingle was called to see a [illegible] Hall Friday, that was supposed to have received injury from a kick, but upon his arrival found that there was a mass of [illegible] and clotted blood underneath the skin that had been caused by some other means, and could find no evidence in the hide excepting a very slight one, and concluded it must have been done by running against a barbed wire. He probed it and let out [illegible], and at last accounts the horse was on the improve.

The ladies of the Episcopal Church will hold their social at Town Hall tomorrow, Friday evening. We hope to see all present as the invitation is general. Strawberries and cream will predominate and the ladies will wait upon you cheerfully, for a small compensation.

Dr. Cole was in town yesterday.

[illegible] George, of the Local, changed [illegible] Monday. While we were removing some partitions, and passing [illegible] remarked to a friend, "Old Charley is raising the d—l." Here is a chance—"a pointer," and we give it free. If rais'd by us, no preacher need deprive him of the benefits of Sunday school instruction for years, in case of a desire to keep the d—l out, if there is a chance for improvement he should be there!

Some representatives from the Foot Ball Club of Tecumseh, were in town Monday, to arrange for a game to take place there on the 4th of July.

Alonzo Clark arrived home from the west last Monday, and we are glad to see him so much improved in health.

Levi Hayden and sister, Grace Heck and Hetty Spaulding, were in town last Saturday, calling upon their friends and taking in the decoration ceremonies.

Mrs. R. D. Robison, of Detroit, is visiting her niece, Mrs. Chas. Clark.

Rev. P. F. Ogden, of the Baptist society, has severed his connection therewith, preached his farewell sermon last Sabbath, and with his family left Clinton yesterday for Auburn, N. Y. Our associations have been very pleasant with them, and together with many kind friends made in their sojourn here, we regret their departure and wish them success and enjoyment wherever they may locate. The pastors of the Churches called upon him Monday evening, and extended their best wishes for a beneficial future.

Change [illegible] tion, an egg measuring but one inch in circumference.

Mrs. M. F. McClure and Harry started [illegible] in Greenville and Paw Paw, last Tuesday.

Chas. Fabrique, of Brooklyn, was in town over Sunday, and called in to [illegible] Brooklyn.

The Clinton school took a holiday, vacation Monday afternoon, and the [illegible] appreciated it as [illegible] took this opportunity to pass a few moments with their friends.

David Halgare met with quite a serious accident while wrestling with George Hicks last Saturday. He was thrown with considerable force and struck upon one arm producing a fracture which caused him to relinquish labor and meditate for a few days, but we are glad to learn he is doing well at the present writing and will soon be on duty again.

James Moore, of the Wampler's Lake House, called upon us Monday. He reports business opening up very fair, has assumed the full control of the house, finished it up in fine style, and proposes to do all in his power to make his guests at home during the coming season. He is to have a celebration Saturday, July 3, and a dance, to commence at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Church, Dickey and Gray, of Jackson, will furnish the music.

While in Tecumseh last week, we called upon our old friend M. P. Brown, the photographer, and found him busy as usual, supplying his many customers with those fine pictures that have only to be inspected to be appreciated. The people will find out where to procure the best, if they will only take the pains to step in and see them. They speak for themselves, and he is bound to keep up with the times, both in style of work and moderate prices. Call in when down there and look the gallery over. You can spend a few moments very profitably.

Van Howell lost a valuable mare last Monday morning by inflamation. He drove her to town last Saturday, and upon his return in the evening, noticed that she was sweating freely and upon removing the harness, that she laye down immediately and showed symptoms of some disease, whereupon he proceeded to administer medicine for her relief, but with all avail. Sunday he drove over to Tecumseh and brought Dr. Walton to the rescue, but all that could be accomplished did not seem to avert the progress of the destroying element, and she died on Monday morning. It breaks up a valuable team for him, and is a lamentable loss. He also lost a valuable sheep Saturday, while washing his flock. Verily, troubles do not always come singly.

MACON WEDDING BELLS.

Last Wednesday evening, May 26th, at the residence of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Susan Ganoung, of Macon, occurred the marriage of Estelle Miller, daughter of Henry Miller, to Edward Osgood, of Macon, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. E. P. Peirce, of Clinton, at 8 o'clock in the presence of over one hundred relatives and friends. The bride's dress was of brown satin trimmed with beaded trimming. She wore lace and roses. The groom was neatly attired in a suit of black. The guests were most hospitably entertained by Mr. & Mrs. H. Miller, and the evening was passed as merry as a marriage bell. The Cornet band, of which the groom is a member, was present and added to the interest of the occasion by discoursing sweet music. SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

A BIG SCORCH AT RIDGEWAY.

An Incendiary Gets in his Work in a Lively Manner—The Hotel Barns and Two Stores Destroyed.

Tuesday night about 11 o'clock the cry of fire was heard which proved that the old Exchange barn was on fire. The building being in dilapidated condition at such a dry time, made it not much less than a mass of kindling wood. This accounted for the fact that before many were on the grounds, the harness store of Samuel Helm and the hardware of Coryell & Lawton could not be saved, being near the burning building.

Mr. Helm lived on the second floor and worked below, and those who were first to get there did all they could to save the contents, but succeeded only partially. From the hardware, with the exception of the show case in the store and some agricultural implements in the storeroom in the rear, nothing was saved. Harry Smith, the tinner, lost his tools in the shop on the second floor.

It was with great effort that the dwelling of Mrs. Canfield was kept from the flames. Her household goods were removed, windows broken and much water used inside, which of course damaged the house considerably. Those who worked with such a will to save this dwelling are deserving of much credit. Many came from Britton, where the hand social was just breaking up, some of whom did noble work.

The fire no doubt was the work of an incendiary whose motive it is hard to understand, but evidently he wanted to riddle the town, as another fire was set about the same time in the church sheds in the rear of the M. E. Church, which was easily put out, and where the stain and smell of Kerosene could easily be detected.

Wednesday morning the safe of C. & L. was opened and all its contents proved in good condition, though somewhat warned up. The contents of the barn amounted to but little excepting the wagon and farm implements stored there by Lafayette Rappleye. The losses and insurance are nearly as follows: Coryell & Lawton loss $3,000—insured $1,500; S. Helm, $1,000—insured $600; S. Rappleye $200 unknown; Mrs. Canfield $50—covered; Harry Smith, $250—insured $150.

This is the third mysterious fire setting in our village during the past few months, and before this gets to your readers the guilty party may be called to account.

Nothing definite is known at this writing about the rebuilding, but a much finer block of stores will likely take the place of those burned. Before this is done the remainder of the corner wreck, the old exchange, which is a disgrace to the place and a firebrand in the eyes of surrounding property holders, ought to be disposed of.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Wm. Swick lost a horse and Daniel Wiggins a cow last Sunday.

Strawberries a light crop, to-day.

C. C. Smith is about to repair his barn by putting on a gable roof.

Mrs. Bailey, of Hudson, sister of Wm. H. Arner came out last week on a visit, and is now prostrated by a stroke of paralysis.

Word received here last Tuesday confirmes the former report that James Peck, of Fenwick, formerly a resident of this place was lying at the point of death.

Several from here took in the lecture of Geo. W. Bain last Tuesday evening and were delighted.

Lafayette Rappleye, Jr. writes that he now has a good position in a merchantile establishment in Sioux City, at $40 per month.

Our new school house, a one story, two roomed building, is to be built upon the present site. Is to be 28x63 feet, with wing in front 12x23 for the entrance, vestibule and wardrobes. Plans and specifications are in the hands of the director where they can be examined. Sealed proposals received till the close of June 15th.

Children's day will be observed next Sunday. The church will be decorated Saturday P. M. where all interested are invited to bring flowers and assist in the arrangements. Sabbath morning the pastor desires all the children to be present as this service will be conducted in a way to interest them. In the evening the entire program will be in charge of the school and as usual will be good, because what the children do is always well received.

The play "Ten nights in a bar room" is to be presented here under canvas, Friday and Saturday evenings, this week, by an amateur combination under the direction of Phil. Phelps, of Blissfield. Permanent arrangements are being made to visit a few towns during the season. Those who have entered the combination from this place are W. K. Burrell, and A. R. Arner. The Britton band have been invited to furnish music at the entertainment here. Admission 15 and 25 cents.

LAKE RIDGE LACONICS.

Sheep sheering and road work is now in order.

Crop prospects very poor. No rain since the 14th ult. Corn a poor stand on clay. Timothy meadows almost a failure, clover light, wheat short, thin and uneven.

A. Easlick is putting up a kiln to burn tile in. He has constructed a pump for drawing the water out of the clay pit, of the capacity of five barrels per minute or 3,000 barrels in ten hours. It is run by a belt from the main shaft of the engine.

Two swarms of bees at John Stewarts last Sunday.

A good tile burner would find employment at the tile works.

M. J. Martin had a ten mile tramp after a mare and colt, last Friday, that broke out of the pasture from a scare by a threshing engine.

Henry Moon is still alive, but in a very critical condition.

Now is a good time to clean out open ditches, or replace them with large tile. Farmers are becoming quite interested in the tiling business. Many claim that most of the drains constructed by drain commissioners would do better service if constructed of large tile, and would not cost but little over half as much in the first instance, including tile, save the cleaning out every two years, besides the use of land, convenience and beauty of landscape, as nothing looks worse than an open ditch with weeds and bushes grown up on either side. Others claim that a large tile drain on each side of sufficient depth to give good drainage to the road bed would insure better roads and thereby give farmers a good outlet at less cost than the open road ditches.

Four young men from this vicinity attended a barn warming last Friday night in Saline township. On arriving two of the boys jumped out, and the other two started to put out the team when a dog rushed out frightening the team so that they became unmanable and ran away. The buggy was soon demolished and the team brought up in Moreville. One of the horses and one of the boys were quite severely injured and the buggy was a total wreck.

HOLLOWAY HAPPENINGS.

Mrs. Gorden has been dangerously sick during the past week, but is now on the road to recovery.

A. F. Gorden is at home at present but expects to start for Valparaiso, Ind., where he goes to take instructions in pedagogueing as soon as his mother is sufficiently recovered.

Geo. Holloway is not as handsome as when we last saw him, but says he feels better than he did when his teeth were aching.

Last week Dr. Begel's father, who resides in Jackson Co., came to Holloway to spend his eightieth birthday, and the doctor's people concluded to give him a little surprise by inviting in all the old people in the neighborhood. The old gentleman was taken completely by surprise, and no wonder, for it was the first birthday party he had enjoyed in eighty years. Dinner was served, after which the guests all settled down to pioneer stories and the like. But the most amusing part of it all was that a majority of these present were very deaf, and a person standing outside would have taken it for a caucus, by the loud talk indulged in. All voted it a success and we opine that it will be a long time before as jolly a lot of old people will be gathered under one roof in Holloway.

An ice cream and strawberry festival will be held at the Presbyterian parsonage on Thursday evening, June 17th, proceeds to go for the benefit of the society. The affair will be gotten up and managed by the young people of the society and a cordial invitation is extended to all.

It must have been a terrible state of affairs that caused the Psalmist to ask: "Who can stand before his cold?" In his day the remedies were few and doubtful, how much happier should this generation be, that has a household remedy. Dr. Boll's Cough Syrup, so wonderful has been its cures that millions rise up and call it "blessed."

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS.

[Prepared by Rev. J. H. Vincent, D. D.]

LESSON THIRTY-SIXTH.

John 7. 37-39. Golden Text. Matt 10. 16. Time, Oct. 17, A. D. 29. Place, Jerusalem, in the Temple Court.

It was the feast of the Tabernacles. The harvest was gathered, and the people were assembled in Jerusalem to render thanks to God, as well as to commemorate the life of Israel in the wilderness and their settlement in permanent places of abode. At this feast every one lived in booths, rough huts of living boughs and twigs of trees. These were erected in open squares and courts and upon the house tops. The feast lasted seven days, and every day the priests, with a large choir and followed by vast crowds of people, went out to the spring of Siloam, where they drew water in a golden vessel, amidst the most extraordinary rejoicings. Magnificent chants from the writings of Isaiah rose on the morning air as the singers and people joined in the beautiful invitation, "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters," and "with joy shall ye draw water from the wells of salvation." Returning to the temple the water was poured upon the altar and the impressive services of the day were celebrated. Jesus arrived in Jerusalem during this feast, and at once took up a position in the temple and began to teach. His words aroused a bitter feeling of antagonism in the minds and hearts of the Rabbis and leaders, as well as many of the common people; and yet not a few believed on him. A warrant was issued for His arrest and given to the temple police; but although they kept Him under constant surveillance, they did not attempt to arrest Him. The last day of the feast was the culmination of its rejoicing and splendor. The people went forth with a branch of citron in one hand and a lulab (a branch of palm woven round with willow and myrtle) in the other. An immense procession passed round the walls seven times amidst the most tremendous enthusiasm, and inspired with glorious music, in commemoration of the fall of Jericho. From the vast multitude arose, ever and anon, the ringing Hosanna and Hallelujah of praise, while every one was carried away with the intense enthusiasm of the hour. Another and a similar procession went, as usual, to the pool of Siloam to draw the pitcher of water for use at the altar. It was when this procession was returning that Jesus seized the opportunity for making a grand declaration of His divinity, and at the same time giving a true, spiritual significance to the exercises in which they were engaged. During a temporary lull in the outbursts of song and shout, the voice of Jesus, sweet, soft and clear, was heard: "If any man thirst, let him come to me and drink. He that believeth on me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water." In that burning, parched autumn weather, the very word "water" would have a magical interest for every hearer. We can well imagine that the words of Jesus commanded instant attention, and we do not wonder that they made a profound impression. This was the last recorded utterance of Christ at this feast, and it is a grand and fitting close to His remarkable teachings, and His claims of divine Sonship on this occasion. His divinity was unimpeachable, for, as the the temple police said in justification of their neglect to arrest Him, "Never man spake like this man."

LESSON THOUGHTS.

1. Jesus Christ is the Son of God.
2. As Son of God and Son of Man, He is the Savior of the world.
3. Believe on Him, and thus secure the blessings He alone can give.
4. The teachings and life of Christ are a proof of His divinity. "Never man spake like this man."

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[From our Regular Correspondent.]

WASHINGTON, July 4, 1886.

Seldom have bridal rooms held a more happy wedding day than did Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland. The marriage was the chief topic of conversation throughout the city, the attendants at the White House were busily completing their preparations, the Marine band was rehearsing, knots of people were clustering around the Executive Mansion, and every one was pleasantly excited. But the contracting parties seemed less concerned than those about them. The President spent most of the day in his office opening his mail and attending to routine business. Whenever any reference was made to the coming event by the few friends who were allowed to see him during the day, he would chuckle good naturedly, but there was nothing in his demeanor to indicate that he was the man whose approaching marriage was interesting sixty million people. After inspecting the floral decorations, the bride passed the day in her room with her mother and the President's sisters, and showed no more nervousness than the occasion would seem to justify.

The wedding was very quiet. A crowd had collected in the White House grounds, but the people respected the President's wishes that the marriage should be private, and no noisy demonstrations were indulged in, and nothing but the merry chimes of bells and firing of cannon showed that the event was anything more than a mere private wedding. The President wore a smoothly fitting dress suit of black cloth, with white lawn tie. The bride's dress was of ivory satin. During the ceremony Mr. Cleveland looked self possessed and supremely contented. After the guests had offered their greetings to the bride, who was, unlike Niobe, all smiles, and congratulated the President, they moved into the dining room where an elaborate collation was served. The President and Mrs. Cleveland soon withdrew, however, and reappeared in traveling costume. Amid a shower of rice and old shoes they drove away to take the train for Deer Park, a little summer resort in Maryland, where they will spend about a week.

During the day messages of congratulation were received from Queen Victoria, President Grevy of France, Emperor William of Germany, King Leopold of Belgium, President Diaz of Mexico, Emperor Dom Pedro of Brazil, and a number of other crowned heads of Europe and Presidents of Central and South American Republics.

The members of the Diplomatic Corps in this city, although they had received no formal notice of the wedding, yet felt that from their official relations with the President they should take some notice of his marriage. Accordingly a meeting was held Wednesday in the house of Mr. Nogueiras, the Portuguese Minister, and it was decided that Mr. Preston, the Minister from Hayti, should call upon Secretary Bayard and through him convey to the President the congratulations and good wishes of the whole body of diplomats. There was no feeling of surprise manifested among the Diplomatic Corps at not having received invitations to the ceremony because the recent deaths in the family of the bride was considered sufficient reason that the wedding should be strictly private. Then the President has so rigorously excluded from the preparations for the every any official act, that the foreign representatives were not at all surprised at the omission.

The floral decorations in the parlors and dining room of the White House were very beautiful and artistic, and it was a very graceful act of Mr. Cleveland to order that the flowers used should be distributed among the hospitals of the District.

The bridal presents were many and rich, but they were not extravagant in number or value. The gift of the President to his bride was a beautiful diamond necklace, in which she seemed to take much delight. The presents from the Cabinet officers and their wives were mostly articles of jewelry, though there were several handsome gifts of silverware.

During the day an old farmer and his wife drove up to the White House in a dilapidated and ancient one horse vehicle, that looked as if it had been in use before the war. The farmer stopped at the entrance, and carried up to the door a big market basket filled with great, blushing strawberries, each one of which looked as large as a tea cup. "This is a present to Mrs. Cleveland" said the farmer, adding as he drove away, "I'll call around for the basket in a day or two."

THE TUMSEH MICH., JUNE 19 1886

Attorney General Garland did not attend the wedding. He could not overcome his indignation to a strike tried god.

"All the world loves a lover," and the President has increased his popularity among all classes by his recent matrimonial venture.

It is said that the President sent our only 3-lb honeymoon wedding cake. This is construed by some as an indication that he does not desire a renomination.

Not even matrimony can disturb the President's nerves. On the day of the wedding he sat at his desk, engaged in official business during the entire afternoon until six o'clock, and was prompt as ever to time at seven for the marriage ceremony.

Willard Stearns was last week confirmed as postmaster at Adrian, and W. T. B. Sweetzer born as postmaster at Hudson. There was no very good reason for delay the confirmation of either of them. They have both proven themselves to be faithful public servants.

President Cleveland went a fishing at Deer Park last Saturday and caught a fine string of mountain trout. The telegraph does not state whether the bride caught any trout; neither does it state whether she cooked the trout for their Sunday morning breakfast.

The appointment of W. H. Cleveland of Adrian as appraiser of the Port of Detroit was announced last week. The choice is a most admirable one. Mr. Cleveland is eminently fitted for the peculiar duties of that position, and the entire Democracy of Lenawee County will extend their congratulations.

Among the guests at the White House wedding, as stated in the dispatches, were Mrs. Cadman and Miss Huddleston, of Detroit, relatives of the bride. The Jackson Citizen rises to remark that these ladies are residents of Jackson, and that the Central City was ably represented at the great social wedding.

The morning daily papers had very full accounts of the Presidential wedding but, like Abou Ben Adhem, the N. Y. Sun "led all the rest." Its report covered two entire pages, giving every detail of the affair, many parts of which were written in the most scholarly and classical style. The whole report was a model of its kind.

The N. Y. World says:

Governors Curtin, of Pennsylvania, Kirkwood, of Iowa, Ramsey, of Minnesota, and Sprague, of Rhode Island, are the only war Governors now living.

The World should study upon Western history. Austin Blair, the veteran war-governor of Michigan still lives, is practicing law at Jackson, and is apparently good for ten or fifteen years' service yet.

The death of John Kelly removes from the political arena one of the foremost American politicians for the past fifteen years. As the leader of Tammany Hall, the most compact and powerful political organization in this country, his power was well nigh autocratic. He made and unmade governors, and in at least one instance turned the tide in a Presidential election. Although no one disputes Mr. Kelly's personal honesty, his political methods are not to be commended. It is very doubtful whether another political "Boss" will ever arise in this country again possessing his power and influence.

The resignation of Secretary Manning has been made public in a lengthy letter to the President in which his reasons are fully stated. The President in his reply urges him to withhold the same until [illegible] and in the meantime take a leave of absence to recuperate his health. Mr. Manning, contrary to general expectation, when he assumed the treasury portfolio, has proven himself to be the ablest member of the new administration. His masterly management of the finance department [illegible] Senate [illegible] Bayard and Hugh McCulloch as a financial minister. Good citizens everywhere will pray for his full restoration to health and his return to the treasury department.

THE WHITE HOUSE WEDDING.

Long before this issue of the HERALD shall reach them, our readers will have perused from the daily papers or city weeklies a full and detailed account of President Cleveland's marriage. Instead of duplicating the reports which they will read elsewhere, we give them a supplementary chapter consisting editorial comments of the press upon the auspicious event. We believe they will afford our readers a variety and as some interesting reading.

Wash a Dollar of Its Dollar.

This is a democratic country, where persons are equal before the law. The President only had to pay a dollar. [illegible] marriage license.—N. Y. Star.

By Four Bottom Dollar on It.

Returns received up to the hour of going to press indicate that Mrs. Cleveland could probably be reelected without serious opposition.—Philadelphia Times.

They Want to Know Him Better.

When Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland settle down to housekeeping she ought to escort him to market now and then and take him around town walking so that he will get acquainted with the city.—Washington Critic.

Matrimony the Rage.

It is believed that a matrimonial boom will now set in. Bachelorhood will go out of fashion and surprising marriages will be heard of on all sides. Perhaps the President could not have instituted a more needed or salutary reform.—Elmira Gazette.

A Revised Ritual.

It is noticeable that the word "obey" was left out of the Presidential marriage ritual. And this is all the better, for no one can now know which one of the couple should do the obeying. Our own opinion is that the bride is the better half of the administration.—Albany Times.

Theophilus Slush Turned Loose.

While Miss Folsom was holding a dear friend good by a Herald reporter obtained a good view of Miss Folsom. Her face is not only handsome, it is classic. Her brow is like the brow of a Greek goddess. Her eyes—soft and searching—are intellectual and full of spirit. The sweetest of smiles ever changing, ever beautiful, play about her eyes like sunbeams.—N. Y. Herald.

An Illustrious Precedent.

Cleveland is 49 years old, Mrs. Cleveland is 22. There is twenty seven years difference in their ages; still there is not much more difference than there was in the ages of President Madison and his wife, and Mrs. Madison made one of the best mistresses the White House ever had. She was just as old as Mrs. Cleveland is now when she married Madison.—Cleveland Leader.

The Etiquette Explained.

A misit Democratic paper criticises the good taste of "Miss Folsom coming alone to the President's house to be married." This remark is subject to correction. Miss Folsom did not come alone. She was accompanied by her mother and her nearest male relative. The White House is not "the President's house." It is an official establishment, owned and supported by the Government, in which the President sometimes finds it convenient to live. It is not even Mr. Cleveland's legal home. He is registered and, if he chooses, votes in Buffalo. There could not be a more appropriate place for the marriage.—Washington Post.

It was Just a Lovely Wedding.

It was a quiet, decorous little ceremony, as nearly private as any such affair at such a place could be, and it is pleasant to be able to say that, under circumstances of peculiar embarrassment, the marriage of the President was conducted with the good taste that avoids not only vulgar display but the still more vulgar parade of informality. It is no idle form, but as the expression of a sincere and universal feeling that all will join in the kindliest wishes for Mr. Cleveland and his bride. In questionably this week has brought him into closer and more cordial relations with the big heart of the people, and that is a good thing for them as well as for him.—Philadelphia Times.

The White House saw a Home.

There was a wedding at our House Wednesday, and we are all feeling in holiday and honeymoon humor about it. The stern old pile which we call the Executive Mansion, and which we are wont to look upon as in a sense symbolical of National law and government, bloomed a rare light bower of June roses. Love had captured the fortress of the State. Into the great mansion of care and responsibility came the grace and truth, the tenderness and strength of woman. Into the White House came a wife, and the White House became a home. It is thoughts like this which mellow the hearts of the American people, whatever be their political creeds, and there is not among them one who has a home, or who remembers a home, or who longs for a home, that does not wish that this new home may be consecrated and blessed by all that is beautiful and sweet and holy in the life of home.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Bride to be Proud of.

It is evident that the White House is to have a mistress of whom the President and the country may feel honestly proud.—Utica Observer.

Col. Dan. takes the Cake.

Whether Dan. Lamont made a piece of the President's wedding cake or not, history has not yet revealed; but never mind if he didn't. The people for the sake of cakes the cake universal, is his.—N. Y. Sun.

The Administration Test.

The Arab who yesterday tried to make his way into the President's dwelling without ceremony or form was very properly repulsed as a suspicious party. Miss Rose Elizabeth Cleveland has demonstrated her ability to arrange.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The Bride to be Congratulated.

Those who are honored with the intimate acquaintance of Grover Cleveland recognize the sympathetic, sunshiny nature that lies beneath the sternness of official responsibility, and they can congratulate the fair bride in securing a loving husband, whose noble qualities and sincere affection will illumine her pathway in life with happiness.—Albany Argus.

Luckier than his Bride.

There will be many who will in the bottom of their hearts think him luckier than his bride, of whom Miss Cleveland is reported as saying: "My brother might have searched the world over without finding a sweeter, purer girl." But then, bridegrooms are generally luckier than their brides in these respects.—New Haven Palladium.

The President's Sister Next.

To day gossip had it that the handsome Congressman Lefevre, of Ohio, had captured the heart of Miss Rose Elizabeth Cleveland. The report spread like wildfire. Mr. Lefevre blushed like a school girl when the matter was mentioned. He looked guilty, but declared that he wasn't. He says he has only a pleasant acquaintance with the lady.—Boston Globe.

Mr. Lamar's Turn Next.

Secretary Lamar is admitted by the ladies to have been the best dressed man among the guests. His white waistcoat gave him a particularly festal air, and his manner had all the chivalrous warmth of his own sunny South. It is believed that he will soon follow the example of his chief, and marry an old love, now one of the wealthiest widows in Georgia.—Philadelphia Press.

A Consummation Devoutly to be Wished.

Bachelors have not had a happy administration. Buchanan's ended in civil war. Tilden's had to be conducted on the outside, while an imposter got all the benefit, and Cleveland's has been a series of Mugwump harassments. With the wedding all the ills showered by the fates upon bachelors who undertake to administer the affairs of a nation very generally married will cease, most likely, forever.—Albany Times.

The True-hearted American Girl.

Mrs. Cleveland has passed through an average American experience, and has come from a domestic atmosphere which is familiar to most girls who have been bred in comfortable circumstances, especially in the country. She has been carefully instructed, and has been taught by example and precept that her dependence must be on herself, and that nothing worth having in life is obtainable except by conscientious devotion to duty, self sacrifice, self denial and humble obedience to the commands of God. She is thus a simple and representative American woman, to whom the ways of snobbish society are unknown, and who has no sympathy with the false standards and unrepublican distinctions that are too often set up. They are far apart from her, and belong to a land of which she has no understanding and in which she would have no citizenship. All hail, then, to the bride of the White House, the simple and true-hearted American girl! May peace and happiness ever attend her! May her gentle faith in God and humanity be rewarded with the richest gifts and choicest blessings life can bestow. That is the prayer of every man and every woman in the republic to-day, and the invocation comes straight from their hearts.—N. Y. Sun.

Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine for June is especially noticeable for its numerous full page illustrations, some of which are exceptionally beautiful. The Luray Cave, in Page County, Va., is the subject of several fine cuts. A beautiful picture is a reproduction of a painting by Agustin Lhardy, entitled "Preparations for a lay in the country," and a number of contrasted scenes on the two rivers, the Rhine and the Hudson, give some idea of the beauty of these two famous streams. An antiquarian interest attaches to the article on the first edition of the "Pilgrim's Progress," with reproductions of its quaint engravings and a fac simile of the text. A beautiful reproduction of one of Giacomelli's bird pictures shows the helmet crested humming bird and its foes. Many other beautiful pictures fill the number, while the literary portion is up to the high level of this favorite family magazine. Published by Mrs. FRANK LESLIE, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

That tired feeling, from which you suffer so much, particularly in the morning, is entirely thrown off by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

IN AN INSTANT.

Prominent People Who Drop Dead and What Ails Them.

Mr. W. H. Vanderbilt while talking with President Garrett suddenly dropped dead. Vice President Hendricks took a severe cold, and in a day's time was no more. General McClellan after a drive in a cold wind sank in his chair and breathed his last. These are a few of the most prominent cases of sudden death, thousands of which are occurring constantly. Doctors usually shake their heads and say "heart disease" or "appoplexy." Not one case in ten is so caused. We go back of all this and find the cause, which is invariably—Rheumatism. This disease has usually been considered painful but not dangerous, whereas it is one of the most dangerous of all afflictions. It is caused by morbid humors in the blood, and if it flies to the heart the sufferer dies instantly. Suppose, for example, a person takes cold which becomes painful in the shoulder, limbs or around some joint. And suppose the cold is driven from that locality, where does it go? To some other part of the body, possibly the head, possibly the heart. What is the result? Death! It is dangerous to try and drive rheumatism. It is a blood disease and can only be fought in the blood while its dangerous nature makes it an exceedingly serious subject. Unquestionably the most efficient means for driving these morbid humors, acids and rheums from the body now known to the world is Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup. It is an original discovery which aims directly for the blood and is taken into the circulation within ten minutes from the time it is used. It dissolves the poisonous acids, counteracts the deadly humors and expels all rheums from the circulation. Mr. George W. Kennedy, secretary of the Electric Light Co., of Jackson, Mich., after going through a severe experience which greatly affected him and endangered his life was completely restored by the use of this remedy and in speaking of it he said: "Unlike an external application it seems to remove the disease by purifying the blood, and I can cordially recommend it to all."

This is a serious subject which may well concern every reader. Muscular rheumatism is dangerous. Its slightest approach may well inspire terror. It should be checked at once and—by the means which will most certainly and efficiently do it.

The Old and New Jersey Cow.

What breeding will do for animals is seen in the following interesting picture. This show the change that has taken place during the development of the Jersey. Some hundreds of years ago little cows like these in the picture were the Jerseys, but after many generations of breeding and care, which the farmers in Jersey have bestowed upon this country, which happened years ago, it was the fashion to call them "Alderneys." Now it is the fashion to call them "Jerseys."

They had been favorites on gentlemen's farms in England previous to 1884. Then it was decided by the Royal Jersey Agricultural society to begin to breed them for beauty. Most organizations must have the word "royal" tacked to them in Great Britain, it seems, or they won't go. The lords and gentlemen farmers resolved to force straight the Jersey on ornamental principles, so that she would be a decoration on high priced lawns and pastures. They undertook to give her a more graceful, deer-like shape, and to have her of solid color, which means all of one color. Previously the breed had been spotted and pied, like ordinary cattle.

JERSEY COW OF THEN AND NOW.

The fashionable colors were solid fawn, silver gray and pale lemon fawn. In 1884 two typical cows were selected to test from, as showing nearest perfection of that shape and color desired to be reproduced. Paintings were made of the two animals. One of them was the cow whose picture is here given. The other animal is the most famous fashionable butter maker of these days, Mary Anne, of St. Lambert. The longer body, straight line of the back and more delicate head are some of the points of difference. Since 1884 the fashion has been to breed for color and shape. The recent butter making exploits of the breed, however, have knocked the breath out of the color and shape boom. The craze is now for butter makers, be form and color what they will. So possibly the next generation will revert to the white spots and rough frame.

OLD AND NEW JERSEY BULL.

The greatest difference has been made in the bull by the half century of breeding for form and color. The butchers of our time use bad words over the visible admixture of Jersey blood in beef cattle. This is because the Jerseys are small and slim. The portrait of the bull of fifty years ago shows that he was a better beef animal than his slim-shanked successor of to-day. Observe the depth of brisket and shoulder. The fashionable developers have been breeding the meat off instead of on the Jerseys. Now that the current is setting another way, perhaps these favorite cattle may increase in weight and return to their beef-making qualities, so they will indeed be the breed of the millenium. Why not breed for size, too? Then we can say: This is the cow I long have sought.

German Kainit.

In the south and New England especially, where commercial fertilizers must be so generally used, anything that will give the much needed potash will be of unusual value. Quite a number know that German kainit is the desideratum, but this knowledge is not possessed by the great mass who stand in need of it.

German kainit is a natural product dug from the earth in Germany, as its name indicates. It can be easily and cheaply mined and prepared for market, and these in a position to know say that it can be put from Atlantic seaports at a cost of not above $8 per ton. The supply is considered inexhaustible. The chemical composition of kainit is: Sulphate of potash, 25; sulphate of magnesia, 15; chloride of magnesia, 12; chloride of sodium, 32; moisture, 14; insoluble, 2.

It is at once apparent that kainit would be a most valuable constituent of a mixture of fertilizers for many of our farm and garden crops. It is an established fact that while clover contains a larger amount of nitrogen than almost any other crop grown on the farm, it does not seem to need nitrogenous manures. Potash and lime are the elements it most needs. It is well known that the best way in which to supply the lime is by applying gypsum; and can there be any doubt that the most feasible means of providing the potash is afforded by German kainit? Potatoes are another crop frequently greatly benefited by a provision of potash; and where commercial fertilizers only are used on this crop, it is reasonably certain that kainit should be one of them.

The composition of a complete economical manure for cotton is an important problem, as commercial manures must at present, at least, be relied on altogether to make profitable yields of this king of southern crops. The only considerable elements of the list of cotton are nitrogen, lime, potash, phosphoric acid and magnesia, the percentage of potash being large. Superphosphate will give the phosphoric acid; gypsum, the lime and nitrogen (the last element gathered by it, not contained in it), but until the use of kainit was suggested to supply the potash in sufficient [illegible] at a reasonable cost, there was no economy. Kainit, however, gives both the potash and magnesia, completing the special fertilizer for cotton.

"It is almost needless to suggest the use of kainit upon tobacco. This crop needs potash so urgently and largely that kainit is the very fertilizer for it.

Girdling Fruit Trees.

Professor J. L. Budd, of the Iowa Agricultural college, writes: Mr. A. B. Spalding, of Springfield, Ill., has tried girdling for fruit for a number of years past. He tried it at first only to girdle every other tree in thickly planted young orchards, but he now rings all the trees. He rings the second or latter part of April, which time with us in the central district of Iowa would be from the 20th to the 25th of May. He takes off a ring of bark from the size of one half inch in width entirely around the tree, taking care not to injure the cambium layer under the bark. He says: "If hard winters will kill the trees, so much the more necessity for getting them to bear when young, hence I begin to girdle when the trees are but six years old. So far I have found no harm resulting from the process. It sets them to bearing at once, and they bear full, too."

With thickly planted orchards, where the alternate trees will soon have to be removed, Mr. Spalding's plan may be safely tried. To illustrate its working on thrifty young trees: Two years ago, on the 10th of May, I was looking at some vigorous Tetofsky trees, on rich soil, which had not yet borne a dozen apples, though over four inches in diameter of stem. I recommended ringing, and at once the owner pulled out his knife and went at them, taking off a ring of bark nearly an inch in width. Of course this did not check the ascent of water and nutriment to the roots in the newer wood, and it [illegible] the perfect assimilation of [illegible] the leaves. Yet it prevented—[illegible] formation of new deposits of [illegible] below the ringing. Hence [illegible] energy in the top to that ripened state of wood which favors blossoming and fruiting.

The next spring these trees were white with blossoms, and they held a fine crop of fruit.

Rough Feed Wanted.

All domestic animals need rough feed or "stover" mixed along with the fine food, hogs as well as the rest. In the case of the ruminating animals, it is doubtful if grain or meal fed alone goes to the first stomach at all. A large majority of the experiments made to determine this point clearly show that fine foods do not, to any material extent, go to the first stomach when fed to cattle alone; and if food does not go to the first stomach it can be only very imperfectly digested, since it escapes the macerating process of the rumen, and being remasticated and mixed with the saliva. How true this is every large feeder of cattle, in the west at least, must know. A large proportion of the kernels of corn eaten by the animals is found in their droppings, some whole, others broken, but all indigested. If they had passed into the first stomach they would have been raised and remasticated, and certainly would not have escaped this process scarcely broken. So it is when meal is fed. It passes into the third and fourth stomachs, a mass of dough into which the gastric juices cannot penetrate. It is true that the muscular contractions of the stomach will give a gentle motion to the dough; but this will make it more compact rather than of a character that the gastric juice can operate freely upon it. If, however, we mix this meal with cut straw or hay the mixture will go to the first stomach, and will, of course, be remasticated, while the bits of straw or hay will allow the gastric juice to circulate through the mass and insure complete digestion.

In June.

Those who have orchard grass and clover in some fields will be glad that they may begin the hay harvest by cutting these long before timothy and red top meadows are ready for the mowing machine. This saves a great deal of worry; and when the timothy is ripe it may be cut at once if proper calculations have been made. As to the age when timothy should be cut, it is well to bear in mind that for one's own use it can hardly be cut too green after the heads are well out, but for sale for city feeding it is preferred as old as it can be without the seed shelling off from the heads. It is used not so much as nutriment as for bulky food with oats or ground feed.

Watch for the currant worm, and as soon as the leaves appear ragged apply white hellebore—a tablespoonful to the pail of water—by means of a syringe. Repeat in about a week.

Many opinions may be pushed to advantage by frequent feeding, be it as having a free run, if possible, while they are growing and, before they are put up to fatten. After ducks have passed the delicate stage, and have their feathers, they may be given frequent feeds of food to give them rapid growth and size. The earlier they are sold after they become marketable the greater will be the profit.

The curculio attacks the plums soon after the fruit is set. Jarring the trees and catching the fallen insects upon sheets spread upon the ground is the only effective remedy. If one bud on a graft takes the start of all the others stop it by pinching. If shoots appear upon grapevines where they are not wanted remove them.—American Agriculturist.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JUNE 10 1886

A SERMON FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

BY REV. CHAS. SCRIBNER.

Psalm 60:4. Thou hast given a banner to them that fear thee, that it may be displayed because of the truth.

Twenty-five years ago, on the last days of April, the first gun, aimed by the hand of treason, was hurled upon Fort Sumpter.

For months before, the rumbling of thunder and the flash of lightning had told of an approaching storm; it had come; and for four years it delivered its lightnings; but it was but a child not two or four years old, when President Lincoln issued his first call for troops. There are some of you here to-day who well remember the excitement, the terrible expense of those days, days which stretched into months and years before the young war ceased to be heard. But God had given a banner to the people of the North to be displayed in the name of liberty and truth and right nobly and loyally was that flag borne. Our glorious stars and stripes, the red, white and blue emblem of truth and liberty and right. Herald of freedom to the disenfranchised slave. Flag of our union. Where soever does not sun-shine with a brighter fire, whose heart does not beat with a deeper, stronger pulsation, whose breast is not filled with a truer love of country, when he sees upon the flag of the free, floating majestically over the land of the free and the home of the brave.

Under this flag the oppressed find refuge from the oppressor. Where it is unfurled to the breeze, it proclaims liberty. But in those awful days of war, our flag was in danger. Treason would its enemies have trampled it in the dust, we may no more.

But in the hearts of America's sons there glowed the love of liberty and of country which burned so bright in the hearts of their fathers, the form lovers of the nation.

No sooner was the President's call for volunteers from north than thousands of brave men sprang to arms at the beating of the drum with the navies, to defend the flag of their country. First [illegible] for three months, then of soldiers for three years of the war, then in rapid succession calls for 300,000 men at a time. And the summons did not go unanswered. Earth from their dwellings, from the graves of the North. The farmer left his field half plowed, the grain half garnered, the mechanic laid down the peaceful tools of his trade to take up the weapons of war. The lawyer forgot his patients, the lawyer his clients, the minister committed his flock to the care of their Shepherd. From every place and profession hastened to the rally round the standard of their country. Every [illegible] of Union. From the valleys of New England, from the farms of the Empire state, from the valleys of the Mississippi, and from the plains of the West. Every section of the Northern states responded to the call. Our navy, as brave men as ever [illegible] Who shall say [illegible] the last [illegible] the only [illegible] to the great Father [illegible] has [illegible] the Lord [illegible] and returned to this peaceful people. [illegible] shown a [illegible] that they were freemen [illegible] the world, an influence [illegible] to the extent of [illegible] in the cause of peace [illegible] for their rights [illegible] Was not a pass [illegible] than [illegible] with sword and gun [illegible] The star-[illegible] over a united [illegible] But [illegible] In money [illegible] than school [illegible] lives [illegible] We do not attempt to reason their [illegible] for the great [illegible] Think of [illegible] three hundred thousand strong [illegible] dying for love of country. But [illegible] these two items are only a small part of the losses which our nation sustained during this terrible conflict. The price paid for our national safety can never be computed for who can set a value upon hearts broken, hopes and homes and happiness ruined. Who can put an estimate upon a wife's, a mother's tears. Who but the good God in heaven can know what our civil war cost. But the price paid was not too great. The results worth all it cost. We stand to-day a united people. Our flag waves over North and South, over East and West. The question of slavery in free America has been settled forever. Even the people of the South now see that it was a curse to them instead of a blessing. The freed slaves are rapidly advancing in civilization, making substantial progress in all directions. Thousands of them are now land owners. They are improving the religious and educational advantages offered them, and are growing in intelligence and virtue; they are learning the rights and duties of free men.

In the twenty years since the close of the war, we have made most wonderful strides as a nation. God has blessed us with peace and prosperity. The issues of the war are not forgotten, but time has in a great measure closed the breaches it made. Few are left who cherish hatred in their hearts. The boys in blue and the boys in gray now meet as brothers of one common family. True, the ex-president of the Southern confederacy still lives to hurl his hatred at the North, to say that he has never repented of his treason and never wants to be forgiven. His late enthusiastic reception in the South shows that the cause for which he fought still lives in the hearts of some. But it can not be for long. Common interests must unite a common people. A new generation will bury the hatreds of the past, and live in newer and good will of the present. In the South, as well as in the North, prosperity smiles. The ravages of war were terrible, but its traces are fast becoming obliterated. New enterprises have sprung up. Smiling fields of corn or cotton now stand where were fought some of the most bloody battles of the war.

The enormous national debt is being rapidly wiped out, and we are to-day the most prosperous nation on the face of the earth. Underlying we owe our nation's duty and everlasting gratitude to the brave soldiers who fought our battles. So long as our nation endures we can never cease to be grateful to those who saved our country. Their deeds are recorded in [illegible] pages of history. They deserve our praise, our warmest gratitude. Nor is the nation ungrateful of their deeds. Thousands of dollars are annually paid from the national treasury to those who suffered from the war.

The beautiful custom of observing Memorial day, has become almost universal throughout the land. We cherish the memory of our fallen heroes. We meet to strew fresh flowers over their graves, and to remind ourselves anew of their devotion and valor. Thousands of them lie in unknown graves in the South; but we weave a chaplet of flowers, and with reverent hands place it on a headstone inscribed to their memory. Though they are dead, their deeds live, and can never be forgotten. To-morrow, all over the land, the fairest and best, will meet to do honor to our soldier boys. The choicest flowers will be wrought into garlands for their graves. Their loyalty and devotion, their deeds of valor, will be rehearsed by thousands of able orators. Let us not desecrate the day and the honor. They gave their lives to save our nation from ruin. Their memory and their names are sacred; they are a national heritage.

God has given us a banner to be displayed because of the truth. Our flag, our glorious stars and stripes. Proudly our banner is unfurled to the breeze. Proudly we gaze upon it, the emblem of our liberty. But every thinking man or at least know that other dangers threaten it. It is given us to be displayed because of in the name of the truth, freedom, Sabbath breaking, drunkenness, and other sins, threaten to undermine the foundations of our national purity and our national safety. The demon monster Sin, stalks in hideous form through the length and breadth of our fair land. He threatens to stain the purity of our flag, to drag it in the mire of his own filth. Shall that flag, which was carried through four dreadful years of battle, be torn down by the base, ignoble hands of sectional sin? Shall vice conquer, where treason failed? Shall we not arise as a nation, as twenty-five years ago, our fathers and brothers arose to defend the honor and purity of our flag? Shall we not put away national sins, and protect national virtues? Shall not the red white and blue wave over a pure nation, a nation that loves the truth?

The red flag of socialism and communism has lately been raised against the honor of our flag, been raised to pull it down and drag it in the dust. Shall we not protect our banner? Let us assign our strength and with the full dignity of our American manhood and womanhood, and determine that from all dangers, be they national, foreign or the threats of foreign traitors, we will defend the banner God has given us, defend it with our prayers, our influence, our means, our lives if necessary. Flag of my country, float on! May thy fair folds wave within every mountain and valley, over river and lake, over forest and prairie. Emblem of truth and liberty, float on!

OBITUARY.

Albert Southworth was born in Edmeston, Otsego Co., N. Y., Jan. 15th, 1816. In the spring of 1831 his father, Joseph Southworth, came to Michigan and purchased 160 acres of land on Section 17 in Raisin. In the spring of 1832 he moved his family to their new home. There was a log house on the place and but a small improvement had been made. The subject of this notice came to Raisin in 1832 with his father's family and was reared on the homestead farm. He lived with his parents until he was twenty-one years of age and assisted in clearing up 160 acres of land. In 1843 he went to Galena, Illinois, and operated in the lead mines of that locality for three years. In 1848 he was married to Miss Antoinette Southworth of Pittsford, Hillsdale Co., and purchased a part of the homestead farm in Raisin, where he continued to reside until his death.

A few weeks ago, Mr. Southworth received a serious injury by a falling tree. The injury was regarded as a fatal one from the first, although he rallied in a day or two after, and hopes were entertained of his ultimate recovery. He afterwards grew worse however, and on Monday evening, May 24th, death relieved him of his sufferings. The funeral services were held on Wednesday the 26th ult., at the family residence in Raisin and were very largely attended. Rev. T. H. Potter of Tecumseh, officiating, assisted by Rev. J. M. Getchell. Excepting an interval of three years in Illinois, the deceased had lived upon the same farm in Raisin for 54 years, and during that time he had made many friends. He possessed a genial disposition and was a man of upright character, and the synonyme of honesty in all his business deal. One by one the old pioneers, who made the wilderness of Michigan bud and blossom like the rose, are passing away, and among them all none were more respected, and none have gone to a better land more sincerely mourned than Albert Southworth. The surviving widow and children have the sympathy of the entire community in their bereavement.

New Steel Bundle Carrier Attachment!

BEST HARVESTER AND BINDER IN THE WORLD.

We claim superiority for the New Light Steel Wheel Harvester and Binder in

Simplicity of Construction,	Freedom from choking,
Strength and Durability,	Certainty of binding,
Ease of adjustment and management,	Security of Knot tied,
Lightness of draft,	Delivery of sheaf,
Absence of side draft,	Economy in cost of twine per acre.

Our BUNDLE CARRIER saves the labor of at least one man. The bound bundles are left in heaps and in line convenient for shocking, and thus labor is saved in performing that work. Another saving, and one that should not be overlooked, is of grain that is shelled and lost with the usual mode of delivery, by dragging the bundles together by hand when shocking, also by the trampling of the horses at corners, its use enabling the driver to keep the corners clear of bundles. We claim that we have the only successful bundle carrier.

We handle our own Twine and make a Specialty of keeping the best quality on hand and sold as low as any other house of equal quality.

Fiber of Textile Fabrics.

In these days of adulteration and deception no ton and linen, cotton and silk, cotton and wool are spun together and woven so adroitly that it is almost impossible to detect the fraud.

Cotton is not at all like flax. That has a fiber, and hangs together like a thread when it is pulled. Cotton is called in German baumwolle, or tree wool, which it is, in fact. The fluffy, wool-like substance surrounds the seeds of the plants. It grows in balls, or bolls, something like milkweed. If you pull out one of the long, slender hairs of it and look at it under a microscope [illegible] it is flat like a ribbon, with a twist.

TEXTILE FABRICS.

There are fibers of four different textile fabrics in the picture. They are greatly magnified. Line 1, on top, shows the cotton fiber already mentioned, with its twisted ribbon appearance. Lines 2 and 3, next to low, are single hairs of wool. There are two kinds of wool. Line 4 is a fiber of flax, in joints. The last two crossed lines at the bottom show silk fibers, the finest of all.

In all these fibers there is at once a roughness and softness which makes it possible for them to be rolled together and make a thread. They will stick together after they are twisted. If an attempt was made to spin a thread of hairs it would fail, for they would not cling together after the pressure was taken off. That is the difference between hair and wool.

The silk worm product has the same rough texture, hence threads can be made of it. But all attempts to spin a thread from the various vegetable silks and silk weeds have failed, because their product is a smooth fiber. The single spears would not catch together in a thread.

Dr. Thomas Taylor, of the bureau of microscopy in the United States agricultural department, has been making some very interesting experiments that throw further light on this subject.

FIBERS TREATED WITH ACID.

He takes, for instance, a silk thread that is supposed to be part cotton. He lets a drop of nitric acid fall upon the thread, and then examines it under the microscope. The silk part will be all shriveled up and destroyed. The cotton part will remain untouched.

Again, if one takes cotton or flax fibers, drops strong sulphuric acid upon them, immediately followed by drops of the tincture of iodine, they will change to the appearance shown in the second illustration. They will turn a beautiful blue color, and look like beads string upon a string. The top row in the illustration represents a cotton fiber, those underneath flax.

New Industry.

The Three Oaks, Berrien county, Mich., takes pride in the fact that it is the only "horse-bone factory" on earth. What is horse-bone? Briefly, a substitute for whalebone. Mr. E. K. Warren of Three Oaks, several years ago decided that an excellent bone, equal to whalebone, could be manufactured from quills, and after months of study perfected his idea and patented his process and machinery. Quills of turkey and goose feathers only are used. The first thing is to strip the feathers of their adhesive [illegible] with knives attached split the quills in halves; the pith is removed by sharp-edged rollers rapidly revolved; then a series of interesting knives reduce the quills to fiber, and in this state the material is fed to a machine which forms it into a strong, fine cord which is at the same time wound with thread. In another machine four of these cords are wound with thread in such a manner as to form a flat tape; a sewing machine sets a line of stitching between each cord, giving increased strength and elasticity, and it is finished for market by being passed between heavy rollers, which smooth it and give it a uniform surface, and packed in boxes containing twelve yard lengths.

Featherbone is absolutely unbreakable. Bent double, when straightened it is as good as ever. It is made in all colors and in several grades as regards fineness, the "extra fine" being, we should judge, best adapted for use in dressmaking. Casings are not needed, as where whalebone is used, the featherbone is simply sewed to the garment. The manufacturers claim it will not warp, and that boiling water does not injure it. Genuine whalebone sells at retail at twenty cents for somewhat less than yard lengths; featherbone for fifteen cents per yard.

A large whip factory is the outgrowth of this unique discovery, and featherbone whips are said to be superior to the best whalebone for awakening and renewing the energies of a lazy horse.—Michigan Farmer.

Moth Proof Wool.

Professor Thomas Taylor, who has been experimenting in this direction, writes: Wool treated in mass in a bath of sulphuric acid, strength sixty degrees B. for several minutes, and afterward quickly washed in a weak solution of soda, and finally in pure water and dried, feels rough to the fingers, owing to the separation of the scales. I have preserved a small quantity of wool thus treated for the last twelve years, my object being to ascertain whether the chemical action to which it was exposed would impair its strength. As far as I can observe, it seems to have retained its original tenacity. Wool thus treated seems to possess the property of resisting the ravages of the larvæ of moths. This specimen, although openly exposed for the period named, suffered no injury from them. Under the microscope, the imbrications appear to have resumed their natural position, and appear finer. From these experiments it would seem not improbable that a new article of commerce might be produced from wool thus treated, considering that it seems to be moth proof.

An Armor Plate that Shot Cannot Pierce.

The latest victory in the long drawn match between the gun and the armor plate has been scored in favor of armor. At Spezzia [illegible] steel armor plate five feet nine inches in thickness, weighing 400 tons, was fixed against the face of the cliff, and battered with chilled shot from the 100-ton gun. A thunderbolt weighing almost exactly a ton was hurled against the face of the plate by the explosion of 750 pounds of powder, without producing more than a slight indentation and so no drifting cracks. The plate failed to make any serious impression on the plate, which has thus come off victor in the struggle. It would seem that no shot yet invented will go through six feet of compact steel.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Women Heat Better.

It has been found lately that most the sex in women can withstand higher temperatures than men. [illegible] The brain of a man vibrates at the rate of 4000 vibrations per second. Few persons have equal sensibility to acoustic schools in hollow tubes, the lowest audible being a lower note than the left. The lowest continuous sounds have about sixteen vibrations per second.

Facts of Interest.

When a rain cloud is more than 6,000 feet thick, hail is produced.

There is now telephonic communication between Philadelphia and Boston.

A Scotchman, Herbert Frang, has invented an electric machine which prints music as it is played.

A spring of magnetic water has been found in Kirksville, Ontario, Can. It was struck by some persons boring for coal.

Glass plates have been substituted for copper in the sheathing of an Italian ship, the advantage claimed being exemption from oxidation and incrustation. The glass was cast, like iron, in plates to fit the hull.

Egyptian engineers have recently discovered the bed of the ancient Lake Moeris. They propose to utilize it as a reservoir for the overflow of the Nile. A canal will be cut from the river to the lake bed. This is the identical thing that Joseph in the Bible is believed to have done, 4,000 years ago.

A lake eight miles square is to be constructed under the Bhore Ghauts, or mountains, which is to supply water to Bombay, British India. An aqueduct will be built to the city. The work will require six years. So ancient Rome was supplied from the Sabine mountains, so Glasgow is supplied from the Highlands to-day.

A case of Spencer guns was ordered by Governor Foraker, of Ohio, during the recent apprehension of danger from riot. The Spencer rifle is away behind the times, these days, although the United States soldiers are provided with it. The Martini-Henry rifle, used by European armies, is the only one up to the requirements of modern times.

Dr. Sandras, a Frenchman, claims to have discovered that by the use of different inhalations, bringing the larynx in contact with air saturated with different vapors, the human voice can be greatly modified. Hoarseness brought on by cold may be cured in a few minutes, and the strength, pitch and character of the voice entirely changed by these inhalations, he declares.

THE FASHIONS

Some Small Fancies.

BOWS FOR THE HAIR.

On the left is a rosette made of ribbons cut in fish-tail points and secured to hairpins for convenience in arranging the hair. The same style of rosette, made a trifle flatter, can be used at the belt, and if smaller will be very effective worn at the shoulder when the collar is fastened on one side.

On the right is one of the multicolored ribbon bows now fashionable, for brightening the corsage and sparing in the hair. It is made of feather-edged gros grain ribbon, the colors combining maroon, pink, chartreuse, lavender, gold and green. The ribbon is arranged in pointed loops and ends, which are strapped together with a twisted cross piece in two colors.

SLEEVES.

Here are shown two tasteful ways of finishing off dress sleeves at the wrist. They relieve the severe plainness which has been in fashion so long.

With Tailor Suits.

With the severer tailor suits worn with a masculine collar and cravat young ladies wear a high straw hat the color of the dress, made of rough straw, or else in an open braid that has no lining. The rim turns up closely behind, and rolls also on the left side, while the right side is straight, or in extreme cases is flattened low against the head. The brim is bound with velvet, and a narrow velvet band encircles the crown. A ladder of cross bows of ribbon may extend up the back of the crown, or else it may have long, erect loops with a bunch of long-stemmed blossoms, usually of very small flowers.

For older ladies to wear with tailor suits the newest bonnets are of rough, dark straw, made small, yet very high in the crown, so that the extremely high bows of last season may be dispensed with, and instead a rosette of velvet ribbons is used. This large rosette may be all of one color, but is more often of two or three colors, made with all the loops of each so or massed together and forming a third of the rosette. Thus, on a black rough straw bonnet there are cream, pale yellow, and black loops in the rosette; for a blue dress, dark blue, dark red and cream white, or else pale blue loops form the rosette; with brown dresses are white, yellow, and brown loops. This trimming is also seen on the black tulle bonnets worn with dressy black suits, and is especially pretty when the fashionable pistache green is used with pale lemon yellow and cream white. On a chocolate brown full bonnet the rosette may be of pink, cream and chocolate color. The velvet ribbon in these rosettes is only half an inch wide.

This forms the entire trimming for the bonnet. The velvet throat bow is of the darkest color in the rosette, and is made of two long loops, or else merely pointed ends that are scarcely an inch wide, yet are long enough to reach back to the ears. Small feather pins are stuck in the loops, and are thought to give more style to the toilet than if used as brooch pins. Indeed, they are almost the only pins now worn out-of-doors.

Fabrics for the Seaside.

It is astonishing seeing what an annual exodus going to the seaside does, yet [illegible] how the sea air will [illegible] kinds of ribbon, pretty enough when new and [illegible] [illegible] wear in Bitter Row and not [illegible] well by the "loose sea waves." Gaudy [illegible] and [illegible] dark inks withstand the assaults of wind and wave best, and [illegible] cretonne, nun's cloth, canvas or vienna in wool; but not cheap, badly dyed stuffs nor muslin, which loses its stiffness in an hour or so. And yet, at the fashionable watering places, you see every day people in flimsy washing gowns and rich brocades utterly unsuitable to the occasion, and failing in the simplicity and cleanliness which should distinguish such dresses. Very big hats are worn, and far too many flowers, by the seaside.

How ignorant, too, women seem to be about dyeing. The aniline dyes, soluble by perspiration, not only dye arms and legs of undesired tints, but bring out eruptions. Violet, red, bright blues and yellows should be selected with care. To be healthy, clothing should only be treated with vegetable dyes. Any dye, as a broad rule, is bad that imparts and stains color to the skin.

Little Girls' Summer Gowns.

Girls from 2 to 5 years wear yoke slips, with sash of the material sewed in the side seams and tied behind. These are of the new open worked lawns in stripes, the cool ginghams and white muslins, and in all cases the yoke and sleeves can be white. Guimpes of white muslin, with low-necked gingham, Chambery, cashmere or lawn dresses, are worn by girls from 4 years upward. Belted dresses, with a yoke and full round skirt tucked and hemmed, are for girls from 4 to 12, or even for girls in their teens. Two-piece dresses, with a kilt skirt and cutaway jacket, are liked for pique or the dimity fabrics. Low-necked square yokes of velvet are used with India silk, challi and foulard dresses, but all low-necked dresses have a white muslin guimpe or front piece. Openings with embroidery let in and the waist laced across, are used on Chambery, pique, cashmere, and white muslin dresses.

Clasps for Wraps and Dresses.

These are still in high favor. They are used on cloaks and scarfs. They fasten skirt drapery, and they are used instead of a breast pin. It is necessary to sew them firmly in place where they are wanted to remain. Then they stay and can be hooked and unhooked, as required. They are made of wood, metal, colored glass and other material.

At the top of the illustrations is a set dress clasp, which has the fastening concealed under the disk at the center. Below is a larger clasp of antique lava ware in bronze, ornamented with chain pendants.

Little Girls' Hats.

Misses and children's hats are very prettily trimmed. Large flat straws are lined with fine gauze ruchings and have large faille bows. Quite as much care is bestowed on the "furniture" of English straws, straws in open work and scarlet straws. They also have the under part of the brim lined with ruchings of ribbons, and often the outside of the hats are covered with shirred shaped lace fastened down here and there under flowers or ribbon rosettes. If the rim of the round hat is raised on one side, a band of ribbon is taken across it and fastened on the drawn under a bow or a bunch of flowers. Sometimes there are three or four small bands of faille arranged in this way. They are bordered on their side with tiny ruchings or gauze or tulle. Many children's hats are trimmed with flowers.—New York Times.

Trimmings.

Etamine dresses are trimmed with cream lace, embroidered galloon in one color, or with each more and Algerian designs, and bands of "brettelle" embroidery. These bands will also serve to trim canvas goods, navy blue serges for children's dresses and jerseys and jackets. White bolton jackets are the style for wear under jerseys. They are embroidered with colored silk or wool, or dotted with tiny gilt stars. Jerseys and jackets are trimmed in the same way with sequins of mother of pearl. Scotch plaid surah or foulard, combined with plain cords, make very pretty suits. There are striped foulards and fancy checked materials used for the same purpose. There may be revers and velvet orreteles or plaited gumps on the waists. Foulard and surah are to be much worn.

FASHIONLETS.

Under skirts remain plain.

Red is at present much used in Paris, particularly for trimmings and linings under transparent tissues.

Poke bonnets or round hats and white parasols are worn as part of bridemaids' toilets for summer weddings.

Short petticoats are being made of the daintiest and most delicate materials and in the most exquisite and artistic designs.

Despite their inexpensiveness, rough straw hats remain fashionable year after year, and each season seems to add something to their popularity.

Stamped "satinettes" and Algerian cretonnes make becoming and serviceable dresses, and they are quite indispensable for country wear.

A caprice of the moment in millinery is that of veiling with tulle various parts of the bonnet or round hat. For instance, the coronet front, instead of being faced with velvet, now has tulle puffed on it, dotted with beads.

CATARRH—A NEW TREATMENT.

From the Montreal Star.

Perhaps the most obstinate disease that has been challenged to the medical profession has been attacked by the Dixon treatment for Catarrh, out of 500 patients in Montreal during the past six months, fifty already have reported themselves cured of this troublesome and disgusting disease. This is no doubt a startling statement, but it is nevertheless true that not five per cent of patients present themselves to the regular practitioner are cured, while the patent medicines and other so-called cures never record a cure at all. Speaking with the calling now generally believed to be the most skillful men that the disease must be due to the presence of living parasites in the tissues. Mr. Dixon has once adapted his cure to their extermination. This accomplished, he asks the patient to be cheerfully cured, and the remaining 99 are unanswered, as cures effected by him bear witness against them still. Some of the cures of Catarrh by Mr. Dixon in this city, and by other treatments has given extraordinary satisfaction. The appearance of a gentleman who has been a sufferer for the most part of his life, the majority of years being spent in the Dominion, suffering severely at times with Catarrh, A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King street west, Toronto, Canada, and can now shake off their troubles on the march.

A GREAT DANCER

The late Bayard Taylor, who probably traveled more over the surface of the globe than any living man, claimed that he could not only tell the nationality of any persons whom he met, by the way in the locality of the particular country from which they came. This reminds us of an incident which occurred to the writer in conversation with Mr. Taylor at one time. He said:

"I make it a rule everywhere and people, and do not hesitate to say that for energy, endurance and staying qualities the boatmen of Maine exceed any navigators of the globe. Their business, as you know, is lumbering. Their vessels, as lumber carriers, are a broad-beamed craft, with sails and oars, and they not only navigate the coastwise, but even ascend much of its rivers, sell in foreign ports, and the people of America to-day are unequalled by any people in the world in the quality so named. It is, perhaps, unfortunate that these qualities have been secured too often at the expense of health, and we find extraction of the physical powers, nervousness and debility more common among the men and women of America than in any other country on the face of the globe."

Mr. Taylor spoke from rich experience, and he knew, the Guide.

For nervous, mental and physical exhaustion which is undergone, must be replaced by blood making, nerve making and brain making elements, or the state of depression will continue. Albumen in the system is precisely the element which is required, and beef, malt and hops will produce albumen quicker and in greater quantity than any other known combination. These elements have been happily combined in the great preparation Hoptonic, and the revival of physical energies in thousands of people has fully proven its power and value.

These are not remarks given at random, but strong and yet just truths demanded by facts and confirmed by scientists. There are hundreds of men and women in their graves who might be alive and happy had they known the truths and acted upon them in time, and it is painful to think of the intense suffering, extensive sickness and vast number of deaths, all of which might have been avoided if people had only realized and known.

Sick Headache:—Thousands who have suffered intensely with sick headache say that Hood's Sarsaparilla has completely cured. One gentleman thus relieved, writes: "Hood's Sarsaparilla is worth its weight in gold." Reader if you are a sufferer with sick headache give Hood's Sarsaparilla a trial. It will do you positive good. Made by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all druggists. 100 doses One Dollar.

—H. H. Pierce, living near Climax, was attacked by a vicious hog and had a hand badly bitten and his clothes torn. He would have been killed had not his wife and son come to his rescue.

The harmful and fatal results attending the use of cough mixtures containing morphia, opium and other poisons, are daily becoming more frequent. It is for this reason that Red Star Cough Cure has received the unqualified endorsement of physicians, and Boards of Health everywhere, as a purely vegetable compound entirely free from all narcotics. Price Twenty-five cents.

—Elmer Croup, of Ortonville, helped a friend to burn some brash and laid his vest so close to a burning brush pile that it was burned, together with a silver watch and $25 in greenbacks.

—The Executive Committee of the Grand Council of Good Templars of Michigan held a meeting at Lansing and decided to make an important revision of the constitution and prepare a new digest of its laws.

Without beautiful hair no woman is beautiful. Is yours falling off or faded? The loss is vital. Parker's Hair Balsam will preserve your hair and give back its gloss and youthful color. Clean, elegant, perfect. Prevents dandruff.

Rev. H. H. Fairall, D. D., editor of the Iowa Methodist, says editorially, in the November 1888 number of his paper: "We have tested the merits of Ely's Cream Balm, and believe that, by a through course of treatment, it will cure almost every case of catarrh. Ministers, as a class, are afflicted with head and throat troubles, and catarrh seems more prevalent than ever. We cannot recommend Ely's Cream Balm too highly."

For neuralgia, rheumatism, lumbago, gout, swellings, burns, wounds, etc., the best remedy is Salvation Oil. Price 25 cents a bottle.

BOYS & GIRLS

The Girl Soldiers.

It was during the war of 1812. That was, you will learn in your history, broke out because American citizens were being seized by British sea captains and made to serve as seamen on their ships.

One day, early in August, 1814, two young girls, Abigail and Rebecca Bates, sat knitting. They were about 10 and 12 years old, the daughters of the light house keeper at Scituate, Mass., and they sat in the porch of a little house. Above them in the tower was their father, cleaning and trimming the lamps.

The little girls had so many rounds to knit on the woolen stockings before they quit. They were talking of the war. Indeed there was so much excitement then that the very dogs almost barked about it. British ships used to put in anywhere and took men out of their gardens and fishing vessels, tied them and rowed off with them, and they and their neighbors could not help it.

COME UP HERE, QUICK!

Along the coast men were stationed to look out for the British ships and give the alarm to the villagers. Scituate had a coast guard, but he was away that afternoon—had gone inland to see his mother, who was very ill. He had left his fife and drum in the light house. It was with these that he was to give the alarm to the neighborhood in case a British ship should appear in the harbor. Hearing these the men thereabouts would seize their guns, pistols, knives and clubs, and rush to the rescue if an attempt was made to carry off one of their comrades.

"I wish the coast guard had not gone away," said Abby. "I'm afraid."

"I'm not," said Rebecca.

At that moment their father called them: "Abigail! Rebecca! Come here quick!"

They ran like the wind up to the tower.

"Look! look, girls! Isn't that a British frigate out in the offing? See the flag flying from her masthead! My hand trembles so I can't hold the glass."

In a moment Rebecca seized the glass and swept the quiet harbor and the open ocean. "Yes! yes! I see it; it is, father; and see! they are putting a small boat off to shore; it is loaded with men, and I see the muskets glitter and shine."

"Oh!" groaned the keeper, "what shall we do, and the coast guard gone?"

"Father," broke in little Abigail, all her fear gone, "Father, Becky and I will take the drum and fife, and get behind that point of rocks and play, may be they will think we have some troops here——"

"But, child, how can you get down there without their seeing the drum? They have a glass, too!"

"I know," broke in Becky, "we'll take the tablecloth and tie it up in that, and they will think it's nothing but a bundle. They won't mind two such little girls as we are."

"God bless you, children, it's a faint hope, but the only one, and you may try it. Don't begin to play till I hang out this white cloth from the window, then you will know they are near the shore."

Away then ran, the brave girls, their hearts beating like the drum in their excitement. Their father's heart thumped just the same, for he did not know what might happen to his darlings if the angry British sailors caught them. "But it was the last desperate resort, and they must try it.

THE ARMY OF TWO

The drum is untied, the fife is raised to Abby's lips, and soon the girls hear the rattle of the oars over the quiet water. Then from the tower that is the white signal, and on the still air rings the sharp rat-tat of the drum and the shrill notes of the fife. It wakes the echoes among the rocks and startles the fishermen from their work on the neighboring reef, while from the dwellings of the town, in great alarm, the men in shirt sleeves and with muskets in their hands come running down to the shore.

And still the martial music rings out clear and shrill, with not a quiver nor a pause, and the boats crew hear it, too; their oars drop poised in air, a look of rage passes over the face of the seamen as they see the railway officers, and with muttered curses it must be Yankee troops for talking them in their purpose, they turn and row swiftly back to the ship.

The men from the villages have reached the shore and looking eagerly around for the coast guard, are amazed to see in place of the fife, rolling to the two daughters of Jared Bates, with white faces, but determined air, still playing the drum sticks and blowing the fife.

"Why, girls, it isn't you that's saved us, is it?" from grief and maybe death" broke out Capt. Folger, the leader of the company, "and he thanked you, your bravery and forethought."

All the rest of their lives, till they grew to be old women, the sisters were honored for what they did that day. The story will be told as long as the United States is a people. When Abby died in March last years, and the Grand Army of the Republic carried her to her grave, wearing their uniforms.

Mrs. Hayland or Aunt Laura as she is familiarly known, came from Lawrence, Kansas, for the express purpose of being present at the reunion. A [illegible] Mr. Joseph Patchin of Grass Lake, Mich., who was the first Principal of the Institute, commencing in a chapel in 1835, and continuing for two years, and Mrs. James Dowry of Kalamazoo, Ind., were the only persons present from a long distance. About one o'clock we were invited to a picnic dinner prepared by Mr. Van Horn in his grove. I will not attempt to describe the dinner, but will simply say it was as good as any that has been described before, and after all had satisfied their hunger, there was much left to feed as many more. After dinner we repaired to the spacious parlors where seats were provided for all, and listened to short literary exercises which were opened by devotional exercises by Mr. Patchin, after which there were short speeches by Aunt Laura, Mr. Patchin and several of the old students, followed by a very interesting history of the Institute by Mrs. Harmon Clubburn of the city.

At the conclusion of the exercises the following officers were elected for the coming year: Mrs. A. H. Briggs, Pres.; Mrs. Alfred Edwards, Vice Pres.; Mr. A. H. Briggs, Sec., and Mrs. H. Clubburn, Treas. H.

Geo. W. Bain gave his fourth lecture in this place last Tuesday evening, entitled "Among the Masses." Mr. Bain is without doubt as fine a speaker as ever struck this place. His lectures are interspersed with comic anecdotes making them entertaining to everyone. The Young People of the Baptist church under whose auspices he came, deserved all.

A Temperance School has been forming in this village similar to one in Adrian, which is in successful operation. The school will be to present in action the following: singing, recitations, [illegible] ways, temperance speeches and those impressions which will prove of service. The school will meet next week Saturday at 2 P. M. in the Opera House. It is in charge of Mrs. Bryant, who has had experience in teaching. Mrs. B. will be glad of the presence and assistance of other ladies and of the mothers of those attending the school in her ward.

Last Tuesday noon, Nora, daughter of Jas. B. Clemens of Raisin, met with a serious runaway. She was going at [illegible] Willis, in Raisin, and when opposite the Raisin cemetery the horse stumbled, breaking the check and throwing the bridle over its head. After running about 40 rods the rig struck a stone throwing the occupants out on the wheel, when she was dashed to the ground. Dr. Boyer was telegraphed for, who arrived in 10 minutes. She remained unconscious for about an hour when she rallied and on telling who she was, her parents were sent for and conveyed her home. Luckily she was not seriously injured.

Food for the brain and nerves that will invigorate the body without intoxicating, is what we need in these days of rush and worry. Parker's Tonic restores the vital energies, quiets the nerves, and brings good health quicker than any thing you can use.

MACON MUSIC

There will be a concert at the Ma[illegible] No. 1, Tuesday evening, June 15, for the benefit of the school organ fund. Let everyone turn out and give them a full house. Admission 10 cents. No tableaux.

There will be a social at Macon Grange hall Friday evening, June 18. A short literary program, address by the Hon. George Hawes, recitations, singing, music, &c. After which refreshments will be served. The ladies are expected to furnish the cake. All are invited to come and have a good time. [illegible] 25 cents.

There will be a Children's Day concert at the Seventh Day Adventist church next Sabbath morning, June 13th, at 10:30. The concert will be a Scripture service, about Rain, Flowers, Birds and Fruit, interspersed with [illegible] recitations, singing, &c. Come in time.

A very pleasant occasion was the marriage of Joel C. Booth, a graduate of the Law School of Ann Arbor, class of '79, now of Dakota, to Zoe Pennington of Macon, on the 2nd inst. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Kerridge, of Grass Lake, and the Macon Band furnished music for the occasion. Guests were present from Adrian and Ann Arbor, besides relatives and friends nearer home. After a short visit in Michigan the bridal party start for Dakota, their future home, stopping by the way in Missouri to visit relatives of the groom, and at Topeka Kan. to visit a brother of the bride. Besides some nice mementos they take with them the best wishes of many friends.

OUR MOTHER.

Lines to the Memory of Mrs. David Coryell.

A gloom has now settled over us
And our hearts are sad every day,
For a mother has left our dwelling
And passed from earthly care away.

Our lives are now made lonely,
By the loss of the we love,
But we mourn not as those of old,
We know our mother is resting above.

Dear Mother, oh, how we miss her,
She's missed as long as we live;
Her company, counsel and kindness,
She was always ready to give.

How tender her care in our childhood!
How we loved her in youth,
A wife, patient and self sacrificing,
An example of kindness and truth.

We will mention these words of counsel,
And hold them dear in our hearts,
Her heart's loving and fervent.

Yes mother, our mother in heaven,
Is joining in our glad praise,
She has left us, a loving angel to guide us
And we hope to meet her at last.

Farewell, ye sisters and brothers weeping,
Farewell, ye friends of the dear departed,
And a loving father so lonely,
For our dearest mother is gone.

[illegible]

Why do we think it hard to part with our mothers,
When our darling mother comes

How we pray and plead with God to take us,
To heaven for words to tell,
And we cling to our friends in sorrow,
When death darkens our path.

And though lonely, some life's journey,
And have many troubles to go through,
With the hope of a reunion where
We shall be in heaven or another world.

Let us then prepare to meet her,
Where joys will be in high,
Where there will be no more parting,
With our loved ones by and by.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

RIDGEWAY CO., ITHACA

After a few days with relatives and friends at the home of my childhood and youth, I bid them all adieu once more and hasten to the train, and am once more speeding away from loved ones and friends. This time I am headed for Northern Michigan instead of Sunny Kansas.

I left Tecumseh at 12 30 P.M., arriving in Jackson at 2 P.M., and after transfering baggage, etc., took a strool around the city, calling at the shop of Mr. VanHorn, who is looking hearty and prospering slowly. As the P. P. A. annual meeting of the State was held there the city was quite lively. They gave a street parade at three o'clock headed by Geo. T. Smith's Band. I left on the 4.25 train for Leslie, where I found Mr. Winchel and family well. He is selling dressed meat to the Jackson markets. I left Saturday morning for Ithaca, arriving at noon and found cousin Court and family well and enjoying life in the north woods among the brush and grubs, being cheered on in their daily toils by the sweet strains of the hungry mosquito, which, by the way, are the largest I ever saw and the most willing creatures to make friends I ever met. Farmers are finishing their planting. Wheat is heading out and stands on an average better than it does in the southern part of the State. Oats look fine, meadows are hurt by the frost early in the spring; pasture is abundant and cattle look splendid.

Ithaca is growing slowly. The Baptist people are building a fine veneer church in the place of the one that burned some time since. The mills are running with as few hands as they can, and report business dull and uncertain. All business is at a stand still and the prospect looks rather discouraging, as long as the labor question is unsettled. At St. Louis business is dull and uncertain. Wool is coming in to market lively and sells from 15 to 25cts.

Decoration day was observed and speeches were made and a very large procession marched to the cemetery, headed by the Ithaca Cornet Band. A heavy hail storm passed through this section Saturday afternoon, but did not do much damage, and Monday night there was a sight frost. As it is nearly time for the mail I will close for the present. J. D. A.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Children's day was observed at the M. E. church, Sunday, by appropriate services morning and evening. The church was tastefully decorated with cut flowers, house plants and pictures, while the birds, which were brought in to enliven every thing and everybody, did their full part.

The church social will give an ice cream and strawberry supper in the basement of the church on Friday evening of this week. The ladies know what that means and will provide cake.

The west road district is doing a fine thing in drawing away the surplus gravel about the depot and putting it on the sand road west of the village.

Those who suffered by the recent fire have had their losses adjusted. The Northwestern of Milwaukee, did the fairest thing in adjusting S. Heim's loss, by paying the full policy without any effort to evade any part of it. As much cannot be said of the Lanshire company, which settled with Corvell & Lawton.

MACON MUSIC.

The concert at the school house, Tuesday evening, was not a success financially, there being but a small audience present, that is inside the house. For it being a very warm evening made it necessary to keep the windows open, and a great many of the male inhabitants, who, we suppose, were too much mints cash to afford ten cents for the benefit and enjoyment of our school children, arranged themselves on either side of the house, to take in the entertainment free of charge. But let us say for the credit of the concert, that the outside audience continued to hold down the fence and wood pile until the coming storm necessitated their departure.

BROOKLYN BALLAST

New houses, later babies, and a season of law and order, are among the chief spring additions, but the best of the lot is the most improving and disciplinary ever was. Those who own the progressive houses are happy while thinking of the glow on imaginary hearts, the little ones cultivate all virtues akin to forbearance. Endurance and dishabille ance, but the latter bends lower heads already bowed by numberless burthens, and illustrates the difference between music and law, keyed on B flat. The gospel pill, hardest for Women to swallow, is not compounded of the Jonah and whale story, but of abstract quotation twisted with narrow liberality. The why we have to take the dose, and thus guarantee supremacy, decreed from the beginning would be blasphemy to inquire about, but if it is not a masonic secret we wish some one would tell why law is so easily converted into oppression of people destitute of money. Why it takes away all privilege from those who have scarcely any, and if society is made better by any turmoil over three cent principles. The bible says some things be lawful which are not expedient, and the translator might have added or humane, without spoiling theology and common sense. Ten chances to one the omission will make us lose the talked of creamery, for its discouraging to cows and owners also; to be tied up, shut up and whooped up according to law, and one wonders why a rule that deprives families of subsistance, should be emphasized more than liberty to starve, with all the help they can procure, or if law is not an expression of egotism and overdone littleness.

Mrs. Barstow was brought from Connecticut last week to be laid beside those gone before in the home cemetery. She was a long time resident and member of the Baptist church. Few remain who first knelt by ashen altar, and though the number of relatives present was small, there were many mourners. The profusion of flower offerings and sunshine were in harmony with her life, and she passed through the gate, wearing a crown of ripened years.

ONSTEDODDS.

Probably the greatest talker in Onstead is a parrot owned by R. L. Glenn.

Mobly & Butterfield have abandoned the stave business for the present at least.

A family have moved into Will Parsons' house. They come direct from Ireland.

The Missionary Concert at the church Sunday evening passed off pleasantly and the house was well filled.

Our merchants complain of dull times, but R. L. Glenn took in 350 lbs. of butter Friday afternoon and evening.

Work on the hotel has been stopped for a few days waiting for the brick to be burned.

A good deal of talk is being indulged in about the prospects of a saloon and its effects on society if we should have one.

Several of our citizens went fishing the other day. In some way the boat which Henry Pulver was in was capsized. Mr. Pulver says the water was not too warm for bathing.

The township board met Saturday afternoon last, and fixed the bonds for liquor sellers. They were placed at the highest limit $6,000. Only one member of the board being in favor of making the bonds $3,000.

DEVIL'S LAKE DOINGS.

It is beginning to be busy at Devils Lake Station and the hotel there. Mr. Verrier launched the new steamboat Sunday and expects to get in the machinery this week. It will carry 250 or 300 passengers and is to have as good an engine and boiler as is made, such as is required by the U. S. Marine laws.

Rev. C. F. Elliott, of the Jackson Unitarian church, preached in Allen's Hall, Sunday evening. Subject, Theories in regard to the origin of Man and the Universe as a part of all Religions.

There will be excursion trains run to the lake each Sunday during the summer. They give very cheap rates and it affords a good opportunity for Toledo people, and those of the towns along the road to spend a pleasant day on the lake and in the groves.

Allen celebrates the Glorious Fourth Saturday the 3d, by a grand ball afternoon and evening with fire works at night from the deck of the new steamer, which will carry passengers at reduced rates that day. There will be plenty of room to dance or lay in the shade, and cheap rates for all.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS

[illegible] June 6

[illegible] 11:1-30. Golden Text, John [illegible] 36. Date, the next day after the last session. Place, the Temple at Jerusalem.

IT was the morning of the eighth day. The Feast of Tabernacles was over. It lasted only seven days, but the eighth day was a sort of holy convocation with special sacrifices of its own. Jesus had spent the night with a friend on the Mount of Olives, and now, in the early morning, He reappears in the temple to continue His teachings. Part of the time is spent in the court of the women, but it is evident the latter part of the lesson was delivered in the court of the Gentiles, as that was the only place in the temple in which the people would cast stones at Him. He was nearing the end of His ministry, and in the centre of religious thought and activity, Jerusalem. He now continues His sublime declarations of Messiahship and the enunciation of those splendid truths which are the heritage of our race. From Jerusalem the crowds would soon disperse to all parts of the country, and in their hearts Jesus sows that blessed seed which to-day yields a magnificent harvest in the earnest lives of His devoted followers. Upon this occasion He was the central figure in the temple as He had been on the previous days of the feast. An eager crowd is gathered round Him, and to them He delivers His message of freedom. "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." These words raised an angry storm of indignant protest from His hearers. If the Jew prided himself on one thing it was his freedom. He conveniently forgot the captivities, overlooked national defeats, ignored the present actual serfdom to Rome, and always imagined himself blessed with freedom. A part of his morning prayer was: "Blessed be the Lord our God, King of the Universe, who has made me a free man." The Jew looked back to Abraham, from whom he claimed decent, and contended that as Abraham's son he was free. With such feelings it was difficult for them to understand Christ's words for He taught them of spiritual freedom. They looked for a Messiah who would restore the national glory, and yet they could not comprehend that "truth" without which there can be no permanent glory. Their pride of decent was a false light to them; their descent availed them nothing; they were slaves to sin and form and ritual. They were not fit for national independence and its attendant honors; they were not fit for that spiritual kingdom which Christ came to establish, so he taught them the divine principle of liberty. "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." For it is only in the truth of Jesus that we can get perfect freedom from the slavery of sin and thus be fitted for the true citizenship of Christ's Kingdom. It will be well for the world when it learns this lesson, as the principle here taught by Christ furnishes the solution to those great social and economic questions which now agitate society. Our Savior closed His discourse by re-asserting His divinity, as He declared that He existed before Abraham.

LESSON THOUGHTS.

1. True freedom can only be found in Christ.
2. Lineage is nothing; ceremony is nothing, the truth is everything.
3. Do not be deceived with false theories; get the truth as it is in Jesus.
4. In the teachings of Christ we have true light, and hence true liberty. Freedom of thought—not free thought; freedom of life, not free living.

Last Friday business called us to Springville, and although our stay was short, we had time enough to call on Postmaster Ladd in his fine new office. The building is just about the size of the Ridgeway office and is a very neat and commodious building for the purpose. The township library is also kept there, and Town Clerk Ayres has his office there. We found Wm. H. Smith and Charley making a new boat for use on Sand Lake. Mr. Smith is now doing quite a business in the sale of agricultural impliments. We also called on M. F. Turrell. He is building up a large trade in his celebrated Kokololo Oil. We were compelled to postpone any further calls until some future time.

I had given myself up a lost because of inherited scrofula. Tried everything for purifying the blood without benefit until I used Parker's Tonic, and can truthfully say that it has cured me. I still use it for its splendid effect on my general health. H. K. Lynd, Chicago.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(Regular Herald correspondence.)

WASHINGTON, June 14, 1886.

When the President and his wife returned to the White House on Tuesday evening, the usual routine was at once resumed. The President's desk is heaped high with letters of every description. Several bushels of congratulations yet remain to be read. Mrs. Cleveland will have a week's occupation looking over the presents, which embracing everything imaginable, from costly jewelry and silver ware to baskets of fruit, and bunches of flowers. These latter, it is feared, will not be so fully appreciated by the recipient as they would have been a week ago.

It is rumored that Miss Rose Cleveland will pass the summer in a continential trip through Europe. She will also remain at the White House to assist the new mistress in her social duties, and will at once resume her literary work at Holland Patent. She will spend some time in a visit to Folsomdale. Arrangements are also being made for her marriage with Congressman Ben LeFevre, of Ohio, and she will spend the summer on the shores of Lake Superior. Her further movements will be noted with interest.

Though late in the season, the Presidential nuptials have awakened an interest and life in social circles here. The bride is winning golden opinions from all, and seems to have no nervous apprehension over the ordeal of her life at the Executive Mansion.

The President has received a number of callers since his return, but Mrs. Cleveland has not been at home to visitors. On next Tuesday evening however, a state reception will be given at the White House, to which the cabinet, diplomatic corps, the chief justice and associate justices of the Supreme Court, Congress, the officers of the army and navy, the heads of certain bureaus and the ladies of their familes will be invited. Mr. Cleveland also intends to give the public an opportunity to meet and greet his wife, for a formal reception, to which the public is invited without cards, is announced for the following Friday night.

The report that Ex Senator Davis is an aspirant for the portfolio which Mr. Manning has resigned, was denied by Senator Kenna, of West Virginia, the other day. Said he: "Mr. Davis is a good man for the position, but I do not think he would accept it even if it were offered him, which is not likely to happen. The President is sincere in thinking that after a few months' recreation and rest Mr. Manning will be sufficiently restored to health to resume his duties, and until it is fully demonstrated that he is not, Mr. Cleveland will not trouble himself to search for a successor. The report originated, of course, in the fact of the recent social relations existing between the President and Senator Davis at Deer Park. But when the latter urged Mr. Cleveland to spend his honeymoon there, he promised him that he should not be troubled by political aspirants, and he has kept his word."

Oleomargarine has held the floor in the Senate during the week. The contest has been between the Committee on Agriculture and the Committee on Finance as to the question of jurisdiction. Messrs. VanWyck, Miller of New York, and Blair earnestly contended that the bill should go to the Committee on Agriculture. Messrs. Aldrich, McPherson, Beck, Vest, and Butler insisted that it should go to the Committee on Finance as a revenue bill. Senator Beck says the bill will raise $10,000,000 of revenue. The bill was finally referred to the Agricultural Committee by a majority of one.

The employes of the Bureau of engraving and printing are worried over the report that Chief Graves is preparing a list of some two hundred and fifty names of persons to be discharged on the 1st of July. The cause assigned for this wholesale dismissal is the fact that there is no work. Since last March the employes of the numbering division, counting and separating rooms, and other divisions of the bureau have been working on half time, because of the failure on the part of Congress to pass the bill authorizing the printing of one and two dollar silver certificates. Mr. Graves was sorry for the employes, and inaugurated the furlough instead of a discharge in the hope that Congress would do something. But nothing has been done, and the end of the fiscal year will find the bureau without work and without funds, unless the President urges the passage of the certificate bill.

NYE FAVORS SLEEP.

Awakened.

Sleep, under favorable circumstances, is a great boon. Sleep, if natural and undisturbed, is surely as useful as any [illegible]

[illegible] unknown at home or abroad under the influence of anything [illegible] of an anything wooden (after the fashion) is used as a blanket in the sleeping car is a harmless diversion and a cheerful relaxation.

It is a pet theory of mine that to be [illegible] early waked in the morning [illegible] joyous song, instead of being [illegible] roused by some of those [illegible] yellow chap who hollers [illegible] calamity.

No one should be suddenly waked from a sound sleep. A sudden awakening perverts the magnetic currents and makes the half-[illegible] to borrow an expression from Dante. The awakening should be natural, gradual and deliberate.

A sad thing occurred last summer on an Omaha train. It was a very warm day and in the smoking car a fat man, with a magenta fringe of whiskers over his Adam's apple, and a light ecru lambrequin of real camel's hair around the suburbs of his head, might have been discovered.

He could have opened his mouth wider, perhaps, but not without injuring the mainspring of his neck and turning his epiglottis out of order.

He was asleep.

He was not only slumbering, but he was putting the earnestness and passionate devotion of his whole being into it. His shiny, oil cloth grip, with the rough tip of a discarded collar just peeping out at the side, was up in the iron wall pocket of the car. He also had, in the seat with him a market basket, full of misfit lunch, and a two bushel bag containing extra apparel. On the floor he had a crock of butter, with a copy of The Punkville Palladium and Stock Grower's Guardian over the top.

He slumbered on in a rambling sort of way, snoring all the time in monosyllables, except when he erroneously swallowed his tonsils, and then he would struggle a while and get black in the face, while the passengers vainly hoped that he had strangled.

While he was thus slumbering, with all the eloquence and enthusiasm of a man in the full meridian of life, the train stopped with a lurch, and the brakeman touched his shoulder.

"Here's your town," he said. "We only stop a minute. You'll have to hustle."

The man, who had been far away, wrestling with Morpheus had removed his hat, coat and boots, and when he awoke his feet absolutely refused to go back into the same quarters.

At first he looked around reproachfully at the people in the car. Then he reached up and got his oil cloth grip from the bracket. The bag was tied together with a string, and as he took it down the string untied.

The strain of the grip noticed.

Then we all discovered that this man had been on the road for a long time, with no object, apparently, except to evade laundress. All kinds of articles fell out in the aisle. I remember seeing a chest protector and a linen coat, a slab of seal brown gingerbread and a pair of stogy boots, a hairbrush and a bologna sausage, a plug of tobacco and a porous plaster.

He gathered up what he could in both arms, made two trips to the door and threw out all he could, tried again to put his number eleven feet into his number nine boots, gave it up and socked himself out of the car as it began to move, while the brakeman bombarded him through the window for two miles with personal property, groceries, drygoods, boots and shoes, gents' furnishing goods, hardware, notions, bric-a-brac, red herrings, clothing, doughnuts, Vinegar Bitters and facetious remarks.

Then he picked up the retired snorer's railroad check from the seat, and I heard him say: "Why, dog on it, that wasn't his town after all."—Bill Nye in The Current.

A FUTURE MRS. PARTINGTON.

A small boy in a bright Morrow family wanted something of his mother yesterday when she was very busy writing. She was absorbed in her work, and did not look up at his repeated "Mamma, mamma" beside her elbow. "Well," said he at last, flinging away from her side in a pet, "it's no use to try to make my mamma hear when she is writing; she's just ignominous of everything."—Rising Star Record.

Tom Corwin's Repartee.

In 1842 when Mr. Corwin was the Whig candidate for governor, he was speaking to a large out of door audience in Akron, and in his speech he told his hearers that he wished for their votes, but said he wished it to be understood that it was not for the sake of the salary he would receive. (The governor's annual salary under the old constitution was only $800.) A Democrat near the speaker's stand said, "That's a lie."

Mr. Corwin instantly turned a little and looking quietly into the fellow's face, with a smile clearly expressing a combination of mirth and contempt, said, "No, it is not, and I will tell you why. I am a lawyer, and when at home I can make more money by pleading assault and battery cases for (pointing his finger at him) just such chaps as you are than I could by being governor." As soon as the roars of laughter subsided Mr. Corwin went on with his address just as though he had not been interrupted.—Cleveland Leader.

PROFESSOR BROM WHYTE.

His Grand Aggregashun Nearing the Missouri Line.

To the Editor of The Detroit Free Press:

I am gradually nearin' the Missouri line with my grand aggregashun of natural wonders, which its kuriosities and highly moral lectures on polyticks, anatomy, phrenology, physiognomy and all so 4th. He-heem! Which means that my show, at a quarter a head, is better with the money than any karavan now travellin'. Do not be deceived by cirkus bills posted on the walls.

In my last I throwed out a hint that the public was dooly appreshiatin' my dissolvin' views, and that I was preparin' a grate surprise. Last nite I performed my show to a large and intelligent audience—children half price. Wealth and culchur jammed herself into the hall sotto voce. (If it wasn't sotto voce, please change to statu quo. I know it was in the maybarhood of one or the other of 'em.)

I brung out the dissolving views fust. The landskaps of Dan'l in the lion's den had just bin touched up with carmine, and it was a terrifick hit. Dan'l was called bad the kurtin three strait heats. Everybody was ready to back him at big odds. This scene was painted fur me by an old funster in Chicago.

Painted by an old master in Chicago.

He said he painted it from memory. Dan'l is represented as leanin' agin the rocks in a negligee posshun, a smile of victory on his face, while three lions are tryin' to krawl into worm holes in the rocks. It ain't my fault if the stuff-shun ain't historikally korrect, as I paid the old master $2 in cash and gave him my note for the other $48.

In the next view I sprung the surprise. It was a landskape representin' an Arkansaw Republikan postmaster walkin' out doors under a Demokratic administrashun, while an Arkansaw Demokrat walked in. Fur about a minit the aujence held her breth. Then she whooped and bellered and howled till the roof riz eight inches. I had to dissolve that view seven different times bef they'd let up on me. It's my kandid opinion, judgin' from what I've seen and heard in this state, that the spiles of office are sadly hungered after. When the show was over the editor of a lokal newspaper threatened to have me arrested fur sedishun, but I stood firm. I don't believe he has no high and lofty motives, but was actuated by the fackt that I got my job printin done at a rival concern.

I am gittin' phrenology down to an abrupt science, and it really surprises me to find how much I know about it. The followin' is the average male head:

"Very charitable."

"A deep thinker."

"Lovin' husband and kind father."

"Not hasty in your ventures."

"Most too bashful for your own good."

"Very strong in your friendships."

"Great reverence for religion."

"Very pashuate an' long suferin'."

In the case of the female head I hit to say the monotony somewhat as follows:

"Very affecktionate and devoted."

"I find traces of grate natural talents. You should hev bin edeocated for an artist, singer or musishun."

"Naterally designed to sore above the common herd."

"Your children orter make a mark in this vain world."

"Grate will power."

"Chuck full of charity and forgiveness."

Anatomy, I am grieved to remark, don't seem to interest the people of northern Arkansaw. I have sold but one chart in a week, and the only party who purchased that did so under the impression that it was a cheap and sartin cure for catarrh, if taken accordin' to directshuns. They don't seem to keer a kopper whether the liver is on the right or left side, the spinal column plumb or angled, the respiratory organs in the chest or hose. So long as they respiratory all right the owner don't bother himself as to how.

I'm poor I'm a leetle too blame far a lack of zeal on the subject of physiognomy. At one of my last performances, I pinted out the leadin traits in the karacter of a widder. I showed by her retreatin chin, slantin head, stuck up nose and the grate width between the eyes that she'd ought to a husband and he over his grave. She seemed to admire my kandor, but the feller she was goin' to take fur a 2d husband didn't. It cost me six bits to buy him off and up to the very last he seemed determined to do me some mortal injoory.

If your paper has any influence in Missouri I wish you'd kinder refer to my Grand Aggregashun now and then. We'll make one hand wash the other. You refer to me and I'll refer to you.

2 performances daily, the same as heretofore, and I'll guarantee that my korn kure contains nuthin' to offend the most fastidious.

The Influence of Environment.

This is the time of the year when the young of the average boy experiences strange mutations. In school, when he is called upon to declaim a "piece," it is almost impossible to hear him ten feet away. But in the very same afternoon his voice can be heard all over the base ball grounds and clear over the fence as he wildly yells, "Go now, you've got to go."—Chicago Times.

Simplicity of Construction.	Freedom from choking.
Strength and Durability.	Certainty of Binding.
Ease of adjustment and management.	Security of Knot tied.
Lightness of draft.	Delivery of sheaf.
Absence of side draft.	Economy in cost of twine per acre.

Our BUNDLE CARRIER saves the labor of at least one man. The bound bundles are left in heaps, and in line convenient for shocking, and this labor is saved in performing that work. Another saving, and one that should not be overlooked, is of grain that is shelled and lost with the usual mode of delivery, by dragging the bundles together by hand when shocking; also by the trampling of the horses at corners—its use enabling the driver to keep the corners clear of bundles. We claim that we have the only successful bundle carrier.

We handle our own Twine and make a Specialty of keeping the best quality on hand and sold as low as any other house of equal quality.

A DAY AT SAND LAKE.

On Saturday morning between the hours of 6 and 8 o'clock could be seen team after team wending their way toward that beautiful body of water called Sand Lake. A thought came into our mind that the farmers must be going to have a big time at the lake, so we concluded to send a representative of the HERALD. We looked in vain for an empty seat in some farmer's wagon, but every place was occupied. So no other way being apparent we boarded the M. & O. train and arrived at Sand Lake Crossing about half past twelve. Seeing no conveyance we proceeded to "hoof it." Enquiring of a boy the distance he replied "Twelve by team, but 4 by foot." We thought so.

But we arrived in due time, just made enough to say, that going away, in a body of 154 strong, from the dinner time. But we did not feel so bad about that as we had had dinner. Every farmer belonging to the Tecumseh & Franklin Club and their relatives and friends were there. Even Press Harry with his "squires" robe on, could not marry any couple that should come that way. Watt Osborne with his pan of beans; Mike Snelhzer, with his innocent looks; "Lant" Bangs with dissembling countenance; Blinn, Tallman with his brown jug of milk and scores of others, with Leroy Mills, of Adrian. We had the pleasure of an introduction to Mr. J. J. Putnam, the genial landlord of the Lake Park House. Mr. Putnam has a large three story hotel with all the modern conveniences, a splendid grove, filled with swing and tables. His hotel is surrounded with good walks, a fine fountain, a stand &c.

Being informed that the East Tecumseh Farmers' Club were holding a similar picnic on the opposite side, at Wells landing, we chartered a row boat and getting the smiling countenance of Fay DePuy to accompany us we proceeded across. Mr. Wells was found shaking lemonade in great style, as hearty and good natured as ever. Mr. Wells keeps up everything in first-class style and is building up a large trade. On looking around we found John Benedict, with the cares of the farm all gone, espied "Ant" Hall, hiding with a big string of fish; I. H. Schreder, happy Frank Hector, George Griswold, and a host of others. And 150 were scattered at this landing. After investigating the grove and so forth, we sailed back where we met our friends Percy Fitzsimmons and Fred Tiffany who had ridden over on their bicycles. The time was spent until supper time, riding on the lake, swinging, &c. We received an invitation from three different parties to take supper, were sorry we could not except them all. Blinn Tallman being the first we accepted his invitation and sat down to a bountiful repast which was partaken of with much gusto. The wives of the farmers know how to get a down right good picnic meal, as they certainly showed on that day. After the supper the people began to depart for home. We accepted the kind invitation of Henry Wilson to ride, and had a fine ride after his fast "bays".

Taken all together it was as fine a picnic as we ever attended at Sand Lake. The day was immense, the lake could not have been better, nor the landlords more pleasant. We hope to be able to attend the next annual meeting.

Mrs. Woodard, who has long been a respected resident of this town, passed her ninetieth birth day on Sunday last. She and her invalid daughter having been members of good standing in the Methodist church for many years, and unable to attend services held there, the Pastor and a few of the old members and friends were invited in by other members of the family, and a social prayer meeting was held for their especial benefit. Beautiful floral gifts were presented. The meeting was very pleasant and gratifying to the old lady and all present. May they continue to care for them until her sun shall set to rise again in the morning of a new and beautiful life.

Miss Sizzie Osborn accompanied her father, Hannibal Osborn, to Carthage Ill., last week, to attend the obsequies of Wm. E. Mason. Miss Osborn will remain there with her sister for several weeks.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

[illegible] the [illegible] town Sunday.

Fred Matthews, of Adrian, was in town last Monday.

A. R. Coddington is building a large barn, 44x64 in size, on his farm.

Mrs. T. E. Webb of Valentine, Ind., is visiting at Myron Comfort's.

To the best of our information and belief we should say that summer had come at last.

Mr. T. P. Carbine, of Hillsdale, Mich., has been stopping a few days at H. E. Anderson's.

Geo. Zimmerman was tied in bonds last week Wednesday, by his wife presenting him with an eight pound girl.

The excursion train to Devils Lake last Sunday consisted of three cars not very well filled with excursionists.

Charlie Doty, who has been working at his trade in Kalamazoo for some time past, arrived home last Monday.

Mr. H. C. Mathews, the Northwestern Agent of the M. & O., was in town over Sunday as the guest of A. P. Paxson.

Our streets were lined with teams loaded all day Saturday, loaded with wool. Over $20,000 were paid out for wool on that day.

Stella and Vina Anthony, of Raisin, are spending a couple of weeks at Auburn, Ind., the guest of their sister, Mrs. Milo Dole.

Children's Sunday was observed very generally last Sabbath, both in Tecumseh churches and in the adjoining towns.

The Lake Shore painter's car is in town this week, and the company's property is looking much improved in consequence.

Dr. North of Tecumseh, and Dr. Begel of Holloway, attended the State Medical Society's annual meeting in Jackson last week.

In a match game of lawn tennis last Saturday, Miss Kate Anderson was acknowledged the champion player. The game was played at the Misses Hayden's grounds.

Will Osborn arrived home from Chicago last Monday. On account of the painter's strike in that city he was thrown out of work. He started for New Mexico Tuesday.

The Ohio & Mich. Coal and Mfg. Co. have had some fine lettering done on their mill and sheds. The work was done by Billy Sheer of Jackson, and is certainly very attractive.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bass, of Lawrence, Van Buren Co., who came out to attend the Miller-Tefft wedding, remained through the week visiting their numerous Tecumseh acquaintances.

A party of about 20 young folks took in the beauties of Sand Lake last Tuesday, indulging in a picnic dinner. The HERALD was represented on the occasion, but the boys who remained at home got no take.

The new side walk laid last week in front of Henry Nyland's, W. H. Mathews and G. W. Griffiths' is a beauty. Mr. Mathews worked up the project. We doubt whether there is a better side walk in the village, the length of an entire block.

Everyone should esteem it as a privilege to help the M. E. church organ funds. You can accomplish this object and get your money's worth at the same time by attending the Star Course of entertainments. First date next Monday evening.

Communion of the Lord's Supper will be administered in the South Macon Reformed church on next Sabbath morning, June 20th. Service at eleven o'clock. Preparatory service on Saturday afternoon, June 19 at two o'clock. Charles S. Button, pastor.

Mrs. Dr. Keeney of Franklin, is an aunt of the President's wife. As the Keeney family is somewhat numerous, Mrs. Cleveland has several cousins residing in this county. We have often wondered why such good citizens as Joe and Will should stay on t'other side of the fence. Let them come over on our side now and cultivate an acquaintance with the Lady of the White House. Big possibilities would be involved in such a course, to say the least.

In our marriage column will be found the wedding notice of Miss Julia Herning and Mr. Will Wight, of Detroit. The bride has made her home here for a number of years and during her residence there has gained many friends. The groom owns a large book store at Detroit, with branch stores at East Saginaw and Toledo. They left on the 4 o'clock Lake Shore train for Detroit, their future home. We extend congratulations.

Mrs. Wm. Ames is visiting in Saline this week.

Frank Deuel, of Toledo, was in town over Sunday.

John Smyth, of Grand Rapids, is in town a day or two.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Clark of Clinton visited Tecumseh last Tuesday.

Miss Grace DeWolf is in Detroit this week visiting friends.

Wool keeps coming in freely and our buyers are more than busy.

Mrs. Robert Mitchell of Adrian was the guest of Wm. Cullmond last Friday.

The Greenback State Convention will be held at Grand Rapids, Aug. 17 and 18.

Tecumseh has a drain commissioner at last. Geo. Griswold has accepted that honor.

Toledo is preparing for an old fashioned fourth of July celebration and a big time generally.

John R. Clarke's great success as an entertainer has secured him a second engagement in the same bureau for another season.

The Ladies' Social of the Universalist church will be held at Mrs. C. A. Stacy's, next week Thursday, June 24th, afternoon and evening.

The Burnett House at Toledo is enjoying a splendid run of patronage at present, and under Mark's efficient management, it is certainly deserving of it.

We are indebted to County Clerk Bixby for a copy of the Proceedings of the Board of Supervisors. It was printed at the office of the Blissfield Advance.

The marriage of John Clough to Miss Martha Dean, both of this village, took place at the residence of Rev. C. E. Conley at Detroit, Friday, June 11.

The Clayton Star advertises itself as the best local paper in Lenawee county, which claim is not surprising, as it has a hog at the head of its local column.—Adrian Times.

John Robinson's circus will be here on Wednesday June 30. Their show bills are the best ever displayed in this village, and the show itself will correspond. It is one of the best tent shows now on the road.

Will Searles, who has been in the employ of the telephone company at this place, left for his home at Coldwater, last Tuesday. He has accepted a better position in the office at that place. Geo. Schreder fills his place here.

Extensive improvements are being made in the Lancaster house at Clinton. The sitting room is being repainted and papered and several of the upper rooms will soon go through the same process. Hank Lancaster is always improving something.

Dr. H. W. Carlin of Grand Rapids, is here spending a few days shaking hands with his old Tecumseh friends and he was kept busy from Friday until Monday evening. He is building up a fine practice in Grand Rapids, which we are glad to hear.

The occasion of the President's wedding would be a good time for the adoption of a national flower. One has been discovered on the Islands of Tchinandequo, which seems to answer the conditions. It is white in the morning, red at noon, and blue at night.

Someone has remarked to one of our exchanges that its market reports were way off or words to that effect, whereupon the exchange goes and remarks that if the Kicker comes around again it will print a portrait of him by using its old reliable Jackass cut.—Adrian Times.

The new firm of Slayton & Goodrich is getting finely started in the cigar box business. They have recently put in a three horse engine and boiler to run the machinery with, and a new nailing machine of the latest design. They are gaining new customers every week, having recently taken a contract of 1,000 boxes per week from Brown Brothers of Detroit. This contract is for the manufacture of a new brand called the "Fair Press." In addition to the work they are doing for John J. Freeman and Geo. Merritt, they have customers in Adrian, Monroe, Hillsdale, Dundee and Detroit. The present indications are that they will work up a nice industry.

The graduating exercises will be held at the Opera House, Wednesday evening, June 23, one night earlier than usual, to secure the attendance of Prof. E. H. Strong, of the State Normal School as lecturer, and will consist of vocal and instrumental music, the lecture by Prof. Strong, and valedictory by Miss Inez M. Laing. Those bringing flowers will please have them ready, duly marked and hand them to the ushers on entering, as they will not be collected during the exercises. On Sunday evening next union services will be held at the Presbyterian church, at which time the baccalaureate sermon will be delivered before the graduating class by Rev. W. H. Babbitt.

Remember the strawberry festival at John O'Neil's this evening.

The three year old son of [illegible] Derby, of Franklin, fell off the stoop last Sunday and broke his arm.

Mrs. Dr. DeMott is spending a few days with friends. A visit from her is always welcome.

Hon. John L. Adams attended the semi centennial celebration at Lansing on Tuesday. He went up on Monday evening and returned Wednesday morning.

The Ohio & Michigan Coal & Mfg. Co. have been weighing in this week's issue. The business of this new enterprise is now firmly established and is having a healthy growth.

As Frank Seman was working on a barn at Walt. Osborn's yesterday forenoon he accidentally hit his foot with an adz, cutting it quite severely. He will be laid up for a short time, and of course the cut adds no beauty to his foot.

On Monday last Julius Stacy received the appointment of postmaster at Tecumseh. A private telegram received by S. C. Stacy about five o'clock that afternoon announced the fact, and the Detroit papers of Monday evening and Tuesday morning confirmed the news.

Mrs. W. V. Wimple met with a very serious accident last Monday. While going across the road she accidentally slipped, striking her hip on the cross walk and breaking it. She was taken home and cared for and is now doing quite well, but her age will somewhat retard her recovery.

Apropos of the summer sporting season comes an illustrated paper on "Salmon Fishing" in the July Harper's. Henry P. Wells, the writer, is an acknowledged authority on fishing and hunting, and his helpful advice is accompanied with an account of his own exploits with Canadian salmon.

Mrs. Woodard, mother of Volorus Woodard, who was 90 years of age last Monday, came over to town and L. F. Wheeler took a cabinet photo of the old lady that was "natural as life." Mrs. Woodward is enjoying excellent health, and no stranger would mistrust that she was over seventy years old.

Professor Richard T. Ely, Ph.D., of Johns Hopkins University, one of the most eminent political economists, is writing a course of timely articles entitled "Social Studies," in which the perplexing economic issues of the day will be thoroughly discussed. The first part in Harper's Magazine for July, "The Nature of the Railroad Problem," is introductory to the great subject of Railway Abuses and Reforms.

Knapp's band had a street rehearsal last evening and played some fine new music. After the rehearsal they proceeded to Judge Stacy's residence and favored the Judge with a serenade. They were invited in, and an hour was passed in music and social chat very pleasantly, at least to the family. The young men were treated to such a lunch as could be hastily prepared. The Judge extends his hearty thanks for the compliment.

CHILDRENS SUNDAY.

This day was appropriately observed last Sabbath in all the Tecumseh Churches except the Episcopal.

At the Baptist church no special Sunday School service was held. The pulpit and platform were tastefully decorated with a generous collection of flowers. The music was of a stirring character in which the Sunday School children could join. The pastor took his text from Matt. VI 26, 28, 29. "Behold the fowls of the air, consider the lilies, etc." the subject being lessons from the birds and flowers.

At the M. E. church the usual services were held in the morning at the close of which twelve children received the rite of baptism. Rev. Potter performed this ceremony in a most impressive manner. In the evening a Sunday School Concert was given. The Children taking part did perform their parts finely and did themselves great credit. The church was very handsomely decorated with flowers and plants.

At the Presbyterian church the program was of a similar character. The pastor preached a sermon appropriate to the occasion in the morning and in the evening, outside of Sabbath Concert, was given. The floral decoration was in excellent taste, consisting mostly of large potted plants and elaborate set pieces. An elegant piece for the center table was furnished by Mrs. John Hoek. Both morning and evening services were largely attended.

At the Universalist church the day was observed in the usual manner. The pastor delivered a discourse to the children in the morning, consisting largely of simple stories with a moral which a the smallest child could understand. In the evening a Concert was given by the Sunday School. The music was much improved by the assistance of Wheeler's quartette. The pulpit and platform were profusely ornamented with flowers and plants and set pieces.

An I. A. W. golf pin has been lost. Finder please leave at this office.

AN OLD RELIC.

While rummaging about an old building [illegible] found an old relic, which was a [illegible] curiosity. It is the program of a High School Exhibition, held on Friday evening, March 29th, 1850. The typographical execution of the program would hardly be considered [illegible] to be made at this day, but it is reprinted at the HERALD office, it will be rather unkind in us to criticise. We reproduce it entire.

"What are you doing, John?" inquired his wife, "that is the side door."

"Certainly," he replied, "it's Sunday, isn't it? The front door is to Iceland—oh—" suddenly interrupting himself—"oh, of course, certainly, what am I thinking about? I was under the impression that—that——"

"Sh! that's enough," said his wife, and then she led him into church.

ALL EARTHLY DISAPPOINTED.

"Are you glad to see me, Bobby?" asked the bishop, in his annual visit to the parish.

"Oh, yes," said Bobby, "'cause we always have a good dinner when you come. But I didn't expect you."

"No?"

"No. I thought you I go somewhere else, 'cause mamma said yesterday that it was about time some other member of the church offered to entertain you."

We pulled the pie off the ceiling.

And the carpenter has been at work on the woodwork of the house for an hour or so trying to make it look natural again. Mrs. Pease says she don't know what I put into the pie, whether the baking powder was a little remnant of percussion, that her husband left when he died, or a discarded saltpetre powder, but that I never can be too thankful that it blew up before George invested it in a his true inwardness. To-morrow I may try again, and I want to cook a few of these seven colored chickens with apertures in the sent'r, if I can. I want to do everything to help George to acquire wealth. Why Farmers Smiled.

A preacher in a neighboring town preached a series of twenty sermons on the "Prodigal Son." He finally reached the place where the fat calf was killed.

"O my friends," said he, "that was a wonderful calf. If ever a calf was fat and sleek and well cared for, that calf was. Why the dear old father had been fattening it for years."

His audience was composed mostly of farmers who knew that a calf could not be kept twenty years without outgrowing its calfhood, so they might be excused for smiling.—Danville Breeze.

W. D. Suit, Druggist, Delphos, Ind., testifies: "I can recommend Electric Bitters as the very best remedy. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles and was cured of rheumatism of years' standing. Abraham Hare, druggist, Bellville, Ohio, adds his testimony: "The best selling medicine I have ever handled in my 20 years' experience is Electric Bitters." Hundreds of others have spoken to me of their wonderful cures by Electric Bitters, so we can only say we feel that we cannot do too much for a medicine so entirely satisfactory in its effects. Sold at half dollar a bottle at C. A. Wright & Co.

CATARRH—A NEW TREATMENT.

From the Montreal Star.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern medicine has been attained by the Dixon treatment for Catarrh. Out of 2,000 patients treated during the past six months, only a few persons have been reported as cured of this stubborn malady. This is due, the press statement when it is remembered that not five per cent of physicians presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines that other advertised cures never record a case of all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissues, Mr. Dixon at once adopted this as a clear indication, and this accomplished he claims that all cases promptly cured and the patient given to understand, as cures effected in the four years and are cures still. No case has yet attempted to cure Catarrh in this manner. And to other treatment has ever made a claim. The Apple of the remedy is simple, and can be done at home, and the price is such as to place it within the most favorable for a speedy and permanent cure the majority of cases. Long standing cases of the most inveterate character yield to the treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. Dixon & Son, 305 King Street West, Toronto, Canada, and inclose stamp for their treatise on Catarrh.

Three members of my family, says Mr. James A. Sample, Cash Room, office of the Treasurer, U. S., who were suffering from aggravating coughs, have been much benefited by taking Red Star Cough Cure. None of the ill effects so noticeable in other cough remedies have followed the use of this.

In chronic cases of neuralgia, rheumatism, or gout, where the disturbing cause is a certain acid which poisons the blood, Salvation Oil should be used according to directions. This powerful pain destroyer will in time dissolve the poison circulating in the blood, and bring relief where all other remedies fail. Salvation Oil kills pain, and is only twenty-five cents a bottle.

In every land and clime, the merits of St. Jacobs Oil as the only specific for pain, are being acknowledged by the press and people.

A Hero Off His Pedestal.

Bishop Harris of New York, in response to the address of welcome tendered to him on his arrival in the Buffalo Methodist union the other evening, told a good story at his own expense. He had gone to the little town of Dundee, in the central part of this state, to dedicate a church. He was the guest of the pastor, who had a very beautiful and interesting little boy, who had been on the tiptoe of expectation to see the bishop, about whose coming he had heard so much. At the dinner table the bishop sat at the head, with the little fellow just at his elbow, and the preacher had at best to make himself agreeable to the young gentleman in conversation. The talk was of serious and solid studies of church, Sunday school and other matters likely to interest. The pair made quite an impression, and seemed pleased with each other; but after the distinguished visitor had left the name the boy proceeded in almost blank astonishment, and said: "Ma, is Bishop what there is to a bishop?"—Buffalo Courier.

An Excellent Judge of Character.

Mr. Armour prides himself on the men he picked out to do his work, and naturally he should believe as well that his sagacity in reading men contributes a great deal to his money-making power. Armour gets down to business at 7 a. m., and while he does not require everybody to be on hand at that hour, early comers are appreciated. There is a capital fellow in the office who was rewarded for this very thing not long ago. He had been out all night, so much of the night, at any rate, that it dawned on him that it was a question whether a cold plunge would be more refreshing than rest, and so he decided to clear up his head and clean out his body by a Turkish bath. It was 6 o'clock when this scheme of up process was over, and not 7 o'clock when he turned up at the office as smooth as silk and fresh as a daisy. At 7 Armour came in. His eye fell on that Turkish bath young man.

"Say," said Armour, "you're the kind of fellow I like to see. You just go to-day and get the best suit of clothes you can find, and charge them to the old man."—Chicago Mail.

A King's Amusement.

Victor Emanuel and one of his friends, Signor J., on one of his hunting trips, had taken shelter for the night in the hut of a countryman, who had not the remotest idea of the dignity of his illustrious guest. The king noticed that Signor J., who was sitting near the fire next the hearth, kept turning away his head. "What is the matter with you?" asked the king in French, which, by the way, he spoke like a Parisian. "I can't stand the smell of this man," said J., "he smells like a well-fed fox." "Bah!" said the king, "as for me I would like that if we went for a week without washing." "Do it, if you dare." "Yes, we would. I'll try it myself." So the king went to work cheerfully and never wasted a word of the joke in the world. At the end of the week he complimented him and tendering him respectfully on the odor, said: "Your majesty has won the bet, and not at the end of a week, but a fortnight." The king shrugged his shoulders and was highly delighted with the whole adventure.

CLINTON MICH. JUNE 17, 1886.

OBITUARY

[illegible] at his family residence in the village of Clinton as an early hour on Thursday morning, [illegible]

The deceased was born in Herkimer county, State of New York, on the 16th day of [illegible] and was therefore beyond the threshold of four score years at the date of his death. He lived in that county [illegible] in the spring of 1835 he [illegible] by the Rev. M. Wesley and [illegible] the day of his decease, he took up his residence in Michigan and entered [illegible] in Tecumseh, where he lived [illegible] years, when he came to Clinton and purchased the farm on which he died. He was married three times, first to Miss Ruth Ann Daly, who died in 1842. He afterwards married Miss Lydia Hubbard, who still survives him. His son, Edwin R. Smith, the junior member of the firm, is the only surviving child of the family. Since 1862 the family residence of the deceased has been the stately brick dwelling on Tecumseh street, which was built by Jira Payne, one of the pioneers of Clinton.

The funeral services were held at the residence on Sunday last at two o'clock in the afternoon, which a large concourse of people assembled to pay great and deserved respect. Not only [illegible] of the adjoining towns were represented. The beautiful funeral hymns rose from the Episcopal church choir, [illegible] was impressively rendered by Rev. J. [illegible] and appropriate music was rendered by St. John's church choir. The following pallbearers, [illegible] personal friends of the deceased, officiated as follows: Peter Van De Mark, P. D. Lancaster, J. E. McCollum, W. C. Rogers, John Bush, and [illegible] Kalpaugh. At the conclusion of the services the remains were conveyed to the cemetery, followed by mourning friends, and deposited in their final resting place.

[illegible] years he filled the office of Justice of the Peace in the old town of Tecumseh. Great learned and upright, strict and impartial in all his official acts, his reputation as a judicial officer stood among the highest. While he was fearless in administering justice, he was ever ready to extend his kindness of heart, often led him to a course of mercy and remonstrance with young offenders, and thus restored them from a path of crime to rectitude and honor.

His character, however, shone the brightest in the domestic relations. Living the life of a Christian, he was the kindest of husbands and the most tender of fathers.

Thus has another of Clinton's pioneers gone to his eternal reward. None deserve more than he for the upbuilding of the adopted village. For fifty three years he has lived among us and his [illegible] was exerted in behalf of good morals and business integrity. The loss of such a man for a period of half a century is more than words can fitly express or figures can compute. The great West has been built up by sturdy pioneers who were cast in the same manly mould. Although his earthly race is run, his [illegible] will follow him.

His memory will be cherished by his friends and he will be missed upon all occasions for the guidance of the young. Truly will it be said of him: He has fought the good fight, he has kept the faith, and he will now receive his righteous reward.

The boys are putting in their work with a will for endless chaining the past few days.

Haying has begun. The crop is rather light this season.

Highway commissioner, J. N. Pilbeam, built a fine bridge across the stream north of the village last week.

Mrs. Alfred Lawton is quite sick at present. Also, Mrs Peter Sharp.

Mrs. Dr Demott of Flint, and Mrs. W. E. Doty of Holloway, visited Mrs. Hall Saturday.

Mrs. David McNair and Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Sharp of Tecumseh, spent a few hours at their old home, Mr. Sharp's, last week.

G. P. Waring purchased a lot of Samuel Rappleye on Wednesday and will put up a block during the summer. Work on the cellar began at once.

Samuel Helm will rebuild his store and resume business as soon as possible. He will be found at present in what is known as the Eldy Miller house, ready to attend all orders.

Quite a feeling is manifested among the citizens at the manner that the Lancashire Insurance Company settled with Coryell & Lawton, and we understand that some have had their policies with that company canceled.

The attendance at the strawberry and ice cream festival held at the church Friday evening was somewhat limited. The society realized $9.85 however.

Agt. A. J. Sutton and family spent Sunday with friends at Pulaski.

Dr. D. W. Loree and Mr. & Mrs. J. F. Temple went to Detroit Monday to visit relatives.

Agt. Geo. Arner of Wilder's and Miss Libbie Emmonds returned from a visit with Miss Emmond's parents at Mattawan. They spent a day or two with Agent Frank Allen, and report a splendid time. We judge that railroading agrees with George as he is getting quite portly. He spent Sunday at home, returning Monday to attend to business.

Uncle John Houseman and James Campbell started for St. Johns Monday. They will drive through.

Miss Jennie Kilpatrick of Fowlerville, came Monday night and will make her many friends here and at Clinton a visit. We are glad to learn that her health has improved very much.

Miss Belle Barlow is in Adrian this week attending the commencement exercises and visiting her many College friends, and assisting in the musical part of the Lumba Phi and Star Society concerts.

If the lady who used such vulgar and profane language Sunday night, is not in her right mind she should be taken care of, and if she is all right, she ought to be taken into custody, for the language she used was not decent to be used in the back woods on a weekday night, much more in the village on Sunday where she was heard for some distance.

SPRINGVILLE SNUFF.

C. D. Smith went to Britton to put in a store front this week.

The Onsted correspondent of the Press is mistaken in regard to the bonds of a little drug store. The amount is to be determined this week.

Christopher Duwan died at his residence in Jackson on Sunday evening last, was buried in the Catholic Cemetery at this place on the 22d.

Farmers were all cutting down hay on Monday; got a splendid soaking towards evening, too good! glad of it.

J. W. Stafford had a valuable col (4 years old) hooked so badly last week that it is now considered worth less, although it was alive when last heard from.

We notice James Moore comes to the front with a program for the 3d of July. Understand he has has changed bands for the day music and Knapp's band of Tecumseh will play instead of Manchester band. The wont be any kicking, Jim, on any such changes as that.

School closes here this week we believe with exercises and a lunch or picnic, the particulars of which we have been unable to ascertain.

HOLLOWAY HAPPENINGS.

Our school closed last Friday with an old fashioned picnic, with a majority of the inhabitants of the district in attendance. The usual program of music and recitations was carried out and some high toned speaking was indulged in by local orators. The only unpleasantness of the occasion was a little dispute between Lyman Lane and wife in regard to some dumplings which he made knock the contents out of Horace Hawes, and wished that the affair be peacefully settled and that peace and good will prevails. We hope it will be a lesson to James in the future, to be a little more careful in his remarks.

A horse belonging to Chester Clark broke loose at the picnic grounds and made a dash for home. The carriage top was left beside the road after going about ten rods, after which the journey was accomplished without further damage.

The young people of this vicinity gave Byron Bogel a little surprise last Friday evening and Byron surprised them by taking one of the girls home that came there with another fellow. Base ingratitude.

Fred Wickwire and A. F. Gordon intend to start for Valparaiso Ind., this week to attend school.

Our blacksmith, Fred Knight, is working up a big trade. His shop is thronged from morning till night, and we understand that his work gives universal satisfaction. No trouble for the right kind of a man to succeed in Holloway.

ONSTED ODDS.

Great scarcity of news in these parts.

School closed in school district number five this week Tuesday.

Quarterly meeting will be held at the Cambridge F. W. Baptist church this week, commencing Friday eve.

A number of our citizens will take advantage of the excursion rates and go to Toledo to-day.

The Onsted boys played their first game of base ball last Saturday, playing with the Rome Center club. Rome came out ahead.

H. A. Verrier came home from Devils Lake Saturday, nearly sick, and has had to give up work for a few days.

THE G. C. Q.

Last Saturday being the anniversary of the G. C. Q. club, to celebrate the same a number of Tecumseh people accepted the kind invitation of Cynthia L. Dewey, to spend the evening at her home. A number of Cambridge young people were invited in and a splendid time was had. The company broke up at 12 o'clock, and the Tecumseh delegation were to remain over Sunday. Some were hospitably entertained by Mrs. A. F. Dewey and the rest by Mrs. J. W. Dewey. We will not mention the time that some fell asleep, but at six o'clock all were up getting a smell of the country air. The morning was very pleasantly spent and at 12 o'clock two single rigs and double rigs could be seen on their way conveying a number to the Prospect Hill M. E. church. Sunday School was first attended, after which we listened to a well delivered sermon by the Rev. Mr. Crane, of Addison. After the services we started around Prospect Hill to our paces of staying, where we found dinner awaiting us. About six o'clock Mr. A. F. Dewey's double rig was brought, and under the guidance of Mr. Will Toland the party landed at their respective homes in Tecumseh at 9:30. Too much cannot be said in praise of the manner we were received. This is the second visit Tecumseh parties have had the privilege of enjoying in Cambridge and their only wish is that all may live to attend many more like the preceding one.

F. F.

Last Thursday evening a reception was given by the Calisthenic club, in honor of the departure of the Misses Lyons and Hitchcock. The reception was held at the residence of Wm. Hayden. Promptly at 6 o'clock, supper was served by the club to about 50 invited guests. The supper showed that the young ladies were as good at making cake &c. as they were swinging the Indian club or using the boxing gloves. After the supper, which was served on the lawn, toasts were in order, Will H. Hayden being toast master, announced a few toasts which were responded to by the following persons, George Tiffany, Julia Snell, Edgar Ide and Miss Hitchcock. Every one now were bent on having a good time. Some could be seen kicking the foot ball, others playing lawn tennis until it grew too dark, when they all proceeded to the house where everything was in perfect order to receive them. After dancing music, telling fortunes etc., the company broke up, all expressing the opinion that they had had a splendid time.

Buttons are works of art at present.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS.

Lesson 1. The Word Made Flesh. John 1. 1-18.

This lesson is the introduction to the study of Christ's life as given in the writings of John, and furnishes us with the proof that Christ was the incarnate Son of God.

John the Baptist was preaching repentance and baptising the people at the Bethabara ford on the river Jordan. Two of his disciples heard him speak of Jesus as the Messiah and followed Him. They were His first disciples and at once commenced active work for Him.

Lesson 3. The First Miracle. John 2. 1-11.

At a wedding feast in Cana of Galilee to which Jesus had been invited, the supply of wine ran short, where upon our Lord turned water into wine. This was His first miracle, and consequently the first public demonstration of his divinity.

Lesson 4. Jesus and Nicodemus. John 3. 1-18.

A ruler of the Jews, Nicodemus, came to Jesus one night after the people had gone to their homes, and sought instruction. The Savior taught him the principle of the New Birth, Regeneration, without which no man can "see the Kingdom of God."

Lesson 5. Jesus at the Well. John 4. 5-26.

Tired with His journey our Lord rests at Jacob's well, near Sychar, in Samaria, while His disciples go into the city to buy food. He asks water of a woman who has come to the well to fill her waterpot. The occasion is used by Christ to teach her of the living water which satisfies the soul.

Lesson 6. Sowing and Reaping. John 4. 27-42.

The disciples return from Sychar with food, and Christ unfolds to them the principle of the spiritual harvest. He afterwards goes into the city and spends two days teaching the people.

Lesson 7. The Nobleman's Son. John 4. 43-54.

The son of a man in high position is laid low with malarial fever, and the father goes to Jesus for help, having heard of him as a Great Healer of physical disease. Jesus reproves him for his short-sightedness and heals his son with the divine word.

Lesson 8. Jesus at Bethesda. John 5. 5-18.

At the pool of Bethesda, in Jerusalem, our Savior finds a man who has been sick for 38 years, with no one to help him into the pool at the desired time. It being the Sabbath day He is accused by the Jews of Sabbath breaking, but successfully defends Himself.

Lesson 9. Jesus Feeding Five Thousand. John 6. 1-21.

Thousands of people follow our Lord to a lonely place beyond the sea of Tiberias. As night approaches the necessity for food becomes apparent. He closes the day's labors by miraculously feeding over 5,000 people with five loaves and two small fishes.

Lesson 10. Jesus, the Bread of Life. John 6. 22-40.

The next day the people find Him in Capernaum on His way to the Synagogue, and He teaches them to stop looking simply for temporal blessings, and exhorts them to take the Bread of life, which he declares Himself to be.

Lesson 11. Jesus the Christ. John 7. 37-52.

On the last day of the Feast of the Tabernacles, Jesus announces Himself as the Fountain of living water, and the Source of spiritual life. His teachings were variously received by the people, some believing and others rejecting them.

Lesson 12. Jesus and Abraham. John 8. 31-38 and 44-59.

The Jews prided themselves on their decent from Abraham and claimed to be free men. Christ taught them the true principle of freedom, and announced Himself as existing before Abraham, and consequently divine. For this they attempted to stone Him, but He escaped. His hour was not yet come.

Note.

The divinity of Christ as taught in every lesson of the quarter.

The teachings are so plain as to be easily understood and yet as perfect as to be absolutely unanswerable. "Never man spake like this man."

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, June 19, 1886.

Brilliant receptions at the White House, daily meetings of a large convention of Nurserymen, Seedsmen and Florists from all parts of the United States, a royal visitor from Brazil, and Congress talking about staying until the last of August. So far the heat of summer has failed to put a damper to either gayety or business at Washington.

The Horticultural Convention now in session here, consists of three hundred delegates. Its members have found the Capital decked in her vernal best, and they pronounce that best very good. This city has become the convention rendezvous of the United States, and most of the national assemblies will be held here in the future, that were formerly held in Boston.

The Princely tourist, who has been here during the week, seeing the sights and receiving attentions from Diplomats and other people of distinction, is a grand son of Dom Pedro. He is said to have more strains of royal blood in his veins than any other man living. He has the blood of the royal houses of Germany, France, England, Spain, Italy Denmark and Brazil.

The late premier of Australia, Hon. James Service, has also been studying Washington during the week: and some visiting engineers from France, who are making a tour of this country, have been doing the same. The latter gentlemen were particularly struck by the simplicity of this reception at the White House, and greatly pleased by the cordial manner in which the President met them.

"I never expected to speak to the Chief Executive of a great country like this in such an informal way," said one of the party. "He chatted with those of us who speak English for about ten minutes in a perfectly free manner, about the railroad interests of France and the United States."

Doubtless you have been surfeited of late with Presidential and White House social gossip, but still I must tell you something about how the President's bride bore her first public reception, and how much admiration she won. The test of her qualities was a trying one, and she emerged from it in a way to prove that she is quite equal to her position and worthy of comparison in dignity, stateliness and refinement of bearing with any of her predecessors. In personal attractions she surpasses all of them. She stood by the president's side, receiving the highest dignitaries of the land with an ease and grace that pleased everybody, and surprised those who saw her only a few months since, when she was fresh from school. Members of the diplomatic Corps, Senators, Judges of the Supreme Court, Representatives in Congress, officers of the army and navy, all rendered the same verdict upon her, "a lovely woman," "a beautiful woman," "she was perfection," and so little taller than the President. She wore her bridal dress of ivory satin, a train, low bodice, and corsage bouquet of white roses. Her husband's bridal gift, a diamond necklace, encircled her neck, long white silk mits were tied above her elbows, and an amber comb surmounted her dark hair. But by unanimous consent her chief ornament was her fresh, beautiful face. She seemed pleased with everything, and the pleasure was the sincere enjoyment of youth and freshness and simplicity. It was all new to her, and the cares of her position had as yet laid no burden upon her. She saw no fawning sycophancy in smiles, no sinister purposes in flattery, no hypocrisy in open admiration, and she got the full meed of enjoyment out of her surroundings.

It was thought that the royal seion, who attended the reception would detract from Mrs. Cleveland's triumph, but there was no division of honors. The blond haired South American Prince was left to his foreign guardians, the Brazilian Legation, while the throng paid homage to the President's wife. There was no attempt at precedent as at most official and card receptions, and the people came in to be presented just as they felt disposed. Some amusing incidents occurred, as, for instance, when a policeman, in citizen's attire, who did not know Col. Lamont, requested him to stand aside and let people pass from the Blue Room into the Green Parlor. "That's right," replied the private secretary, "there are no privileged characters here."

The beautiful topaz stone is again in favor.

THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS.

TECUMSEH, June 16.—The June session of the board of supervisors was called yesterday afternoon, County Clerk [illegible] and the following members were present: [illegible]

[illegible]

Appointed:

The morning was the chair announced the following standing committees: Ways and Means—Messrs. Baker, Hass, Munson, Rogers, Dolton, Jones, Mills, Ferguson, Parker. Judiciary—Dolton, Baker, Maxwell. County Sheriff and Constables—Munson, Tillotson, Lovejoy, Lawrence. Miscellaneous Accounts—Bay, Holridge, Bailey. Sheriff's Accounts—Finch, Fleming, Gillespie. County Poor and Insane Accounts—Shearson, Corbett, Gillespie. Treasurer's Accounts—Messrs. Tillotson, Dolton. Pilfers—Bailey, Crane, Parker, Lawrence. Apportionment and Assessment—Rogers, Pierce, Morse, James, Munson, Finch, Parker, Shearson. County Drains—Corbett, Maxwell, Dolton. Printing—Fleming, Rogers, Morse. The election of a county drain commissioner is made the special order of business for Friday at 9 a. m.

Two o'clock this afternoon was made a special order to listen to Gen. Humphrey on the heating apparatus at the county house.

The [illegible] rolls were referred to the committee on apportionment and assessment.

The assessment against the agricultural society, in the second ward, was referred to the judiciary committee.

The assessment rolls of Ridgeway were referred to the same committee.

Certificates and accounts were referred to the proper committees.

WEDNESDAY, June 16.—Yesterday afternoon Mr. Bay, from the committee on public buildings, made a report, which was accepted and adopted. It was chiefly in regard to the improvements about the court house and yard.

This morning some accounts were allowed, including the claim of Daniel Mace, which went in at $30.

[illegible] on the matter of heating apparatus at the court house was referred to the committee on public buildings.

The account of Fernando Thiers was taken from the table and referred to the committee on miscellaneous accounts.

The election of a member of the state board of equalization was made the special order for Friday at 9 a. m. There is a prospect that V. S. Wilcox or Geo. Croswell will be elected to this trust.

Last evening the report of the committee on apportionment and assessment was referred to be generalized on.

This morning the judiciary committee reported in regard to the assessment on the fair grounds, etc., that the board in its opinion could do nothing in the matter, and that the assessment would have to go in [illegible]

The matter of purchasing a new safe for the treasurer was referred to the committee on public buildings.

A petition from Blissfield was presented, asking that the village be made a place to receive certain tolls, and referred to the judiciary committee.

The land in question is some which was donated for a public park, to Blissfield, which it was known as the village of Lyons, and before it was incorporated and it consisted to hold property, and through various complications [illegible] title to the land has become vested in the county.

FRIDAY, June 18.—This morning a number of accounts were allowed.

D. D. Sandage, from the committee on revision of assessors and supervisors, reported that the committee had decided that the proposed [illegible] be left blank, that the town of Ridgeway be divided [illegible] and that Ira Morse be added.

The election of a representative to the state board of equalization was then taken up, and after considerable discussion, it was decided to run two delegates, one to be a member of the board, and the other to be from the outside. Three ballots were taken, resulting in the election of Hon. Mason, of Deerfield, and Hon. John K. Boies, of Hudson, the latter receiving 14 votes to 10 for F. M. Hunter.

The democrats on the board gave the votes for Mr. Hunter. It is due to that gentleman to state that his action in this part was unsolicited as it was unexpected. He is not responsible to the limited compliment intended him, but is certainly pleased that the choice of the board fell on another.

A communication from John Wilder and others, of Monroe county, protesting against drainage into Otto lake, was referred to the committee on drains.

SATURDAY, June 19.—This morning on resolution of Mr. Bay, the chair appointed Messrs. [illegible] and Baker as a committee to examine into the grievance of [illegible] which [illegible] followed including bills of Dr. Reynolds at $4, and Dr. Long at $20. The account of Deputy Sheriff Colgrove was tabled. The [illegible] committee reported [illegible] and adopted.

Mr. Crane, from the committee on public buildings, reported that a new sewer had been found necessary for the court house, and that the committee had ordered one. The same committee recommended that $450 be appropriated for the county house.

THE GRAY NUN.

There comes, each dying day to bless,
A little while before the night,
A gentle nun in convent dress
Of clinging robes all gray and white.

And smooths the lines of care away,
Her tender touch, with magic grace
Dispels the worries of the day.

Is this the mystic curtain
That hides from view the shadowy throng,
And gives me those for whom I sigh
That vanished friends for whom I long?

Of lovers that bloomed long years ago
The growth of a summer and away
Nestle many a whispered word of love
Not light and less such delight
Nor can of peace be love the shine,
As she who comes layer day and night,

The Morphine Habit in Paris.

One of the most sensational pictures in the salon is called "Morphine." It represents two half dressed, reclining female figures. One is about to inject some morphine with a syringe in her arm. The other has already done so, and is asleep under the influence of the drug. I asked a famous doctor whom I found looking at it if he thought many Parisians were addicted to the use of morphine in that way. "I have no doubt," he replied, "that there are at least as many persons confirmed in the habit." "And who are they?" "Many of the demi monde," he said, "and also the fashionable and effeminate young men of aristocratic families—the gommeaux or dudes. But the habit pervades all classes. Come with me and I will show you."

So we went to one of the great shops for which Paris is noted, and made our way to the department of toilet articles. There were big glass cases full of brushes, combs, cosmetics, and manicure implements, and also numerous small boxes stamped "For the Siesta." What were they? Morphine outfits. The doctor asked to see some. Each box contained a hypodermatic syringe, and a vial of morphine, and other appliance, with directions for use. There were some cheap sets—a paper box, a glass syringe with steel tips, and a bottle of the drug—only 50 cents. From this style they ran up to a gorgeous box inlaid with jewels, with a syringe made of solid gold, no bigger than a straw and a couple of inches long, the price of which set was $400. "Do you sell many of these sets, of any price?" I asked the girl in charge. "O, yes, we have sold more than 1,000 since Easter." "And who buys them?" "Everybody." Paris Letter.

Persia and Her Seven Climates.

Before I left the United States some people said to me that Persia was a very hot and unhealthy place. I pointed with triumph to a statement in Mr. Benjamin's (our last minister) article in The Century, just out then, to the effect that the climate was delightful, and stole upon your senses gradually, like the zephyr, laden with the fragrance of myriads of flowers—or words to that effect. Alas, I have been sadly disapused. There is a Persian proverb as old as the hills which hath it that "Iran haite ktun dared" (i. e. "Persia has seven climates") and, as most proverbs, it's true. Thus, while along the shores of the Caspian, hundreds and hundreds of miles in length, the climate is moist, fever-laden, oppressive in summer, up in the mountains in the Mazanderan district in the north it is quite raw.

In the central portion, up in the plateau 4,000 feet above sea level, from Teheran into Isphan and way beyond, the climate on the whole is mild and moderate, with the exception of the late summer and early fall, when dysentery, intermittent fever, and cholera prevail. In the south, in Faristân, Arabistan, and Laristan, and in a still higher degree along the Persian gulf, Basheer and Mohammerah included, the heat is extreme, and it is said that there are places there which come right after that other place that must not be mentioned to ears polite, in point of torrid comfort. In Bender Abbas, for instance, the inhabitants amuse themselves during the long heated term by lying still, in the airiest of custumes, in the cellar, while one servant pours continually water on them and another one acts as a mobile perpetuum in keeping the fan going.—Teheran Cor. Chicago Times.

Hospitality in a Mexican Hacienda.

When a troop of friends invade some lonesome hacienda, then great indeed is the rejoicing. Not only is the fatted calf slaughtered for the occasion, but frequently the finest bull the estate affords is sacrificed upon the alter of hospitality, in the way of a private bull fight for the delectation of any who may care to be thus diverted. The court yard in the center of the square of buildings is transformed into a temporary plaza de torros, or bull pen. Professional matadors are sent for, and word goes to all the adjacent hamlets that a free show—such as is dearest to the creole heart—is about to transpire.

At the appointed hour a crowd is collected, whose surprising numbers—considering the apparently empty country lying all around—incline one to believe that the mythological sowing of the dragon's teeth, from which an army sprang, has been repeated. With that graceful hospitality which is the direct heritage of this gentle race from their Moorish ancestors, all are welcome to come in and make merry with the lords of the land. A bull fight costs no more than a fashionable ball, although the best torro on the place is slain and the pay of the professional fighter is about the same that skilled musicians would receive for rendering dance music. Afterward the slaughtered animal serves as the "loaves and fishes" to feed the multitude, and nothing so stirs the blood and affords that excitement for which their stagnant lives are longing as the national Spanish-American sport.—Minnie B. Ward in Kansas City Journal.

Omission of the Word "Obey."

There has been much criticism of Dr. Sunderland's omission from the White House wedding service of the word "obey." The question has been taken up by all the clergymen locally, and it may become a national religious issue. Dr. Sunderland says he is ready to defend this omission against all comers. The doctor is always at his best in a controversy. He says that the form of marriage service adopted by him is the result of long experience and study. The word "obey" was not used in addressing either party. The word "cherish" was used in addressing the groom and "honor" in addressing the bride. "Honor," the doctor says, "includes the fulfilment of every possible duty. The word 'honor' is found in the decalogue. 'Honor thy father and thy mother.' The word 'obey' in Scripture is used only in referring to bond slaves and slavery." The doctor may preach a sermon on the subject before long.—Washington Letter.

THE BACCALAUREATE SERMON

[illegible] Scarcely any [illegible] literary [illegible] than this. That [illegible] seventh and another [illegible]. What great [illegible] and patriotic [illegible] is there. The record of it comes [illegible] generation and [illegible]. The generation that cometh as the recipient of blessings which the going [illegible] have toiled to secure. This it comes to pass that the present owes another debt of gratitude to the patient [illegible] of labors and attainments that have come to its hand and which are the legacy of past generations to the [illegible] at the passing one. It is [illegible] that [illegible] in our schools and colleges we are reaping the advantage of discoveries and attainments made in former times should be [illegible] the inheritors of the accumulated wealth and progress of former ages. And so the theme of my discourse to-night is the graduating class of the High School. "The debt of the present to the past" and the best way that this debt may be paid is by passing it on to posterity. A striking illustration of the benefits which may be [illegible] Stands which we give. Fifty years ago Michigan had just ceased to be a territory and been admitted to our Federal Union. Less than 70 years ago [illegible] was unknown. It was for Sir Norman Wolfe, the Canadian of the adventurous pioneer. Detroit was but a frontier trading post. Big Lake Superior and Lake Michigan were unexplored. Chicago was not even a village. Its site was occupied by a few Indian wigwams. Indians roamed around in their native savagery in the primeval forests. Here and there a gleaming axe could be seen, with a patch in the background of logs by the settlers and a [illegible] covered by the good wife's skillful fingers to hide its ruggedness, and lend a thought of the dear old home in the distant East. Of frame buildings as there were but few and [illegible] by their rarity. The first one of which the village could boast had just been taken, [illegible] with shame a lower place, having been [illegible] and [illegible] out of its original position by the [illegible] modern business that has risen at its side. In the territorial days of which we speak, the scythe mowed the meadows, the sickle [illegible] the wheat and the flail threshed out the grain. The art of the pioneer was a useful and self-denying one. For schools there were few except of the lowest grade. For churches there were but plain chapels, sheltering the congregations. The preachers in their zeal were men plain of dress and plain of speech, but not more so than were the disciples of our Lord. But for worship that doubtless was as sincere and spiritual as any we can find in the costlier churches of to-day. And what is Michigan now? What the change that has been wrought upon her in sixty years? She is a free and powerful State, having [illegible] inhabitants, her population having increased ten fold in 50 years and her wealth has increased in still more rapid ratio yet. The air is now full of the screech of the locomotive whistle and the puffing of the heavy freight train. There are here, there and everywhere, fertile and beautiful crops [illegible] and ripening in the sunshine. Instances have arisen of wrong done by within a State might almost be pardoned for being proud. A magnificent [illegible] system of public schools supports an elementary education for boys and girls, and the High School opens its doors to those who wish to travel farther on the road to knowledge. There are colleges, seminaries and universities, and we have a State University second to no similar institution of the kind in the advantages it affords to students seeking the highest teaching. As for Christian churches the various denominations are not only represented, and no one who wishes to worship God, but can find convenient to his home a place and a form of worship to his taste. And further, within the compass of fifty years an impressive experience has happened connecting itself closely with the history of Michigan. A war has taken place, a war of grander issues and greater battles that has cost more precious lives and been followed by a more welcome and a more blessed peace than any which the world has witnessed in long succession of ages. Society had never seen before Lady Macbeth contributed freely her means and of her citizens to the carrying on of this gigantic strife contributed them all on the Union side. She gave of her heart blood to help cement a broken Union, and she gave it not in vain. For the sin no more lies down on States discovered disorganizing and belligerent but on a land wherein reign liberty and union one and inseparable, now and forever. Progress like that which I have depicted could scarcely have taken place in any other age than the present or under any other form of government than that of these United States. My reason for drawing the contrast between the Michigan of 1836 and 1886 is to show what benefits the settler within her borders to-day lies over the settler of 60, or even of 30 years ago, and I commend the young friends in whose behalf we have this evening met, of how much they owe to those who have helped to change this lake surrounded State from what it was to what it is. Within the brief compass of half a century, laborers have toiled for them, martyrs have bled for them, scholars have thought and written for them, churches and institutions of learning have been founded for them. Persons whom they have never seen have been their unconscious benefactors. How much reason have we all, as we think of what 50 years of work and sacrifice have brought about, work and sacrifice [illegible] of us, little if any share to do know[illegible] [illegible] have labored and we have entered into their labors. For this is to acknowledge the simple truth and nothing more. But to reach the end of our inquiries we must go further back than to our 70 years. The harvest of Indian, as for harvests, the ground of which was original, the patriots of Indiana, as he sells to market by [illegible] of cotton of his [illegible] of great [illegible] of a wise [illegible] time [illegible] deep [illegible] which has produced them. He may never have thought or known that departures were required [illegible] for days for [illegible] and grow rich upon. But his ignorance affects not the truth. In the southern seas there are islands whose foundations were slowly built by myriads of little workers beneath the waves—islands that furnish a pleasant abode for many human beings—not one of whom is aware, perhaps, of his indebtedness for home and food to these little coral builders. In like manner we are none of us aware of how extensively we are indebted to the past.

The experience and the works of each successive generation has tended to [illegible] plane. Some legacy of some kind, each of the former centuries has left behind. Has this nineteenth century which [illegible] and richer? Only as we know how to use the legacy. "I am a debtor" said the great apostle to the Gentiles, "both to the Greeks and to the Barbarians, both to the wise and to the unwise." And he spoke the truth. Long trains of great events have come down to us from former and darker times, like the caravans richly laden that came out of the desert to Damascus. We are indebted to the great and gifted and fair as men of other days not only, but to the common people. To the great and prominent nations not only, but to the lesser and more unobtrusive ones.

But what now of the lessons which this theme of our indebtedness to the past is adapted to give us?

1st. Does it not bring home to us a lesson of humility? There is a good considerable amount of boasting, [illegible] with reference to the remarkable intelligence and discoveries and achievements of this present century, as compared with any that have preceded it. There has been a disposition on the part of some to claim that they are the men and that wisdom will die with them. The indebtedness of the present to the past has in all cases been duly appreciated and acknowledged. It has been well said that for this age to claim all the credit of its superiority over others, would be as if a child who had been placed on his father's shoulders should wave his arms aloft and call out to those around to look at him and see how much higher he was than his papa. It is because we are lifted on the shoulders of the past that we can see so far and do so much. But how do we know but that those in a coming century will consider themselves as much above us, as some who live now are inclined to boast that they are wiser of their poor benighted fathers and grand-fathers and ancestors in general? There remaineth yet very much land in the realm of knowledge to be possessed. It is better to be trying to make farther discoveries than to spend time in congratulating our selves over old ones, especially when the honor of making the old ones is only partially ours. It would take but little time to count up all the truths we are even yet certain about and that we feel we comprehend to perfection. The true scholar, like the true Christian is humble in his estimate of his own attainments. New ton's feeling is his—that of a child picking up pebbles of information on the beach, while a whole vast ocean of undiscovered truths lie before him. Learning and religion are both of them good things to have the more of the genuine article in both cases the better. But they are neither of them possessions to be boasted of or to be publicly displayed. A wise man is cautious about the positive assertions of ignorance and patient over contradiction. One of the best evidences of possessing knowledge is of possessing poise in the hour of trial. Do not think, young friends, because you have graduated honorably from an institution of higher grade that therefore your education is now complete. It will never be complete—certainly not in this life. You are still to count yours lives scholars and to be willing to learn of any one that can teach you. You are daily to be looking for items of useful information and for lessons of wisdom. Above all, see to it that you are pupils of Him who is the great Teacher, and that you are constantly learning of him who is the truth and who gives as one of the reasons for learning of Him that he is meek and lowly in heart. Until you get your knowledge through Him you may never know anything as you ought to know.

2d. To only one other lesson suggested by our theme will I direct your special attention, and that lesson is one of generous giving for the good of others. We are so linked together in this world that it is impossible for anyone not to be a recipient of benefits from others for which he does not pay. We cannot repay the men of the past for the good that has come to our lives through them. But the fact that we are recipients of good, imposes on us a responsibility to be dispensers of good. We are not merely to absorb, we are to give forth. "Freely ye have received, freely give." If those to whom we give cannot be those from whom we have received, then let it be some one else. But let us not refuse to do the good we can to any that we can. This is the only way we have of proving ourselves worthy of the good that we receive. That is a splendid summing up of the life of King David given by Paul in the synagogue at Antioch, of Pisidia. "David, after he had served his own generation, by the will of God fell on sleep and was laid unto his fathers." It is the duty of every man to serve his own generation and then he will serve the future generations as well. A man might be a very fine scholar, and yet doing nothing with his learning might be no better than the one who accumulates money, not to spend but to hoard. He would be only a literary miser. It is impossible for anyone to answer the end of his [illegible] than it heads not live for the good of others. However hard the struggle [illegible] son who resolves to be useful to his fellows, the pioneers, strong kind and having words with the sick of [illegible] [illegible] spring up in the eternal. A person can give a cup of water, the least of all, and yet [illegible] [illegible] is not against [illegible] [illegible] of his day. The bread cast upon the waters is [illegible] [illegible] to send a supper in [illegible] [illegible] never suffer youngsters to be neglected into mischievous making and [illegible] saying. Let your hearts be touched with the misery of your poor unfortunate fellow creatures, the victims of ignorance and of sin. Do not be ashamed to take them by the hand and try to lift them up. Whatever purpose you may lose sight of in your life, do not lose sight of the purpose to serve your own generation by the will of God according to the will of God.

A young Prince, Duke Albert of Saxony, recently graduated with distinguished honor from the medical [illegible] with zeal to his chosen profession, and what is better still, benevolently, he is giving his services gratuitously to the poor. He is [illegible] his practice to diseases of the eye and has become as an oculist [illegible] throughout Europe. In leaving the place where he had been giving his services to the needy, he was followed [illegible] many of the patients sang to the street and offering prayers in his behalf. The Kings of Italy, when the cholera was raging so fearfully among the poor people of his kingdom, and especially at Florence a year or two since, was invited by sportsmen to attend a race at Pisa. His reply was, "This is no time for making merry. At Florence they are dying. I go to Florence." And to Florence he hastened to cheer the sick and to [illegible] sufferers. These are royal examples in more senses than one. It is possible for you in the best of all senses to live for the life. Please be [illegible] you, more for profit, than for the sweet-toned call of charity be more powerful than the [illegible]. There is a society of which I was an active member in my youth and [illegible] a member yet, a society concerning which many pleasant reminiscences spring up as I call college days to mind, which had for its motto these Latin words, "Prodesse quam Conspici," "To be useful rather than to be seen." This motto had its influence on us, for it printed on the badges we pinned to our breasts on commencement and other days. And I am sure that any good, loyal Chrisophian who may have been led to adopt it as the motto of his life, need not be ashamed of his choice. Let the word useful come somehow into the motto of your lives.

And again let me urge you, in seeking guidance and strength for what lies before you to seek them of Christ. You start right in your course only as you start with Him as your leader. Without him you can do nothing—through His imparted strength you can do all things. His name holds not the high place it deserves in all circles. He is to some a stone of stumbling and a rock of offense. But they that follow him will not be led astray and they that trust him shall not be ashamed. Blessed are all they that are not offended in him. And with these words I close, bidding you God speed.

TEMPERANCE COLUMN.

Edited by a Committee of the W. C. T. U.

At a meeting of the W. C. T. U. of Tecumseh, held on date [illegible], a resolution was passed requesting a portion of each issue of the Herald for [illegible] was chosen as a committee to edit the same. In case the request should be granted. As our first [illegible] and record of the Flower Mission of Adrian last year and a [illegible] of the [illegible] of the Flower Mission.

The Flower Mission.

The organization of six ladies [illegible] Tecumseh W. C. T. U. to the floral mission at Adrian, gave us the following report: "We were very kindly received by the W. C. T. U. in their pretty and commodious hall, where, after assisting until 4 o'clock in making several hundred bouquets, the carriages formed into line and drove to the Poor House, where the ladies were received by the Superintendent and wife. The bouquets were placed in the two dining rooms. A quartette consisting of Miss Hphines, Mrs. Cole, Mrs. [illegible] and Miss Brooks of Adrian, sang "Throw the door wide open," followed by Scripture reading by Mrs. Gray of Tecumseh Union, and prayer by Mrs. J. M. Mitchell of Blissfield. Mrs. N. R. Merritt of the Tecumseh Union gave a short and very touching address which found its way to many hearts present. The quartette then sang "The will hide me," while the ladies distributed the bouquets, after which we proceeded to the hospital where the quartette sang for the sick.

At the Jail.

The quartette sang, the Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. Barker of Raisin Valley Union, prayer by Mrs. E. Case of Rollin Union, and a very beautiful address by Mrs. Crubles of Adrian. The inmates, nine in number, came forward and received the flowers very gratefully. We understand they are in for petty offenses and expect to be liberated soon.

At the Industrial School.

As we drove to the Industrial School the 281 girls were filing into the chapel, and their beautiful song of welcome brought tears to many eyes. No mother with young daughters could look unmoved upon such a scene, and we longed for the day when some of our abominable criminal laws shall be repealed and crimes against the innocent and helpless shall be punished as they deserve. Mrs. Sutton of Tecumseh Union, read the Scripture lesson, prayer was offered by Mrs. Spencer of Adrian, and the girls were addressed by Mrs. Dodge. We wish we had room to give her address in full, it was so beautiful, so sympathetic and touching, that we wished everybody could hear it. Mrs. Laura Haviland gave the girls some good motherly advice. The quartette sang "Choose the Right Way," and the flowers were distributed by six of the girls, and we knew from the tears and smiles that their young hearts were tender and grateful. We left feeling so thankful to our Heavenly Father for the whole souled generosity of a State which provides its unfortunates with the means for reformation and a chance to be useful honest citizens, and so grateful for our own happy homes, that the old doxology arose involuntarily to our lips and we hope that so beautiful a custom as the Flower Mission may never be abandoned.

Jane Meeting of the Rollin Union.

Rollin W. C. T. U. met at the home of Mrs. George Town, Friday, June 18th, at 2:30 o'clock. The goodly number present evinced an interest in the meeting. The President read the 27th Psalm, and we sang "What a Friend we have in Jesus." Prayer was offered by Mrs. Derbyshire and others. After the minutes of last meeting were read and approved, with slight correction, report was made that the Cor. Sec. had forwarded a message of greeting and receipt for dues, etc., to Mrs. Mary Bailey.

The matter of finance, so necessary in every organization, was discussed and the balance readily raised that had been used to defray expenses of delegate to State convention; expenses were $11.10. Of this $3.00 were contributed by Raisin Valley Union. Delegate then made a verbal report of her trip to Manistee, similar to the report given in the COURIER of last week. Some extracts of reports printed in the Manistee Sentinel, were read from scraps pasted on a Manistee shingle 15 inches wide. Said shingle served as table for the dinner at the convention. Each woman had the privilege, if she chose, of taking her lap table thus used, home with her, which many did. Additional report of the convention was deferred till another meeting. An appropriation of 75 cents was then made from funds obtained in our collections, to help defray the expense of the Flower Mission in cards, etc., used. Our President's report of her visit to Adrian in connection with the Flower Mission work, was also deferred until next meeting. An invitation from Elvira Beal for the next meeting to be held at her home was received with favor, and after singing a familiar hymn we adjourned to meet at the residence of Mrs. J. O. Beal, July 19th.

A NEWSPAPER RELIC.

Miss Inez Train of this village has in her possession the first number of the "Tecumseh Chief," which was issued May 19th, 1859, by G. & C. Spafford. It is a seven column folio, and published at home. A portion of the work was done at Jackson for two or three weeks, as the following item shows:

TO OUR PATRONS.

"At the request of our many friends we have named our new paper the Tecumseh Chief, and shall be able to present an appropriate head as soon as we receive the new office, about two weeks, during which time we hope our friends will accept the best we are able to give. Subscribers who have paid us for the HERALD, will be supplied with the Chief, unless we receive orders to the contrary. We have made arrangements with the Jackson printers to issue our paper, job work, etc., until we receive the new office. We are unable to do local advertising justice this week, and ask their indulgence for a few days."

The local page contains one column of local reading and four columns devoted to the By-Laws and Ordinances of the Village of Tecumseh.

"While at the ancient and beautifully located village of Tecumseh last week, several items of interest were noted. Mr. Wm. Hayden formerly of this city has purchased the "Globe Mills," which has seven run of stone and is one of the largest mills in the state. It was built during wild cat times, probably with Tecumseh wild cat money, and $180,000 is said to have been expended in its construction. The building is six stories high, has a firm stone foundation, and is constructed in the most durable and finished style regardless of cost. Mr. H. has thoroughly renovated the mill, adding all the latest improvements for flouring and can now manufacture three hundred barrels of flour per day. He is an experienced miller, an enterprising business man, and we congratulate the citizens of Tecumseh that the mills are now in so reliable hands."

There is an announcement that the Annual Fair of the Northern Lenawee Agricultural Society will be held at Tecumseh on the 21st and 22d days of September next, and the annual plowing match and sheep shearing festival will come off at Clinton on the 9th day of June next.

The fourth page contains a full list of the officers of the Northern Lenawee Agricultural Society, together with the constitution and the full premium list.

These were the officers for 1859:

President—Perley Bills.
Secretary—Edwin B. Wood.
Treasurer—B. J. Bidwell.
Directors—Jas. V. DePuy, M. A. Atch of Tecumseh; Joshua Taylor, Raisin; John Davenport, Franklin; Sylvanus Kinney, Cambridge; Sam'l Rappleye, Ridgeway; Wm. H. Osborn, Macon; Daniel Hixon, Bridgewater; Benj. VanCamp, Woodstock. Among the judges we notice the names of Simeon Davidson, Asa Sutton, T. H. Mosher, B. Chatterdon, Edwin Smith, D. D. Marshall, Isaac Adams, P. J. VanAvery, and many others, residents of Tecumseh or adjoining towns, who have since died or moved away.

Among the items on the local page we find an assessors notice signed by Alonzo Murry and Enoch Tindall, assessors.

Here are two business locals: "De Mott & Co., are now offering a choice selection of Drugs, Medicines, Groceries, Books, Paper, Etc., at low prices.

"George Heesen has removed his stock of clothing to the new brick store one door east of Andersons. Call and see the new store, goods and prices."

Here is a sensational item. A woman called at the residence of John McKinney in this village, on Friday last and left a child about five or six weeks old while she went to meet a sister, who was to arrive on the six o'clock train. We understand the sister did not arrive, and the woman concluded to ascertain her place of refuge and took the train for Jackson, since which time nothing has been heard from the woman or her sister.

Any one who may be curious to pursue the investigation of this paper further, is referred to the owner.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Remember the circus next Wednesday.

Most of the work that will be sold in this market has been delivered.

Tecumseh has a juvenile base ball club which is gaining quite a reputation.

All persons indebted to Geo. Heesen will please call and settle without delay. GEO. HEESEN.

We are glad to note that Dr. Hamilton has recovered from his recent illness, and is able to be about again.

John Heck's elegant new residence on Chicago street is nearly finished. He expects to eat his fourth of July dinner in the new house.

Mr. A. F. Van Valkenburgh, foreman of the Adrian Record, was in town last Monday and favored the HERALD with a friendly call.

Ernest Herning has put up a fountain in the front window of his meat market to enable him to keep fresh vegetables and garden truck in good condition.

We have a large number of "when I sell any wood I will pay up" subscribers now on the books. The wool season is about closing, gentlemen.—Remember the printer.

A number of our base ball admirers went to Detroit last Saturday to see the league game. They drove to Britton in time to catch the early special train, returning late in the evening.

Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Miller left for their home in Washington D. C. on Saturday morning last. They expected to remain over Sunday with friends in Buffalo and then proceed direct to Washington.

A pile of straw back of Deming's blacksmith shop caught fire from the careless use of fire crackers last Saturday afternoon, but was put out before it communicated to the other buildings in that vicinity.

New sidewalks were laid last week in front of McCowen's furniture store, and Herning's meat market. A decided improvement to the North side. One or two more are needed between the Opera House and Evans street.

The Lansing Republican issued a semi centennial edition last week, which was a credit to the publishers. It contained the program in full of the celebration and a large number of advertising cards. In typographical workmanship it could not well be excelled.

John R. Clarke has engaged for another season with the Canadian lecture bureau. He contemplates moving to Toronto early in July, so that he may be with his family more. We shall greatly regret his departure and hope that he may yet conclude to remain here.

We have received a calendar for the current year of the State Normal School. The institution was never in a more flourishing condition than at present. The total attendance, as registered in the present catalogue, including the Training School and Conservatory of Music, is about 900.

The Tecumseh W. C. T. U. passed a vote at their last meeting to solicit a column of each week's issue of the HERALD for temperance reading. We have concluded to accede to their request and will set apart one column of the HERALD each week for that purpose. The same, however, will be edited by a committee of the W. C. T. U., and this committee will be responsible for what it contains.

The baccalaureate sermon before the graduating class of the High School was delivered by Rev. Wm. H. Babbitt last Sunday evening. No evening services were held at the other churches and the Presbyterian church was filled with an attentive audience. The music was excellent, of course, and the discourse gave the utmost satisfaction to all. The sermon will be found in full on the 4th page.

S. W. Beakes, late of the Adrian Record, has purchased the Ann Arbor Argus, which is the oldest paper in Washtenaw county. The Record was a great success under his management and we have no doubt that he will give new life to the Argus, as he possesses first class newspaper ability. The Washtenaw County Democrats will now have a County organ worthy of their undivided and cordial support.

The Flint Daily News of last Monday contains this notice:

"Miss Louisa Kahler, formerly a teacher in the public schools of this city and later of Battle Creek and Tecumseh, died of consumption, at her home near New Haven, Mich., on June 4th. Miss Kahler was a graduate of the Normal School of this state, and was widely known as a teacher of more than ordinary ability, and a lady of estimable qualities. She had many friends in this city, who will learn with regret of the early close of a life so useful and full of inspiration to those with whom she was associated."

Miss Kahler filled the responsible position of preceptress in our High School for the term of five years, and relinquished her engagement here by reason of failing health. She was not only a teacher of superior merit, but, by her natural kindness of heart and loving disposition, she endeared herself to all who were so fortunate as to be favored with her friendship. Her old pupils and associates here will learn of her demise with the sincerest regret.

Cook & Palmer have purchased nearly 100,000 pounds of wool and H. W. Stevens a trifle over 47,000 pounds. The Detroit Evening Journal of Tuesday has this item:

"George Stacy, formerly of Tecumseh, has resigned his position on the Elgin News, and will return to his old home to take a clerkship in the new Democratic postoffice."

Go away from home to learn the news. George could scarcely afford to resign a position at a good salary to accept a place in the Tecumseh postoffice at about half the wages he is now receiving. Although his friends would be glad to see him in Tecumseh, there is no possibility of that event happening, for he has a "better thing" entirely. The report of his intention to return to Tecumseh has no foundation in fact whatever.

It is said that John R. Clark, the temperance lecturer, is to move his family to Canada some time in July. By the way, they say that Mr. Clark's writing is even more execrable than the late W. T. B. Schermerhorn's, of the Hudson Gazette. Mrs. Clark files his letters as fast as received, and when he gets home his first duty is to read them all to her. If he has been away two months it takes him seven days to get through the pile.—Tec. Cor. of Adrian Times.

Last Monday evening the first entertainment of the People's Popular Star Course, for the benefit of the organ fund of the M. E. church, was given by Miss Helen Potter. A fair sized audience was present. The opera house ought to have been full, as she was deserving of a crowded house. The entertainment was one of the best ever delivered at this place. She first recited some selections from the following authors: Adelaide Procter, Charles Dickens and J. T. Trowbridge. They were all given with a great deal of spirit, showing her great power of speech. While the lady was preparing for the next selection, Mr. George Knapp and Miss Jennie Root favored the audience with a very fine music. Lady MacBeth was then presented in costume, which piece was finely rendered. Her rendering of "That Boy" by Trowbridge, was especially enjoyed. She then personated Aunt Melissa, a typical Yankee spinster, explaining her views on boys and how to train them. Lastly came the impersonation of John B. Hough. This was simply immense. It was just as good as hearing Mr. Hough himself. We are happy to say that the church have not lost anything so far.

EVERYBODY KNOWS IT NOW!

'I Told You So.' 'That's Always the Way.' 'You Never Can Keep Anything to Yourself.' It's in Everyone's Mouth already. Why, Even the Little Boys and Girls at Home and in the Schools, [illegible] the Grand Gala Day, and the Wondrous Oriental Magnificence of the Gorgeous Free Show in the Public Streets, by John Robinson's Ten Big Gigantic Brand New Shows Combined Especially for the Year 1886.

John Robinson has always presented to the people of the [illegible] and [illegible] work [illegible] Ten New Monster Distinct and Separate Shows, all combined and united under one vast and huge corporation, from the like of which has never been heard of since the beginning of the world. The Grand, Marvelous, Magnificent Display which the old veteran showman of over half a century made upon the avenues of our city, yesterday fully convinced the thirty thousand and odd souls, who had gathered from the surrounding towns and villages for two hundred and fifty miles in extent, that John Robinson had sustained his world wide reputation of just what his bills, posters and newspaper advertisements said he would—be the Ten Big New Gigantic Shows, with a huge Three Ring Circus and a parade never equaled in splendor on earth before. The intense interest and eager curiosity which has been aroused in the minds of our citizens by the extensive advertisements placed before them through the medium of the public press will receive ample satisfaction and [illegible] from the unparalleled splendors of the gorgeous street pageant. The magnificent display of oriental grandeur, prancing steeds, gorgeously uniformed bands, and a thousand other thrilling and attractive features, was the rarest, richest and most beautiful ever seen in our city. Was ever seen such prodigal magnificence of gorgeous trappings, splendid appointments, glittering chariots, sweet music and all the [illegible] which go to make up a grand spectacular parade ever seen on our public streets as the Old John Robinson's Big Shows presented in their grand progression yesterday. We emphatically say, "There never was." There were sumptuous chariots, such one might imagine the conquering Cæsar occupying as he rode in triumphal procession through the streets of Rome, drawn by monstrous elephants, whose majestic bearing thrilled the spectators and recalled visions of Oriental feasts. Five grand military bands enlivened the scene with inspiring melodies; the renowned military orchestra leading the van in the classical car of the Muses, adorned with artistic statuary of Clio Melpomene, Terpsichore, Polyhymnia, Thalia, Urania, Euterpe, Erato, an Calliope, followed by the Bararon Cornet Band seated in the car of Oberon, drawn by beautiful snow white steeds, occupied a position near the center of the long cavalcade. There was over two miles of grand display, including cage after cage of wild beasts, all brilliant and new, in gorgeous adornings of the painters' art. The monster musical steam orpheades, rendering popular tunes along the route of march, attracted the greatest attention. This is the largest steam musical instrument in the world, and is in itself worth going a hundred miles to see and hear.

A band of genuine old plantation darkies, all of whom were formerly slaves, appeared in the carnival street display, seated in a fine [illegible] representation of a Southern mule team, which was filled with cotton bales. These dusky melodists sang familiar songs of slavery days and the quaint hymns of the negro camp meetings and merrymakings in the most charming and realistic manner. Taking it all in all, it is without any exception the most imposing, electrifying and gorgeous display ever seen on our streets, and bear in mind that it will exhibit at Tecumseh, June 30th.

A Maid of Mystery.

It was probably great good fortune that Ruth was not aware of the fact that Mary was a lady and Dick was a gentleman. Mary had never seen a lady, and Dick was the only gentleman she had ever met. Ruth was a girl who was worshiped as a goddess for her personal loveliness.

It was a great event for Ruth when her grandfather gave her holiday to take a trip to the city. It was also the occasion of her mysterious, but that she did not know them, and perhaps never believed. Ruth went to her old friends and claimed the black frock, with its silk sash, for a pretty dress which she had last and then two young women trudged through the woods and fields to Mary's home.

"Perhaps you'd rather will be vexed at me," ventured the timid girl. Ruth ever ceased to speak of the wonderful position of which Mary had told her so much.

"Shucks! Hell be more than pleased. I can tell you. He thinks it shall at times, and I'm going to talk to Tess's way he ought."

It seemed anything but a dull home to Ruth as they entered the little parlor, which with a cottage bedroom formed the living place of Dick and Mary Holmes. It was only a small room with tortoise shell walls, faded red curtains and worn carpet. The only attempts at artistic decoration were a few stuffed birds in a case and a wax water-lily under a piece of glass. Dick to Ruth, accustomed to a danger and toiler spirit, it looked positively luxurious. Besides, was it not adorned by the name of whom she had heard and dreamed so much that she half lost her fear in the presence of the girl who was her rival? He, too, had felt a little nervous at the prospect of meeting the girl who was the cause of his sister's trouble, but he was shy and irritable. But tonight he was in a heavenly frame of mind. He hoped Mary get the terrably, he felt the need of her for calling on Miss Stevens to exhibit his domestic qualities. He thought her a very young man, of course, and he was perfectly that she should never marry.

"Who could care about a girl with red hair and such a pale face?" she asked.

"Why, sis, Mr. D. s sweetheart her hair was a lovely color and that Ruth was his favorite, and as a result of hard of a young woman in the Bible who was [illegible] young lady Mary.

"She had two husbands," signed Miss Stevens. "I don't think any woman ought to have that."

And at the same time and look, which remark provoked a laugh from Miss Stevens, and the conviction, admirably expressed, that he was very wicked.

As better to Mary's great satisfaction the brother whom she adored, and the friend, for whom she felt such a warm affection, seemed to get on together wonderfully. When a quarter struck and Ruth expressed her intention of going home, as she didn't like to be out late, Dick told her she might stay a little longer, for another hour, as it wasn't likely he was going to allow a pretty young lady to go home by herself after dark. Then he mixed some hot whisky punch and insisted on each of the girls having a wine glassful. And when Ruth refused, declaring she never drank anything but water, he took hold of her round the waist and forced her to drink, after what with blushing, choking, and laughing, Ruth's little pale face was as red as a peony, and she altogether a different girl from the demure little person who stood behind the counter at the drapery establishment.

What an eventful evening that was! What a walk home when her escort insisted on going the longest way! How he pressed her hand beneath her cloak and—crowning audacity—with what cool self possession he kissed her flushed cheek as they stood together on the dim stoop. No wonder that Ruth felt as if the turning point in her life was reached. No man had ever kissed her before. No man had ever professed to find beauty in the colorless face and eyes and pale red hair.

This was only the first of many walks these two took together until Mary hoped and believed that her brother was going to give up the habits and follies of his youth and settle down into a respectable married man.

At this time Mary's feeling in regard to Dick were undergoing a change. She hardly knew, and certainly would not have owned it, that her belief in him had received many and severe shocks of late. Ever since she could remember, she, two years his senior, had assisted him in every way: with advice, which was appreciated too little, and with money, which was appreciated too much. But recently she had observed in him a callousness, a sort of brutality which filled her with surprise and apprehension. "He will be all right when he is married," she told herself, not daring to face the question whether Ruth was the sort of woman to gain influence over him, or whether she would be borne down by the force of his [illegible] and by her love for him.

Affairs went on in the same way for some months, when Dick returning home one evening threw himself on the horse-hair sofa and announced that he was "chucked again."

[illegible] up your [illegible] up. They've taken to [illegible] because I've been a [illegible]

"[illegible]

"I never [illegible] I were a garden. Dick, dear [illegible] don't go away from me! Why we've been together ever since we were little children."

"[illegible] date, and Mary thought [illegible] to tell Ruth that he was [illegible]

"She'll blame me. She'll think it's my fault," thought Mary.

And Ruth did blame her. "You shouldn't have spoken to him when he was in trouble," she said, with newly-developed fierceness. "What's the use of badgering a man at a time like that?"

Poor Mary! she had never bandied any one in her life, but she felt half grateful to Ruth for her angry partisanship of the man she herself was ceasing to believe in.

Dick had gone, taking his belongings, and he made no sign. Mary would have been glad to hear a word—even an angry word—from him. She would have been [illegible] the business head pressing [illegible] to pay. What she would not have been glad of was to know that he met Ruth every Saturday night, and walked with her, and bade her not tell Mary of his whereabouts because Mary was [illegible] against him, and that before [illegible] Ruth's hard earned money had been transferred from her pocket to his, the girl secretly keeping short herself for the week's food and drink and clothes. No wonder that the pale cheeks grew paler, the slight form wasted almost to emaciation. Mary's heart ached for her friend, and she guessed a little, though not all, the mischief at work.

"You're getting ready for a sick-bed," Mary said to her one day. "What's the matter? Are you fretting after Dick? Ah, Ruth, I maintain he's not worth it."

"I don't desire to talk about him," said Ruth, pettily, "but this I will say, I don't consider you're acting a sister's part by him. If you can't do anything to help, you might at least keep from abusing him."

"How do you know he wants help?" Mary asked, sharply. "Is he sponging upon you?"

Ruth turned away angrily, and from that time scarcely a word passed between the two. It was not Mary's fault. She felt very pitiful for the girl whose misfortune she seemed to have had a share in bringing about, but Ruth refused all overtures of friendship and sympathy. "[illegible]," Mary once of [illegible] after an [illegible] quitting her presence.

"What are you going to do?" Mary asked, fearful of she knew not what.

"I can't see that it matters to you. However, I don't mind telling you. I'm going to Mr. Cartright's," making a "shop" at some little distance.

"Isn't it? The pay is better, and I don't care for hard work and long hours if I get more money."

She felt the need of money sorely. She had discovered her lover's place of residence and now, besides the sums he extorted from her, she took him from time to time presents of dainty nourishing food. At first he had protested vigorously against her visiting him, a delicacy of feeling at which, in spite of her blind adoration for him, Ruth secretly wondered. But when it was arranged that she might only come on certain evenings and never by any chance at any other time, he grew quite anxious for her and her gifts, and chided her if she failed to appear.

"It was only that I didn't want you when my place was in disorder," explained the wily scoundrel. "It's poor enough, but I like to have it neat and tidy when a pretty young lady honors me with a call."

As time went on, anxiety and deprivation and love told more and more upon Ruth's fragile constitution. Meeting her by chance one day, Mary was shocked at the change in her.

"You're just killing yourself, Ruth," she said, angrily. "I don't think you'd be such a fool. Won't anything cure you of your folly?"

"Nothing I'll make me turn from a man because he's down in the world, if that's what you mean. It things had been as we should have been him and wife, more than now."

"Bah!" shot Mary, scornfully. "How do you know he doesn't get money from other women as he gets it from you? Well, there, I didn't mean to say so. Goodness knows you've [illegible] enough to bear. But doesn't it seem strange that he should be so keen against seeing me if it wasn't there was something he was afraid of my finding out? I swear to you, Ruth, I never said a harsh word to the boy in my life."

To prove how unjust was Mary's suspicions, Ruth tried very hard to persuade Dick to receive a visit from his sister. But he was obstinate. If she could spare him any money she might send it by Ruth, but he wouldn't have her prying and poking into his affairs. "And don't either set you against me, Ruth," he concluded, "or I don't know what I would become of me."

Ruth promised tearfully.

"It's hard, Mary," she said, "he don't seem to like you to know about his poverty. Not but what if you could spare him half a sovereign it 'ud be welcome."

Half sovereigns and shillings and six pences grew to be more and more welcome. Dick sometimes called on Ruth in business hours now, a proceeding which caused the other young ladies at Mr. Cartwright's to giggle very much and to chaff Miss Stevens about her beau.

"Can't I ever see you alone?" asked Dick, sentimentally. "I don't want all those girls smirking and watching."

Ruth named the dinner hour. "There's [illegible] one of us left in charge [illegible] and it might be me."

He did call once during the dinner hour, but Ruth was not visible.

"What can I do for you, sir?" asked the young lady who stood solitary behind the counter, young man, but what I should have objected to break the monotony of the day by a little flirtation with him on her own account.

"Well, if you're as "clever" as you're pretty," said Dick, "you might do the agreeable."

The young lady blushed and tossed her head, but not in the sarcastic "I'll show you" sense, but it is a fact that to certain [illegible] Dick's "[illegible]" [illegible] which the young lady attributed to the effect of her own charms.

"Well, what can I do for you, Mr. Impudence?" she said, with Miss Stevens, I suppose."

"Well, yes," said Dick, much to her chagrin, "and you do it cleverly. Don't hurry. I don't want the whole crew pouring down upon us."

She went to perform his bidding, and presently Ruth was with him, but it was not very clear he had anything, if importance to say. She noticed that he looked ill and nervous, and seemed in a desperate hurry to be off.

"I just wanted to tell you not to come to my diggings again just yet. I'm off for a few days south, Mary, to look for work. Don't come till you hear from me."

Then he was gone. But a minute afterward he put his head in again, looked stealthily around, and said hurriedly:

"Don't come again, particularly tonight."

And yet that very night Ruth hurried through the sleet and snow to Dick's lodgings. A dreadful thing had happened. The till at Mr. Cartright's had been found broken open. A detective was called and all the girls question, and in the course of the inquiries the fact of Dick's visit had transpired. When integrogated as to his whereabouts, Ruth protested again and again that she did not know—had never known where he lived. Therefore tonight she was stealing furtively, like a guilty thing, toward his home. Guilty or innocent, he must be warned—be saved. Guilty or innocent? She never asked herself which was more probable. She only knew that he must be told of his danger and put out of its reach.

Not by the direct route, but through various paths and byeways with the cunning born of love, the girl sped. Panting, less with haste than with the feverish excitement that consumed her, she stood once more in the well-known dark passage and groped her way up to his room. The sound of voices reached her from within.

"Oh, have the wretches found him?" she thought, meaning by the term the officers of justice.

But it was a woman's tones that first distinctly caught her ear; a woman's tones speaking her—Ruth's—name.

"There's no fear of the girl Stevens splitting, I suppose?"

"She don't know anything to split about."

"Well, she's a softie and no mistake. If it had had him me wouldn't I ha' found out why you wouldn't let me come here only on special trains."

"Well, you ain't gettin' spoons on her, are yer? Come, stow that, or you'll be left to shift for yourself pretty quick, I can tell yer."

"Don't be a fool, Meg. What's the girl to me, except that she gave me money. You're worth fifty of her."

Opposite the dreary, ill-conditioned house a man stood watching. Ruth, regaining the street, recognized him as the detective who had questioned her in Mr. Cartright's that afternoon.

"The man you seek is there," she said, going up to him and indicating Dick's room.

Then she turned and fled—fled, pursued by wild, burning thoughts, shame and indignation and remorse. Remorse, vague and dull at first, only a mere ghost of a feeling, half stifled by the mad desire for revenge. But by and by all the other passions quieted down, and this alone had possession of her: Mary's brother, the first, nay, the only man who had ever even played at love with her—the only one who had thought it worth while to lie to her, and to pretend that she was fair—the only one that had ever aroused in her the consciousness of all that her womanhood might be. And presently she would be wanted—wanted by the law, to give evidence against him whom she had betrayed; she would be wanted to stand in the witness box and denounce him as a thief. Ah me! She who had never been wanted by any one would become suddenly of importance in depriving a fellow creature of all that makes life dear.

On she fled, as if pursued by demons.

Her flight brought her to a secluded spot where she any Mary in days long past, and later she and Dick, had often strolled—a spot where the New river flows beneath willow trees, just a little tranquil bit, overlooked by prim quiet houses. Most of the river has been stowed away in pipes and buried out of sight, but this bit has been allowed to remain above ground to be gazed at by city weary eyes, to moisten the green banks and—ah! was it left to be a fast refuge for a mad, haunted creature, driven to desperation, one black, gusty night? Wanted by the police? Was she wanted by any one else, anywhere, even in heaven? Who shall say. Re Henry in Home Chimes.

Parents Beware of the Coachman.

Will men never learn by experience that trustworthy, because grey enough to keep a carriage is no proof that it is safe to send susceptible daughters out riding with no company but good-looking coachmen? Even inherited wealth and ranks does not always destroy what is sometimes discreetly called "natural sensibility." An experience in the family of one of England's Royal Georges proves this. There may be families so absorbed in the means of grace and hope of glory, to say anything of less praiseworthy occupation, that they can not spare any members to accompany a daughter who is "taking the air" but they might at least select coachmen who have reached the age of discretion, and are already married.—The Home.

CATARRH—A NEW TREATMENT.

A TERRIBLE LOSS.

What the Sudden Breaking Down of So Many Men and Women Mean.

A Prominent Physician's Views.

The writer has a most interesting interview with a prominent physician of Boston on a few days since, when some facts came to light which are rich reading and startling. The conversation had turned upon the sudden breaking down of men and women, and the cause which leads up to it, and the terrible evils which follow.

[illegible] labor, men are becoming dissipated, and wives and mothers less healthy and vigorous than formerly. The fearful evils of drunkenness are due more to the breaking down of the body, which demands stimulants, than to any other known cause. Men, women and children are growing weaker under some mysterious influence.

I have tried to ascertain what this influence may be, and I am satisfied that it is due to a lack of sustaining force for the nervous energy and exhaustion which business and society constantly demand. The nerves become shattered and do not regain their former tone. The albumen in the system becomes largely exhausted, and the first thing we know we hear of a sudden giving way, and the sickness or death of some one we had supposed was in perfect health. If some means could be found to avert these troubles it would be a great benefaction to the world.

It is a source of gratitude to be able to chronicle the fact that this source has been found, and that by a rare combination of peptonized beef, hops and malt and called Hop-tone, the vital forces of life can not only be sustained but restored. The importance of this discovery can not be too greatly emphasized, and the effect is increasing as it is having among the community is most gratifying to the extreme. [illegible] gy and ambition to the fate which [illegible] with the realization that it might be avoided.

For Hay Fever.

"Give Ely's Cream Balm a trial. This justly celebrated remedy for the cure of catarrh, hay fever, cold in the head, &c., can be obtained of any reputable druggist, and may be relied upon as a safe and pleasant remedy for the above complaints and will give immediate relief. It is not a liquid, snuff or powder. Has no offensive odor and can be used at any time with good results, as thousands can testify, among them some of the attaches of this office."—Spirit of the Times, May 26, 1886.

In silks as well as in fancy woolen goods, stripes in clusters are the prevailing style.

The manager of the Fort Wayne, Ind., Gazette, Mr. B. M. Holman, says he has often read of the wonderful cures effected by St. Jacobs Oil. Recently he sprained his ankle, and invested in a cane and a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil. The latter proved the better investment, as it entirely cured his ankle.

Pleated bodices in various styles are in high favor, and are particularly becoming to slender figures.

Women are everywhere using and recommending Parker's Tonic because they have learned from experience that it speedily overcomes despondency, indigestion, pain or weakness in the back or kidneys, and other troubles peculiar to the sex.

Col. Wm. Louis Sculley Secretary I. O. M. Grand Lodge, Maryland, found Red Star Cough Cure a perfect and certain remedy. Price, twenty-five cents a bottle.

"The hair [illegible] go into ecstasies over Parker's Hair Balsam," writes Mrs. H. Becker, druggist, of Findlay, Ohio. "They say it is the most elegant dressing they ever used. Stops falling hair, restores color, promotes growth."

Look out that your nurses do not drug your little ones with laudanum, paregoric or other soothing nostrums. Give them Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup, which innocent remedy is warranted not to contain opium.

HOME EDUCATION.

SUGGESTIONS ABOUT WHAT OUR CHILDREN SHOULD LEARN.

Home Training Superior to That Received While Wearing "Book-Harness."

Hints for Thoughtful Parents and Teachers.

My object is only incidentally to call attention to our stiffening system of education, and more particularly to call attention to the possibility of [illegible] and up some degree of [illegible] that children of well-to-do families should have far more home education—that "schooling" is largely unnecessary—that before 12, children of decently educated parents can do all their studying at home; that those who have educated parents should never, or rarely be sent to school, that the time is coming when almost all education will be home education. How about the grand democratic influence of sending children of all social grades to associate together? I have heard that argument to surfeit. If you wish to level society, get the children of the whole town together for dancing, for games, for social intercourse. But just that you will not do. You will not let your daughter attend a party with her seat mate or invite girls of her own grade to her home.

TRAINING FOR YOUNG BRAINS.

It is all stuff. The children will see the world quite as freely if educated at home. In this way only can individuality be thoroughly considered, and each one trained for what he is especially worth. Most boys are trained that their brains either can not grasp a subject, or if at all, with excessive toil. Those who known how much difference the training of a horse has to do with its power to draw loads will understand what I mean by training brains to do work easily. Two horses of equal strength can be so trained that the working ability of one shall be four times that of the other. One works easily and enjoys it while the other makes uphill work of all things. Why I say we should have more home training is because not otherwise is the child likely to be kept from wearing the present book-harness. What I want of my boys is: 1. To investigate, examine, inquire, underfoot, overhead, all about them. 2. To be absolutely at the bottom of what they investigate. 3. Never to become brain weary, or look on study as a task. 4. To become accustomed from the earliest years to use their brains discreetly. 5. I wish all their questions answered truthfully, and on no account a false answer given on the supposition that they can not grasp the truth as easily as a lie, and I wish their questions answered, not the questions put into their mouths.

One of the most repulsive features of a school taught on the "mental discipline" plan is the positive repulsion which the pupils manifest to facts. There is nothing to them so ludicrous as any attempt at anatomical or biological information. It is quite beneath them to inquire into the location of the heart and lungs, or to trouble themselves about the functions of the kidneys, liver, pancreas, or digestive fluids. My young lady who is quite up in French and algebra, recognizes botany as a possible accomplishment, but flouts the idea of being interested in the sections of a bullock's stomach, or the habits of a crawfish. Horrible things! The early education once placed in the way of a fashionable accomplishment, and the chances for a true scholarship are minified.

COLLEGIAN WHO'S EW NO THING.

Three collegians, just about to graduate, were in my study when I asked them a list of three questions they had especially pursued. [illegible] of them were good students. One had a loose knowledge of physics, [illegible] as an art, or is he prepared to any real knowledge of the world, of himself, or the causes of their [illegible] and [illegible] where equally neglected. Drawing and not book thought. These young gentlemen knew no thing, it would not be uncharitable to say they knew it blind.

[illegible] Dollars for the most part, the young people should be kept almost wholly away from books, and be taught to observe nature. HOLLOWAY HAPPENINGS.

Lloyd Kelley met with a slight accident the day last week. As he was passing through the barn yard on his way home from Holloway, a strong gust of wind tore a large barn door from its hinges and carrying it several rods and striking the old gentleman with a terrible force, knocking him down and bruising his arm in a fearful manner. It is a great wonder that he was not killed outright as it required four men to carry the door to its place again. The cane which he had in his hand at the time, was found under the door broken in two. Taken all in all it was a very fortunate escape.

W. J. Holdridge carries a pretty bad eye for a peace officer, but he says that it was caused by coming in contact with a heavy iron hook in some way connected with the hay-fork, which story we are inclined to believe for the following reasons. Firstly, we don't know why any one should want to hit him, for we had supposed, until lately, that he was a respectable law abiding citizen, and, secondly, we don't believe he would sit around and let any boy put a shanty over his eye.

Mac Sleeper had a little circus last Monday on his way to Tecumseh, just north of Geo. Holloway's. His mustangs went into convulsions as they do sometimes without a cause or provocation, and proceeded to kick themselves loose from the wagon. We understand that Mac took it very cool and did not so much as break the commandments.

Anton Speilman is very sick with not much prospects of recovery. On Monday the Priest from Adrian made him a visit.

A. L. Arner was home last week but returned to AnnArbor this week to get his sheep-skin. Say, Burt, here is our congratulations.

Al. Macham's sister came here with them from Toledo last week, and was taken sick next day with the German Measles. Al. expects to have them right in harvest.

There has been much hay damaged by the rains of late.

Miss Cynthia Monaghan closed a very successful term of school in Dist. No. 1, last Friday. The Dist. Board appreciate her services and have engaged her for the fall term. She has excellent faculties of getting along with little folks. Should think some of the young men would take that into consideration.

The Town Board met on Monday last to approve or disapprove of Liquor bonds. There being some dissatisfaction to the amount the bonds men justified to before, they justified to the contrary and fixed the bond at the time. They were approved.

Mr. H. Reese and family have returned from Greenville and other points where they have been visiting relatives and friends, and Jim had his eye on a business location at the same time. With what success he has it informed us.

Mr. John B. Darling, who was arrested on the 22d. inst., for an assault with an attempts to commit rape on Miss Florinda Furgerson, had his examination before Justice Queal on Monday last and was bound over to the Circuit Court—bail $500, in default of which he was sent to jail. L. H. Salsbury represented the people and H. Smith, of Watts & Smith, the defendant.

OBITUARY.

Elizabeth Lockwood Thackary passed through life's last door on Friday night June 18th, at ten o'clock and thirty minutes, in the midst of her family and friends, without a murmur she calmly fell asleep in death. Sister Thackary's sickness, though comparatively painless, and somewhat unknown to the community was a continued wasting of blood and strength, which medicine could not arrest. Believing as she from time to time informed her companion and friends, that it was her last sickness, yet would speak of it and of her departure, like one who was going to journey to a pleasant country, and conversed with her own family, as regarded their religious welfare, that they should meet her in Heaven. On one occasion saying to her pastor, "it has been my wish that I might outlive him, her husband, but for this reason, that I know there is no one who can do for him as I can; now I give it all up, and leave him in the hands of God." On Thursday, as she died on Friday night, while her pastor called, when seated near the bed, as it was to be seen from the wasted and weakened condition that this friend was then in, that death would soon seize upon all that was mortal, yet, waiting with patient calmness, replied, "I am sorry for Charlotte, she has so much to do; and she is so kind in waiting on me, that I can't move but she is right to me, and saying "mother what now," always ready to do for me. To this mother her only child, and son Joseph Thackery was affectionately near and always remembered. So was Mother by the Son, though now parted but for a time, by the narrow river of death, yet, father, mother, son and others hear, if they will, they can over the other side of that river, meet in that one grand and immortal reunion. William and Elizabeth Thackary became members of the Ridgeway Christian Church a number of years ago, where the chapel stands within a few rods of their own farm home. The funeral services of the deceased were conducted by the pastor on Sunday, June 20th, at the usual hour for morning services, assisted by Rev. George Price of Tecumseh, who was a former pastor of said church continuously for nine years. Text, Psalm XXIII, 4th. "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me." There was a large and overflowing congregation present, so respectfully sympathizing with the bereaved friends. Elizabeth Lockwood Thackary was born in Yorkshire, England, April 19, 1817 ther age at death, was within a few hours of 69 years and two months. Her parents were William and Mary Lockwood, the father dying at 83 and the mother died at 98. Both lived and died in England. There were three children in this family, one son and two daughters, Elizabeth being the youngest, who all are now dead. The subject of this notice became by marriage the wife of William Thackary May 14th, 1836, only lacking eleven months of 50 years that they had lived as husband and wife. Forty one years ago this present month they left England and came to America and settled in Lenawee Co., Mich., and after some little time had passed with them in this new country, as a common occurrence, they became homesick and anxious to return to the old home in the mother country, but while three years there again, as scenes and surroundings had changed in the home country, and being somewhat charmed by the new country, which in its fertility is indeed not to be wondered at, they returned again to Lenawee county, Michigan, thus making three trips across the sea through the preserving care of Almighty God. William and Elizabeth Thackary have been permitted to help and encourage each other in bearing life's burdens as husband and wife. And, our sister has left one son and his wife, two grandaughters, each married, and a son with the youngest and a daughter with the eldest, leaving two great grandchildren. Thus another life of an honest and prudent wife, a loving mother and a good neighbor is closed.

June 23, '86. JAS. WRIGHT.

Card of Thanks.

[illegible] FOR THE HIGH WAY.

John 9. 1-41. Golden Text, John 9. 25. Time, [illegible] A. D. 29. Place, Jerusalem. Tiberius Cæsar, Emperor of Rome. Herod Antipas, in Galilee. Pontius Pilate, [illegible]

Jesus is still in Jerusalem. Passing by one of the Temple gates he saw a blind man begging. Such a spectacle was not uncommon in that great city, but it seems that Jesus took particular notice of this man, who, as we are told, had been "blind from his birth." The very fact that Jesus noticed him was sufficient to make him an object of interest to His disciples, who at once asked Jesus as to the cause of the man's blindness. The Jews held that men suffered punishment in this world for their evil deeds, and every disease was supposed to be the punishment for a sin. Children who were born deformed were said to suffer on account of their parent's sin, or for sins committed by themselves before birth. While they believed in the latter idea, it is not probable that there was any widespread belief in the doctrine of transmigration of souls. Here was a man who was born blind, and hence they asked Christ at whose door lay the sin in this case.

Jesus was continually teaching new truths, as well as giving new applications to old truths. He constantly taught the people those higher and grander truths which belong to His new kingdom which He had come to establish on earth.

In this case He told them neither the man nor his parent sinned, but it offered an excellent opportunity for an exhibition of the goodness and mercy of God. Jesus announces that He must do His work quickly, for "the night cometh when no man can work."

It was a peculiar idea with the Jews that the saliva of one who was fasting was good for weak eyes, and that clay relieved ocular diseases.

We do not know whether these ideas came to the mind of Christ at this time, but He stooped down and mixing saliva with dust, touched the eyes of the blind man, and then sent him to the pool of Siloam to wash it off.

Whenever Christ voluntarily relieved suffering, He gave the sufferer something to do, by which to evidence his or her faith. When sufferers come and implored aid, their coming was accepted as such evidence.

The man was cured, and the news spread throughout the city. It reached the chief priests and rulers, and he was quickly brought before one of the synagogue councils. Here an exciting scene was enacted, in which different factions hotly discussed the situation. They questioned the man, but getting no satisfaction, sent for his parents. Fearing excommunication, they declined to testify, except as to his being born blind, and that he was their son. But the man himself stoutly defended his Savior and boldly maintained His divinity. At length the council angrily excommunicated him, and he was cast out from the synagogue.

LESSON THOUGHTS.

1. Jesus opens the eyes of the spiritually blind.
2. If you are in moral darkness, have faith in Christ.
3. Be true to him who hath saved you.
4. Jesus is the light of the world.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[illegible]

Washington, June [illegible]

The notable event of the week in Congress, was the warm tariff fight in the House of Representatives, during which the Democratic leaders, Morrison and Randall, locked horns over the party's tariff pledge. The battle unexpectedly sprung from a proposition from the great "revenue reformer to pay pensions" with a tax on incomes. Several dozen Congressmen took part in the engagement and pungent personalities passed on all sides. The galleries filled up rapidly as the discussion proceeded, and many Senators left the monotonous business of their Chamber to be witnesses of the fray.

Mr. Morrison's resolution providing for an income tax for the payment of all bills for pensions took the legislators completely by surprise. There was death like stillness while he was reading it save the whispers from a small coterie of Republicans who gathered hurriedly around the seats of their leaders, Reed and Hiscock. The consultation was quick and decisive.

When Mr. Morrison had concluded, Mr. Reed arose and characterized the proposition as an invidious distinction against pension legislation. Mr. Hiscock said it was more than this; it was an attempt to evade the responsibility of the defeat of pension legislation by a direct vote. Mr. Cannon of Ill. in a fit of sarcasm, gave notice that he would move to attach a provision raising revenue to meet the expenditures of river and harbor bills, and bills for the erection of public buildings.

Up to this time the Republicans had had everything their own way. Mr. Randall now came to the defense of Mr. Morrison. He said that the remarks of the latter gentleman were so clear and comprehensive that they left little for others to say. He conceded to the Republicans a full measure of patriotism, but he claimed for his own side a like spirit. If Congress granted pensions, it ought to provide the money to pay them. But so far as he knew, there was no gentleman on the floor who was ready to do entire justice to the soldier. Some might differ as to the method or the extent to which Congress should go.

More Democratic and more Republican arguments followed, Messrs. McKinley, of Ohio, and Hiscock being the next Republican champions. The latter in a triumphant tone made some assertions about the broken pledges of the party in power, and sat down amid the applause of the Republican side.

The house had now become thoroughly warmed up on the pension issue when Mr. Reed switched it off on the tariff track. He began by taunting the Democratic party with having been unable to get its tariff bill even considered, and Gen. Bragg, of Wis., was the Democratic Representative who, although he saw a collision ahead, did not hesitate to follow. He is no respector of persons and when he smiles at all, strikes with a vengeance. "I am delighted," he said, at Mr. Reed's reference to the failure of this House to consent to the consideration of revenue bills. It shows what sort of contempt the Republicans of the House feel for those who have been recreant to their faith and their pledges. As he finished this sentence with vindictive earnestness the Hall fairly rang with applause. Gen. Bragg paced the aisle in a dramatic way, pointing to Mr. Randall the time he was arraigning him for voting as he did upon the tariff bill a week ago.

Mr. Randall sat quietly in his chair, never taking his eyes from Bragg until the latter's ten minutes expired. Then he was upon his feet and the Republicans went rushing to the Democratic side, while the Democrats stood up. The faintest whisper was audible when the distinguished Pennsylvanian, with clutched hands raised aloft, stepped quickly down the passageway and turning towards Bragg said, "Neither the gentleman from Wis., nor any one else dare charge me with deserting my party." He continued at some length in reply to Gen. Bragg for whom he said he had a contempt and supposed it was mutual.

But the scenic climax was reached when finally the noted protectionist turned his attention to the famous free trader. The two gesticulating gentlemen faced each other at arms-length distance. "Did the Chicago Convention call for free wool?" Mr. Randall asked. "It did," Mr. Morrison replied firmly, "at least three fourths of it did." "Would Mr. Cleveland have been elected?" Mr. Randall asked, "if the Chicago Convention had declared for free raw materials?" "He would have gotten more votes than he did" replied Mr. Morrison warmly, and the Democrats applauded.

[illegible] the political stories when it says the American people will never elect to the Presidency of this great country a man who catches frogs with a gig, never to mention.

[illegible] very pleasantly for President is how the gubernatorial vetoing goes on. The idea of his veto having anything to do with his political aspirations appears to be very far from his thoughts. He said in thirty veto messages in a short fortnight one day last week.

The World Free Press very tersely states the proposition thus:

"Taxes, ten dollars; tariff reduction, nothing; pensions, not one cent; tobacco, no reduction; a surplus, if there is any, is worthy of a Pennsylvania Republican Democrat like Randall. If surpluses are to be taken from actual taxation, let them be taken from the common necessities of life and have to pay for it."

Intelligent soldiers will find no fault with the President's action in vetoing objectionable pension bills. Already during this congress three hundred bills have passed giving pensions to parties, who could not prove in their cases before the proper national officers. The government should be just and liberal, but gross injustice is done to our large body of faithful soldiers who are entitled to pensions and are interested, the same as all others, in preventing raids upon the treasury to pay illegal and improper claims. The very ability of the government to pay honest pensions may depend upon its care in guarding the door against dishonest ones.

Mr. Wallace, of Louisiana, a new member, distinguished himself the other day by outflanking the method in which private pension bills have been rushed through the House. He moved in the House on Friday, and which private pension bills were taken, and passed through with only thirty-two members present. Good! Now this he would protest against, but he will have to in future, and in fact prevent further perpetration by calling the roll upon such occasions. Congressman Wallace is a distinguished Mr. Wallace, and he is a distinguished one. The people will have to pay for it.

[illegible] political stories when it says the American people will never elect to the Presidency of this great country a man who catches frogs with a gig, never to mention.

[illegible] very pleasantly for President is how the gubernatorial vetoing goes on. The idea of his veto having anything to do with his political aspirations appears to be very far from his thoughts. He said in thirty veto messages in a short fortnight one day last week.

The World Free Press very tersely states the proposition thus:

"Taxes, ten dollars; tariff reduction, nothing; pensions, not one cent; tobacco, no reduction; a surplus, if there is any, is worthy of a Pennsylvania Republican Democrat like Randall. If surpluses are to be taken from actual taxation, let them be taken from the common necessities of life and have to pay for it."

Intelligent soldiers will find no fault with the President's action in vetoing objectionable pension bills. Already during this congress three hundred bills have passed giving pensions to parties, who could not prove in their cases before the proper national officers. The government should be just and liberal, but gross injustice is done to our large body of faithful soldiers who are entitled to pensions and are interested, the same as all others, in preventing raids upon the treasury to pay illegal and improper claims. The very ability of the government to pay honest pensions may depend upon its care in guarding the door against dishonest ones.

Mr. Wallace, of Louisiana, a new member, distinguished himself the other day by outflanking the method in which private pension bills have been rushed through the House. He moved in the House on Friday, and which private pension bills were taken, and passed through with only thirty-two members present. Good! Now this he would protest against, but he will have to in future, and in fact prevent further perpetration by calling the roll upon such occasions. Congressman Wallace is a distinguished Mr. Wallace, and he is a distinguished one. The people will have to pay for it.

A MASTER PRINTER ON COOPERATION

The July CENTURY contains a number of articles and [illegible] on the question. From a brief paper on "Cooperation," by Theo. L. DeVinne, the well known printer, we quote as follows:

[illegible] the success of manufacturing cooperations of workmen is due in large measure to a knowledge of the business, and the capacity of the average workman. We [illegible] that [illegible] only about two hours a week. The [illegible] Major Wadsworth, of the Marine Corps, who is in charge of [illegible] says that one fifth of all the boys examined are rejected on account of heart disease. His first question to a [illegible] is, "Do you smoke?" The almost invariable response is, "No sir." But the tell-tale discoloration of the fingers frequently shows the truth. The surgeons say that cigarette smoking by boys produces heart disease, and that in forty nine cases out of one hundred the rejection of would-be apprentices on account of this defect comes from the excessive use of the milder form of the weed. This is a remarkable statement, but coming as it does from so high an authority, it cannot be doubted. In some of our down town stores and offices is posted this notice: "Do not smoke cigarettes here." The notice is printed, a fact which of itself shows that a considerable number of these signs is required. One may smoke cigars in such places, or even a pipe, but cigarettes are prohibited. To one who dislikes tobacco and the smell of it in any form, all smoke may seem alike distasteful, but there is about cigarette smoke a sort of insinuating, sickishly sweet sort of an odor that is peculiarly offensive. This may be due to the opium with which so many of the made cigarettes are flavored; but whatever the cause, it is sufficient that the cigarettes are not all tobacco, but contain tobacco and paper. The consumption of cigarettes is almost entirely by boys and men under twenty-five, and that is one of the greatest evils of them. It is so easy to learn to smoke that scores contract the habit who never would undertake but once to smoke a cigar. Boys have no business to smoke. The physiological effect of tobacco is to deter the change of tissue which is necessary to growth; and if a boy begins young enough to smoke, he is pretty sure to stunt himself. Mail and Express.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

What, might legislators to do? I answer: Place the article on the contraband list, and make the traffic in it penal as being adverse to the best interests of men. Are not the evils arising from the traffic as dangerous and destructive to the community as those that arise from the traffic in lottery tickets? Nay, are they not much more so? Senator Mark Doolittle, of Massachusetts.

When the state writes "criminal" over the doorway of the most elegant drinking saloons, as well as over the lowest grog shops, when it places at the bar of justice the tempter by the side of his victim, and when it stamps every package of liquor as a dangerous beverage, meriting destruction as a public nuisance, it will have done much to warn the young and unwary, and to turn their feet aside from the downward path. Judge Putnam.

In England there are [illegible] than fourteen hundred parishes where the traffic is forbidden, and where it does not exist; it has been for many years expelled from two large districts in London, two sections of Liverpool, one large district each in Birmingham and Manchester. It was entirely driven out from the great manufacturing town of Saltaire, in Yorkshire, more than thirty years ago, and from the large manufacturing town of Bessbrook, in Ireland, and from a district of country, Tyrone, containing sixty-two square miles, more than thirty years ago.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., June [illegible]

W. S. CORNMAN, Tecumseh, Mich.:

Dear Sir—I am glad to inform you that the Star Mountain Mining Co. has purchased in Detroit the heaviest pieces of machinery for their concentrating works and mill, also at a more favorable price than they were able to secure at any other point. This machine is the Ore and Rock Crusher, of capacity of 35 tons per day and weighs about 9000 lbs. This machine will be here for a few days in Detroit for the arrival of the turbine water wheel, which is coming from Worcester, Massachusetts, and will then be shipped with other items required, by car load directly to the mines. Mr. Bennett received today a letter from the Superintendent who states that everything is going on well at the mines. He is getting the building materials and building under way as fast as possible. Mr. Bennett also received samples of ore from the mines, the finest I have seen, and a certificate of test of same from B. M. Newcomb, a leading assayer of Brooklyn, [illegible] it shows value of over $400 per ton. We all rejoice at our success thus far, which is better than anticipated. Yours Truly,

S. G. SHIFE.

P. S. Since receiving the above I received a letter from Secretary Bennett saying he received test from Robert Newman, leading assayer of Newyork, [illegible] smelting ore [illegible] value [illegible] value [illegible] making a total of $[illegible] per ton.

HULL'S BIG HUMBUG.

The Originator of the Petrified Swindle Describes His Operations—Making Money by Lampooning and Still Further Selling Out Opportunely.

George Hull, now a resident of West Syracuse, was in town on the great day the other day, and to a reporter gave the story of that humbug as follows:

"In 1866 I was living in Binghamton, and was in a saloon. I noticed a man had the large pocket, which seemed to be in the shape of a man. I got interested in the fellow's form, and I noticed upon the veins in the arms of a human being. A grand scheme struck me, or I struck it. I selected the most solid piece to be found, and shipped it to Chicago. After some time I got hold of him. He was a splendid designer and carver. I saw some of his designs in marble. I told him my scheme was to get out of the block of gypsum the petrified remains of a tremendous giant.

"The fellow 'caught on' in a moment, and could see in it the grandest scheme in the world. Both of us studied over the prospect for some time. The artist drew all sorts of plans, took measurements, and the like. By and by we got the idea to a T. When the arms and hands were marked out the veins showed up in fine style; you never saw anything more complete in your life. They were also visible in the temples and forehead. It cost me a heap, though, to keep the artist at his work. He had my secret, and handled me as he pleased. Sometimes he'd get on a spree for days or weeks. Several months passed before the concern was finished. It was a grand piece of work. The artist put on it an ancient appearance—there was an antiquity about it that was really marvelous. I boxed it and shipped it eastward as a block of marble. Its weight was 2,993 pounds. I took charge of the 'great wonder.'

BURYING THE "GIANT."

"At first I did not know exactly what I would do to bring it before the people. When I reached New York state I seized upon a plan of burying the 'giant' in a secluded spot—a romantic nook by a mountain side. I finally selected Cardiff, a village on the Onondaga creek, Onondaga county, twelve or fifteen miles south of Syracuse. I confided my secret to a long farmer. He appeared to be all right in the matter. I gave him money and promised him more. We dug a grave by the river, and as luck would have it—for petrifaction purposes—at the depth of about six feet we struck pure, moving water. The 'giant' was inclosed in a rough case and deposited in the grave. No one but the farmer, his wife and myself knew of this transaction. The agreement was made between us that in one year the farmer should accidentally find the 'giant.' Word would reach me. I would make a great ado about it and take the people to the spot—taking care to lose my way several times before reaching said spot.

"The agreement worked all right. News of the finding of petrified remains of a human being near Cardiff was spread over the neighborhood like wildfire, and in a day or two newspaper men were there, and then the whole world knew of it. I purchased the petrified remains and proceeded forthwith to erect a tent over the grave, the remains staying undisturbed. Hundred and then thousands visited the place. I charged a fee, of course, to get inside the tent, just to pay expenses. In a few days the crowds could not be accommodated. In one week, soon after the 'discovery,' I took in $2,200. The rush kept increasing. The most scientific men of the country were present. They made critical examinations of the 'giant' as it lay in its resting place. I remember one old gentleman, a noted geologist, telling the assemblage in all sincerity how this giant, so many hundred years before, had evidently strode over the Onondaga mountains and rested in the valleys."

LEAKING OUT OF THE SECRET.

"After a few months I began to mistrust that there had been a 'leak' somewhere, and I questioned the old farmer about it. He appeared to be a little afraid that his 'old woman had let the cat out of the bag!' He said she could never keep her mouth still. So I began to think I had better sell out if an opportunity offered. Soon some men from New York City were anxious to take a share in the 'giant.' I sold a third interest to them for $30,000 cash. Soon after this I sold my remaining interest for a good sum and went out of the business."

Mr. Hull took a hearty laugh and added: "When I had no more to do with the concern, the old lady in question told the whole secret, just as I had told the old man. The fellows who run the show had to pull up and travel with the 'giant.' I saw it under canvas in many places. They did very well out of it. You saw it out this way, didn't you?"

Mr. Hull was informed that the "Cardiff Giant" was exhibited in Madison, but the people here little thought that it was the production of a man who had only a few years before been transacting business in this city.

"Well," said Mr. Hull, "that's the history of the 'Cardiff Giant' as near as I can remember."

Mr. Hull is a man of intelligence, a good story teller, full of fun, and is of years of age, but he does not appear to be over 55. He is a native of the state of Connecticut. He admitted that the affair was a regular "Yankee trick," like some of Barnum's.—Madison Wis.) Letter.

Independence in One's Own Home.

In this life we have to pay very much for our independence, to be allowed a separate home, whose doors we can close upon the world, to have a little piece of ground which we can till, to indulge the luxury of private thinking and of candid speaking. He who sells out these inestimable rights at the dawn of life is like a man who disfigures his hand with India ink while he is yet a boy, and after he becomes a person of some influence there stands forever the evidence of his low tastes when he was a lad.—George Alfred Townsend.

Quantity and Quality of Maple Sap.

The location of a maple tree has much to do with the increase or decrease not only in quantity but in the quality of its sap. Trees standing on lowland, moist, and having a black, mucky and rich soil, will run a large amount of watery sap, having less than 2 per cent. of sugar, and that of dark quality. On the other hand, trees standing on high, dry, and ledgy ground will yield very sweet sap, having 3 or 4 per cent. of sugar in it, and will make a very white product.—Demorest's Monthly.

HOW TO DETECT COUNTERFEITS

Description of a Peculiar Bank-Note Paper—Dangerous Imitation Greenbacks.

The United States treasury department has issued a circular addressed to bankers and others, which is devoted to a stronger protection against counterfeits than that used by the Bank of England, which has recently been dangerously counterfeited in Germany and elsewhere.

As the first step of exposure, which were not printed on fine paper, were most dangerous, and have been quite extensively circulated, bankers receiving them will do well to cancel them or return them in unfit condition.

All genuine greenbacks, gold and silver certificates, and large and small national bank notes are printed on the government fiber paper, the first kind with the fiber distributed in short pieces, the last with a blue fiber, detected by pricking it with a pin, the other with the fiber in two parallel threads, red and blue silk, running lengthwise through the note.

The public are cautioned not to draw these threads out of the paper.

If in doubt about the genuineness of any bank note in the report, refuse it unless printed on government fiber paper. All national bank notes not in this report are genuine, whether printed on government paper or not.

The counterfeit $10 and $20 silver certificates are not on government paper. Some of the counterfeit $5, $10 and $20 greenbacks (series of 1880) and $50 and $500 (series of 1880) are an imitation distributed fiber paper. Very dangerous. These are all the counterfeits on the new greenbacks worth noticing.

Better refuse all twenties, fifties and one hundreds on the banks in this report unless printed on the government paper.

All genuine bank notes having brown back and seal, have both kinds of the fiber paper combined; while the counterfeit $10, on the Third National bank of Cincinnati, O., and the photographic counterfeit $5, on the First National bank of Milwaukee, Wis., have no fiber. These two are the only counterfeits on the brownbacks.

Better refuse all pieced notes. All United States currency having a brown seal has the parallel threads or cables. All United States currency printed since 1869 is on government fiber paper.

There are in circulation a great many very dangerous counterfeit $10, greenbacks, dated 1875. All the genuine of that date are on distributed fiber paper.—Detroit Free Press.

Who Is It That Settles Fashions?

There is one thing which it is difficult to comprehend. Who settles the fashions? Who invents them? Upon whose ipse dixit are they established so firmly that everybody who is anybody must bow down to them? You never hear of a convention of hatters to deliberate upon the spring style of hats, whether it shall be of this form or that. Suddenly, as if by miracle, it appears in the shops, and everybody puts it on—that is, all who care for the good opinion of their fellow creatures. The old hat may or may not be worn out, but it is sternly deposed, whatever its condition, and its successor elevated to the crown.

It is so with so many other things. By what authority were boots so peremptorily declared unfashionable? Who was it said white waistcoats should no longer be worn? How came tail coats to be forbidden except for evening wear? Who is it enacts that shoes shall sometimes be pointed and sometimes square-toed? Who banished white stockings and substituted black ones? Alas! we know not. We obey a hidden dictator. We surrender at discretion to some power, we know not of whom, nor what it is. We only do as we are bid, and are only too happy to be obedient. The change is not an improvement; if it were we should abide by it, which is the last thing we expect to do. All we can say is that we would not be thought singular, and that we are under a sort of moral obligation to do as other men do.—Charles F. Cougdon in Chicago Times.

Origin of the Buffalo Grub.

Otto Lugger, the naturalist formerly connected with the Johns Hopkins university, but now of the agricultural bureau of Washington, has been through Tennessee and Mississippi investigating the buffalo grub, which during the months of March and April is a dreadful scourge in the southwest. The insect is only about one-third the size of the common house fly, and obtains its name from its resemblance to the profile of the buffalo. These pests suddenly appear in myriads, attacking horses and cattle and killing them by blood poisoning in a few hours. Mr. Lugger says this gnat is the most unceasingly active insect in existence. At only quiets them, and when tired rather becomes warm they disappear. He traced their origin to a small worm which breeds in swamps and along running streams, and the only remedy he can suggest is to clear out the streams and permit the running water to carry the worms away.—San Francisco Chronicle.

A Monument for Arnold Winkelried.

Most school children have read of the heroic conduct of Winkelried, how he gathered to his own breast the spears of the Austrian phalanx, and thus broke the ranks of the enemy. This deed of courage and of sacrifice was performed in the battle of Sempach, fought between the Swiss and Austrians just 500 years ago. Measures have already been taken to commemorate this event near Lucerne, in Switzerland, on the occurrence of the 500th anniversary in July. A monument is to be erected on the battle field, and the neighboring cantons will furnish a grand historical procession in the costumes of Winkelried's time.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Jerusalem's Long-Lost "Second Wall."

Prof. Hayter Lewis, who has just returned to England from Jerusalem, brings the news that the line of the wall north of the "Citadel" in the Holy City promises to be a discovery of the very highest importance. The wall is from eight to ten feet thick; it is built of masonry exactly similar to that in the lower courses of "David's Tower"—that is, of large stones with the well-known and characteristic margin drafted and tooled, and there is a deep rock scarp at its foot. These circumstances point very strongly to the presumption that there is here the long-lost second wall.—London Athenæum.

To Popularize Fish in Germany.

Efforts are now being made to popularize the eating of fish in Germany. To bring this about a German paper suggests that it be made into sausages.—Philadelphia Call.

We are always using the word "sympathy," but do we not know what it means? It means "suffering with"—nothing less.

A VERY SUCCESSFUL MEETING AND A FULL PROGRAM PRESENTED.

DEATH OF JAMES H McCOWEN.

[illegible] Thesis, prepared on a Greek subject. Spent some time in travel and in Sept. [illegible] of the Methodist Episcopal church and after examination commenced an active ministerial career by being assigned to his first pastorate at Lambertville, Monroe Co., Mich. [illegible] sickle. Old and young alike fall beneath his withering stroke. James H. McCowen, the youngest son of our townsman Wm McCowen, is the last victim.

[illegible] was attacked with a lung difficulty which slowly developed into that dread disease, consumption, and for many weeks his life seemed trembling in the balance. But with the approach of spring weather he rallied and the hope of his ultimate recovery revived.

[illegible] Feb 27, 1859. He was 27 years of age on his last birthday, and by a strange coincidence his death occurred on the 27th of the month. With the exception of brief periods spent abroad he has always made Tecumseh his home. Here he passed his infancy and boyhood, here the friends of his youth all live, here his manhood was developing, and here his ashes will rest in the tomb.

The funeral services were conducted at the father's home on Pottawatamie street, last Tuesday at 2 o'clock, P. M. Rev. T. C. Potter of the M. E. church, of which church James was a faithful member, officiated, and a large congregation assembled to pay their last tribute of respect. The array of floral contributions was unusual. A numerous and elaborate embrace, an elegant anchor and pillow, a sickle, and many smaller pieces. They were gifts from D. E. Soper of New York, Miss Alice Lutes and Charles Frazer of South Bend, Lewis and Mattie Wilcox of Adrian, F. Smalley and sister of Detroit, F. G. Smith of Detroit, and many Tecumseh friends. Mr. Potter's words of consolation touched all hearts. Nature herself lent a charming afternoon and added the solemnity to the occasion.

When the Angel calls home a young man in the prime of manhood, just as his ambition and talents begin to develop into usefulness, it becomes a double affliction to the family relatives, and the entire community sympathize with them in their loss. The dutiful son, the kind hearted brother, the promising young citizen is gone. The vacant chair in that household cannot be filled, but the memory of [illegible] will always be cherished.

DIED.

CHASE—In Raisin, Lenawee Co., Mich., June 18th, 1886, Leonard S. Chase. Aged 72 years, 10 months.

He was born in Providence, Saratoga, Co., N. Y., August 21st, 1813. He came to Michigan in 1837 returning in 1838 he was married to Miss Esther Angel, with whom in the same year he removed to Michigan and settled upon a farm in Lenawee Co., where he has resided ever since, struggling with the privations and trials of pioneer life, rearing two families of children, and building up a comfortable home. His wife died ten years after their marriage leaving three children, all of whom still survive, Mr. Wm. Chase of Allegan, and Misses Marion and Jennie, the former teacher in Kalamazoo College. He was afterwards married to Clarissa Paddock, who also survives him with her two children, Mrs. Barlingame of Tecumseh, and Mr. Irwin Chase of St Helens, Mich.

His father died when he was a member, leaving him to struggle with poverty and make his way in the world by his own energies. He was one of a family of seven, of whom the youngest alone, Mrs. Aldrich of Raisin, survived him by only a few days following him to the other shore on the 20th inst. Mr. Chase united with the Baptist church in Tecumseh in 1838, having been a professed christian for some time previously. He retained from that time to the death a faithful connection with the church. His life was one of quiet, unobtrusive, but steadfast piety. During a long and painful sickness of over a year and a half, he endured with patience and trusted God with a grateful and confident heart. He was [illegible] and the most tender appreciation of every act of kindness by sympathizing friends. During a residence of nearly fifty years in the same community, he was widely known and esteemed as an honest, industrious and faithful man. His funeral was attended at the late residence, on the 20th inst., by a very large number of friends, the services were conducted by his pastor, Rev. T. C. Atkins of Tecumseh. All the children were present. The interment was at Tecumseh.

Yesterday we were invited by Mr. L. S. Steele to visit the grounds & c. of John Robinson's circus. Everything was found in excellent condition. It would take too much space to go through with a detail of each division. There are five elephants, one of which, called the Chief, was a very vicious one, having a short time ago killed its keeper. He is next in size to Jumbo. One of these has reached the extreme age of 126. One is an African species. We passed on until we came to the giraffe—is beautiful creature as ever seen, standing 17½ feet high. Passing on we found and [illegible] of all descriptions, which space will not allow us to enumerate. They have the living wonder that sleeps, eats &c., with its head downward, a 10 foot alligator, &c. Passing into the main tent, we found 2 rings and an elevated stage. The horses are well cared for and include a great many species. The side show contains its usual attractions. Taking everything into consideration, it is as fine a circus as ever exhibited in this place. Our thanks are due Mr. Steele for his kindness in showing us the many attractions.

Another saving, and one that should not be overlooked, is of grain that is shelled and lost with the usual mode of delivery, by dragging the bundles together by hand when shocking, also by the trampling of the horses at corners, its use enabling the driver to keep the corners clear of bundles. We claim that we have the only successful bundle carrier.

We correct an error made in last week's issue. The following boys attended the L. A. W. meet in Detroit: Will and Levi Hayden, Fred Tiffany, Percy Fitzsimmons and Seaton Anderson, the first four riding through on their wheels in just 7 hours. The boys all report a big time.

We have engaged Mrs. C. S. Burroughs to furnish news items for the Clinton page of the HERALD, and that department will hereafter be in her charge. She has had considerable experience in that direction before, and we believe she will fill the position with credit to herself and to the entire satisfaction of our Clinton patrons.

John Robinson's circus and menagerie showed to a good crowd here yesterday. Although many farmers are busy in having, the women and children thronged out to the show, and the villagers helped swell the crowd. The street pageant was the best one ever seen in this village, and the tent exhibition was in full keeping therewith. People who went got the worth of their money.

Everybody is invited to attend a temperance 4th of July celebration and basket picnic, which will be held one-half mile north of the Raisin Valley Seminary, in Walter Jones' grove, on Saturday, July 3d, 1886. The reading of the Declaration of Independence, good music, and short speeches by several good temperance talkers, will make up the program. Exercises to begin at 10:30 A. M. Ice cream and lemonade will be for sale on the grounds and every effort put forth to make the celebration a pleasant success.

An unknown lady fell into the whirlpool at Niagara Falls last Wednesday. It has since transpired, on investigation, that it was Miss Frank Wimple of Adrian. Sheriff Whitmore went to the falls to prosecute the search and sent this telegram to the friends Monday last: "The identification of Frank is beyond a doubt. I have found the parasol. Several parties recognize the photograph. I am still looking for more evidence." The unfortunate girl is well known in Adrian, and her untimely death causes great excitement and sorrow there.

Uncle Alvin Osborn of Woodstock, dropped into the HERALD sanctum yesterday to pay his subscription and give us one of his hearty grips. He came down to Franklin Tuesday and stayed over night with postmaster Jenkins and then on to Tecumseh yesterday. He remains here two or three days among his old pioneer acquaintances. Jesse Osborn the father of Uncle Alvin was the man who cut the first wheat, from which the first flour was ground, from which the first batch of biscuit was made, that were eaten at the first 4th of July celebration in Tecumseh, in 1826.

The Detroit and Cleveland Steam Navigation Co. have issued an elegant pamphlet entitled "Lake Tours via Picturesque Mackinac," which gives a birdseye view and description of all the leading lake resorts between Cleveland and Mackinac Island, which are touched by their line of steamers. Knapp's band have struck a bargain, having bought the entire outfit of 20 uniforms and 14 instruments belonging to the defunct Adrian K. T. band. A few of our public spirited citizens formed an association and took $10 stock each to raise the sum required, $300. The band have the option of taking up this stock at any time and thus becoming full owners of the outfit themselves. The band will now take in a few more members and organize a good, strong cornet band, such a one as Tecumseh has long needed. Geo. Knapp possesses first class qualifications as a leader, and under his guidance with the good material he has to assist him, we believe he can soon work up a first class brass band. Success to the boys.

Friday afternoon, June 18th, we had the pleasure of attending the closing exercises of the school in district No. 5, Clinton, known as the section school. Miss Clara Waldron has taught the school for the past two years, and has given the best of satisfaction, and as an appreciation of her worth as a lady and teacher, the school board have invited her to teach another year. She has accepted the invitation. The school numbers about fifteen scholars, and of this number, eleven have neither been absent nor tardy during the spring term, and their scholarship has been an average of 95. There are six scholars that have neither been absent nor tardy during the two years. We think this a pretty good record for so small a school of young children. Miss Waldron says they are model scholars and we will not dispute the assertion.

Killbuck street people who were out as late as ten o'clock Monday night, were startled by some wonderful appearances in the heavens. A large meteoric body came into view in the north-east and followed the path of the milky way across the heavens at terrific speed. In its progress it threw out little streamers of blue, green and purple, that hissed down the heavens on either side like writhing serpents, irridating the whole vicinity with a flood of many colored light like a thousand electric lights. Mr. —— said that the phenomenon all occurred within one minute and a half.

The second entertainment of the Popular Star Course for the benefit of the M. E. church organ fund, will come off next Monday evening, July 5th. The eminent violin virtuoso, Mme. Camilla Urso, will appear, assisted by the following distinguished artists: Miss Lucile Linder, soprano; Miss Janie G. Savage, reader; Mr. Louis Miller, tenor; Mons. Auguste Sanret, pianist; Mr. Frederic Ener, director. This is a very strong musical troupe and they give a first class entertainment in every respect. The concert itself will be well worth the money, and the object for which it is given appeals to everyone's generosity. We hope to see a large audience.

John R. Clarke will give two lecture entertainments on the 7th and 8th of July at the Opera House. The first evening he will give Hits and Misses. In these lectures he will introduce several dialect features, such as Yacob Strauss, Bairnies Cuddle Doon, Whustlin' Barney, De happy old Darkey and others. These entertainments will be Mr. Clarke's reluctant farewell to the beautiful town in which he has made so many friends during a residence of eight years. Popular prices will be charged—only 15 and 20 cents. Let us turn out and give him a rousing house.

THE COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES OF THE HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATING CLASS.

An Eloquent Address by Prof. Strong, a Valedictory by Miss Inez Laing, a Large Audience and Lots of Flowers.

Another Commencement Day has come and gone. Another graduating class has crossed the threshold from school life into the more practical life beyond. As the class of '86 numbered but four members, and one of these [illegible] the exercises came off, (or more the examinations at West Point), the plan was adopted of having an address by some one from abroad, and it was an admirable arrangement in this instance. The exercises were of the usual length and we may add, of the usual interest.

The full program, which has given below, was presented at the Opera House on Wednesday evening of last week. The house was crowded with a gaily attired audience, and the weather was quite comfortable for the season of the year. The stage had been decorated for the occasion with plants and flowers, and presented a beautiful appearance. The members of the School Board and the participants in the program were seated on the platform, while Knapp's Sextette band occupied a row of chairs in front. Across the stage, suspended on a wire, was the class motto in large letters—"Attempt Not, or Accomplish Thoroughly."

Will S. McNair—Scientific Course.
Walter C. Burridge— " "
Inez M. Laing— " "
Margaret L. Clarkson—English Course.

Shortly after eight o'clock the audience was called to order by Prof. Hammond, and the exercises were presented in the order following:

PROGRAMME.

Music—Knapp's Sextette—Selected.
Prayer—Rev. F. Adkins.
Music—Vocal Solo "When the Heart is Young."—Buck—Miss Margaret E. Everiss.
Address—"A Plea for an Educational Revival."—Prof. Edwin A. Strong.
Music—Vocal Solo "Marguerite"—Denza—Miss Margaret E. Everiss.
Valedictory—Miss Inez M. Laing.
Music—Instrumental Duet—"Grand Galop De Concert" Ketterer—Misses Laing and Clarkson.
Benediction.

Knapp's band gave two selections, which were finely rendered. The band have lately added several different selections to their repertoire, and their frequent rehearsals have greatly improved their playing.

The vocal solos, by Miss Everiss, of Adrian, were beautifully rendered. Miss Everiss has a well cultivated voice and an easy, commanding presence upon the stage, and her songs were one of the most attractive features of the entertainments. Miss Jennie Root executed the piano accompaniments with her usual ability.

The address by Prof. Strong was an eloquent plea for an educational revival, and was in every respect worthy of the man and the occasion. It was just forty minutes long and the Professor held the close attention of the audience from first to last. Owing to a lack of space, we are unable to reproduce it entire, but give a brief synopsis of the same.

PROF. STRONG'S ADDRESS.

He began by saying that his paper might not be deemed exactly appropriate for the latitude of Tecumseh, as the cause of popular education here was in a flourishing condition, and this community were in no special need of a revival of that character; and yet, take the country at large, there was undoubtedly a decline in educational interest as compared with thirty years ago.

To prove the assertion, he mentioned the following facts:

3d—There has been a decided decrease in school visitation.

4th—Special gifts to educational institutions have almost wholly ceased.

5th—The numerous accessories of education are crowding out the genuine article.

6th—Education is going out of fashion. It is less necessary than formerly to insure success in business life and gain an entrance into the best social circles.

7th—The popular American hero is no longer an educated man, but one who has become famous as a military man, or in large business enterprises, or in the political arena.

Education was once a fashion or an enthusiasm, but it is so no longer. Base ball seems to have taken its place at present.

The educational impetus which characterized the decade or two preceding the war developed into enormous expenditure for school purposes. School houses were multiplied and beautified and great institutions of learning were established. The money invested in schools and colleges by the Americans has become almost beyond computation. But the time has arrived when this vast expenditure fails to produce the practical results which we might to expect from it. The interest in education is declining; the popular enthusiasm in its favor is dying out.

These are facts which the signs of the times clearly reveal and hence an educational revival is needed. A few hints were given as to the ways and means.

The valedictory, by Miss Inez M. Laing, was a production of no mean merit, and was very feelingly spoken. We take pleasure in presenting it entire.

VALEDICTORY.

The saying that any American boy may sometimes be President of the United States, has become so hackneyed that its force as a stimulus to ambition has been greatly weakened. But the fact cannot be disputed that in this book land where Honor and fame from no hereditary rank, and wealth of average amount may be the means of [illegible] honor [illegible] to be [illegible] men and designs more [illegible] of pecuniary education than our own. Her public schools and union colleges are supported by the state and open to all, affording means of ample preparation for any profession or occupation. Is it not then strange that we see so many loafers on our street corners, idling away the golden days of youth?

It is said that few prize their school days or realize their importance until they are over, then many regret that they did not more thoroughly improve their time. It is an occasion of regret as well as joy when we step from the boundaries of the four school-room walls into the busy world to take our places with those who have gone before us, and solve by actual experience the question—Is the life for which we have only been in preparation thus far, worth living? The life we leave behind us is, in the main, a pleasant one. The years of childhood have passed swiftly by and we can hardly realize that they are gone forever. Even if we continue our study in higher classes, we will no longer be free and irresponsible boys and girls, but striving for some definite purpose, will have the hopes and aims of men and women.

Many paths lie before us. May we have the wisdom to choose the right one! We cannot help feeling the benefit our school training has been to us. Every year has added judgment, broader views and higher aims.

To our teachers we are very grateful for the help they have given us, and the interest they have shown in our progress. By this time we have reached the conclusion that our long-suffering teachers are deserving of our heart-felt sympathy, for many class of persons can conceive more ingenious solutions for annoying a fellow mortal than fun loving scholars, it is yet to be discovered. Not that scholars are free from all trials, but the grievances that look large to us now, will probably decrease in importance as the years pass by.

We cannot realize that the weeks of study in the old familiar halls will no longer be a part of our lives, or that the faces of our schoolmates will have become strange to us after years of separation. Only too soon do the friends of school days become scattered and forgotten. Already as a class our number is broken, and we think with mingled regret and pride of the one who is not with us to-night. Over the miles that separate us, we send him a silent greeting, with our best wishes for his future, that he may succeed in his life-work and win as many friends in his new surroundings as he has in his old home. We are all thinking of the future now. Our past is neglected. Only in later years, will we look back upon our school days as among the happiest of our lives, and long for the old friends and the old scenes of our happy youth, for

"We may build more splendid habitations,
Fill our rooms with painting and with sculpture,
But we cannot
Buy with gold the old associations."

The diplomas were presented by A. W. Mills Esq., President of the Board, and he made this part of the entertainment more than the mere formality which it generally is. He spoke without notes, in a full round tone of voice, that was distinctly audible to the farthest corner of the hall, and his brief address made a most favorable impression, both upon the members of the class and the general audience. His remarks were substantially as follows:

Class of '86—I am authorized by the Tecumseh School Board to present each of you a diploma, certifying that you have completed the prescribed course of study in our public school. In doing so allow me to heartily congratulate you. A large proportion of those who entered the high school with you have fallen by the way. Some from necessity, but many more through lack of proper effort on their part, or the indifference of parents, who, I fear, in many cases fail to appreciate the grand opportunity their children have of gaining an education, and to realize the irreparable loss, causing a life-long regret, they sustain, in failing to improve it.

Among the educators of our State Tecumseh school ranks high, and the fact, that of the many who have gone from our High School to the University of Michigan, almost without an exception, they have passed the tight examination and been admitted without a condition, and that one of the members of your class has just successfully passed the examination and been admitted to that grand institution at West Point, justifies the high estimate. The fact, too, that of all the public schools of our county, we have much the largest attendance of foreign pupils, and that about half of all our graduates are from that class, shows plainly that outside the district our school is appreciated, and I feel that if I could say as many of the residents to-night, instead of a graduating class of four, we would have not less than twenty. You have had the energy, the perseverance, the determination, the parental counsel and help that caused you to press forward and attain the goal. A learned divine has said, in answer to the question, "Is life worth living?" that it all depends on the liver. Does it pay to spend these years in study and be to the expense of gaining an education? We reply, It all depends on the possessor and the use to which he puts that education. We expect and believe you will make it a power for much good and a great blessing to your friends and those by whom you are surrounded. We earnestly hope and believe you will ever be an honor to your Alma Mater. Be true to your shall ever be proud to claim you as one. In the words of another, Be true. Be true to yourself. Be true to your fellow-men. Be true to your God; and so your past life has been honorable, your future will be happy.

The closing piano duet by Misses Clarkson and Laing, was beautifully rendered and revealed not only classical talents of a high order, but [illegible]

The diplomas to the graduates were carefully packed in tube [illegible] on some occasions. A [illegible] were [illegible] and deposited upon the platform, and the exercises began. The accident that befallen Friday morning, the different conveyances, [illegible] and was a great inconvenience on the old method.

Taken altogether and considering the number of the class, the exercises were [illegible] of excellence. The class of '86 takes its place among the Alumni with credit to itself and honor to its Alma Mater.

The Class Song

BY MARGARET L. CLARKSON.

Another year has rolled around,
Another class has reached the bound
Of High school days; and we have left
Our happiest days behind
Forever.

The pleasant years, our school life dear,
The old associations dear,
Our class will ever our lesson long
Are sweet with this little song
At parting.

The past is gone, and with regret
Our hearts are beating as we Resume to make it nobler, pure,
That we may to the end endure
And conquer.

Sutton, Fairfield & Co. have a change of ad. in to-day's paper.

Mrs. Smalledge, of Detroit, came out Tuesday to attend James McCowan's funeral and will remain the balance of the week with acquaintances here.

Frank DePuy takes the lead in harvesting, having commenced yesterday with a new McCormick Steel Binder. He says the wheat is good and as the Binder works fine, Frank is happy.

Mr. A. G. Caldwell left for his home in Little Rock, Ark., on Monday evening last. He expected to remain a day or two with friends in Chicago and then proceed direct to Little Rock.

Dr. and Mrs. N. H. Kimball, of Adrian, and Miss Della Ellenwood, of Toledo, were the guests of Judge Stacey's family yesterday afternoon. They came over with a team and found it a delightful afternoon to drive.

Charles Trainor, of South Bend, an old friend of Mr. McCowen's family, came here to attend the funeral of James McCowen. He is employed in a florist's establishment there and brought two elegant floral gifts with him.

Daniel E. Soper, of Newaygo, was in town Tuesday, having come down to attend James McCowen's funeral. Mr. Soper left Tecumseh years ago and has prospered abundantly since. He is now the new Democratic postmaster of Newaygo, and the newspapers of that city claim that he is just the man for the place.

Rev. A. Bruske, chairman of the committee to locate the Presbyterian State College, was at St. Louis, Mich., on Tuesday, looking over the field. By the way, with the strength and wealth of that church in Tecumseh, why shouldn't they make a determined effort to secure the college for Tecumseh? There is no better location in the State for such an institution.

Actors accustomed only to the short journeys and civilized surroundings which are connected with a tour through the English provinces can have little no-

[illegible]

[illegible] three or four of which, thrown together by some convulsion of nature, formed a [illegible] twenty feet above this, Saul halted, [illegible] which I saw at once must be "Old Leathers," appeared in answer to the summons, like a demon [illegible]

[illegible] hand that I found that the sound was caused by some [illegible]

[illegible] time for hesitation. Come what may the business of a scene must not stop. I took the basket from the clown and, after speaking the lines which precede the ac-

[illegible] sumed was the usual property snake from the exterior.

I shall never forget the shudder [illegible] the audience, seeing nothing which I [illegible] a sort of [illegible] place which greeted [illegible] I saw [illegible]

[illegible]

When I came to myself I was suffering an intolerably burning pain in the neck and lay with a sickening, nearly certain [illegible] to which I had been carried after I had fainted. In a few [illegible] had witnessed the accident, and, though not able to prevent the snake biting me, had applied the rough but generally effective, trustworthy remedy of pinching some [illegible] to the bleeding wound and holding it [illegible] to fate or chance of [illegible] that I probably owed my life. The snake had essayed in the confusion.

I was strongly tempted to believe that but for such a remedy my fate would have been sealed by a shocking occurrence which happened the same night. It appeared that Mrs. Calhoun had determined to leave her husband. Late in the night she took the keys of the building from her husband's pocket, and came to the theatre, probably to procure some expensive dresses which were in her room behind the scenes. Whilst groping about for a light she must have trodden upon the snake, which probably dropped through a chink in the stage into her apartment, and when the janitor came in the morning he found her still in death. Some letters in a man's hand, which were discovered in her pocket, explained her plans.

This painful event broke up the company. Learning that I was about to undertake a tedious journey back to New York, the good doctor persuaded me to remain with him till I might be able to hear of an other engagement. I remained, and it was not long before one was offered me. The most perspicacious of my readers will have already foreseen that it came from Saul Clay, and that part which I was to fill was that of his wife. I accepted the role, and he says that I fill it to satisfaction; in fact, "leave nothing to be desired." A blue mark on my neck which nothing can erase, is the only memento, which I possess of the painful accident which led to our marriage.—London Society.

Law of Divorce in Arabia.

Many Americans are inclined to think that in no country is divorce so readily and expeditiously obtained as in theirs. But in Arabia and some other Mohammedan lands a man can, if it suits, get rid of his wife on the slightest pretext. Some Arabs, barely 40 years old, have been known to have had forty wives—one for each year of their life—and they seldom wed before 15 or 16, or have more than one wife at a time. By the Mohammedan law, a husband may part as he has wife without any form or ceremony, merely by oral declaration and by repudiation of a portion, usually one-fourth, of her dowry. He may put her away twice, and take her again, even without her consent, but if he repudiate her a third time she can be recovered only after a fully consummated marriage with and divorce from a second man. This involves some awkward times and inconvenience.

When a Mohammedan, having twice dismissed his wife, wants her once more, he selects the oldest, dirtiest and poorest man he can find, and induces him with a certain sum to discharge the legal requirements and release his bride on the morrow. It happens occasionally that the intermediary husband, however, after having enlisted into the covenant and received the money, refuses to relinquish his wife, especially if she be pretty and rich. He demands more money, and extends his claims until he secures it. Hence men who divorce their wives for trifles once or twice are comparatively careful not to do it a third time, since the intermediate husband is an untoward fellow to manage.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Results of the High-Pressure System.

What would be thought of a man who set fire to his winter supply of coal in a heap one day in December, and added the combustion by pouring kerosene to make it burn faster? But this would be slight folly compared with what many people are doing. A prominent citizen of a Maine city, a young man, was taken sick a few days ago, and the physician at his first visit said the man had no chance for life, because he had used up his vital force by overwork that no strength was left to withstand the disease. Since the death church, Sunday school, business associates, family, and hosts of other friends have been testifying to the worth and labors of the deceased and the great loss sustained by his death. It is worth much to leave such a record behind one, but it would be better to so care for one's health as to make the service more lasting. However, the ones who especially need to take this lesson to heart are usually the last to do so.—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

The Paleolithic Man a Potter.

Last year, in the cave of Nabrigas, France, M. Martel found, in numerous contact with the remains of at least two skeletons of the great Quaternary bear, nine fragments of human skulls, of which one left superior maxillary and three teeth, and a piece of rough pottery, not turned in a lathe. The question whether, in the stone age, man, the contemporary of the reindeer and great bear, was acquainted with the use of pottery is much debated. The curious point about the present find is that fifty years ago, before the birth of "prehistoric," M. Jolly found in this very cave of Nabrigas a fragment of a large vessel in contact with the skull of a fossil bear. M. Martel is strongly persuaded that fossil man of the paleolithic age was acquainted with the potter's art.—Nature.

CATARRH—A NEW TREATMENT.

From the Montreal Star.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern medicine has been attained by the Dixon Treatment for Catarrh, consisting of a package containing three boxes of medicine, the efficacy of which has been proved in thousands of cases. Hitherto Catarrh has been considered a disease difficult of cure, and many patent nostrums have been offered for the cure of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five percent of patients prescribing themselves to the regular practitioner are benefited, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Nothing, with the exception of the Dixon Treatment, has ever been offered to the public which has been found by the most skeptical to cure Catarrh in its worst form, viz. the presence of living parasites in the tissue. Mr. Dixon at once adopted his cure to their extermination, this accomplished he claims the Catarrh is practically cured and the permanent is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure Catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured catarrh. The Application of the Remedy is simple, and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favorable for a speedy and lasting cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King street west, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on Catarrh.

Mrs. Phoebe Chesley, Peterson, Clay Co., Iowa, tells the following remarkable story, the truth of which is vouched for by the residents of the town: "I am 73 years old, have been troubled for many years; could not dress myself without help. Now I am free from all pain and suffering, able to do my own housework. I owe my thanks to Electric Bitters for having renewed my youth, and removed completely all disease and pain."

IMPORTANT EVIDENCE.

Description of a Discovery Which is Counteracting the Terrible

(Detroit Free Press.)

Michigan has always been looked upon by the inhabitants of other states, as a particularly unlucky region. And indeed the annual reports of the state Board of Health show that in every case whatever the cause may be it is certain that rheumatism, neuralgia and kindred diseases are in every part of this state. Thousands in every part of this state, it would appear, therefore, and where so much suffering exists, it seems hard to recommend anything as a remedy for the suffering, and we have a day in the year of thanksgiving for the discovery of such a remedy for our ills. Perhaps a description of the discovery, and the circumstances under which it was brought to our notice, may be acceptable. I am only descriptive of facts when I say that the results claimed for the cure are absolute, pure and simple from the best possible motives, and that the result is positively astonishing, really wonderful. The following are a few of very many facts which came under my observation.

Mr. C. B. Heine, a grocer of Jackson, was overcome by sciatic rheumatism, that his right arm, leg and side, were paralyzed and shrunken. He could not walk [illegible] could only be carried by his friends. To-day he is well, wholly through using the Rheuma Cure.

Mr. A. E. Stockwell, manager of the Newago Furniture Co., of Grand Rapids, told me that his wife was so afflicted by poisonous rheumatic humors that her face became distorted, her left side paralyzed and her general health undermined. She was never so well before, she is to-day, and ascribes it wholly to Hibbard's Rheuma Cure.

Mr. Geo. W. Kennedy, of the Electric Light Co., Jackson, was whole cured of a terrible rheumatic trouble by the same means and says his blood purifying influence is wonderful. His experience is endorsed by Deputy Sheriff Geo. P. Mann, of Jackson.

I could go on and cite many more cases but it is not necessary. I have said have a dear friend who came near being bedridden by neuralgia of the heart, and who was saved just in time by the prompt use of this remedy.

Hay Fever Sufferers.

The number of people annually afflicted with this most annoying malady seems to be greatly on the increase. The editor of this journal is an annual victim, and, with a view to discover a specific cure, has tried numerous remedies. Of these Ely's Cream Balm is by all odds the quickest and most satisfactory, two applications greatly allaying the usual symptoms in the nose and eyes. We would recommend its use by all subject to hay fever, and we gladly bear unsolicited testimony to its efficacy in our own case. —Medic. Pa. Record.

The Voice of the People.

The people, as a whole, seldom make mistakes, and the unanimous voice of praise which comes from those who have used Hood's Sarsaparilla, fully justifies the claims of the proprietors of this great medicine. Indeed, these very claims are based entirely on what the people say Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for them. Read the abundant evidence of its curative powers, and give it a fair, honest trial.

THE SOIL DOWN EAST.

A Case of Wasted Sympathy—A Fallen Agriculturist.

There was living in the edge of Wayland a few years ago, a quaint and somewhat original old gentleman of the name of Adams, known to all the neighborhood for miles around by his harmless but sometimes amusing peculiarities. Guy Somerby, whose early death a few months ago deprived the Mt. Pleasant bar of one of its original lawyers, and genius of one the last of good fellows, used to tell a story about the old gentleman which will bear repeating.

The squire was driving toward Wayland early one summer morning, when he discovered Mr. Adams making his way afield with the necessary hoeing tools in tow and a weather-and-stained hat to have a chat with him. "This soil of that partial country is very thin and sandy, and the hay crop always fails," said the good humored lawyer, by way of opening to remark upon the fact and to pity the farmer, who were forced to wring a scanty living from such barren acres. The old gentleman heard him patiently for a time, but at length broke out:

"Look here, squire, you're wasting your sympathy. I ain't so cussed poor as you think I am. I don't own this farm."

"Returning toward evening, I was looking for the old man, and at length discovered him, crawling on all fours behind a scattered hayrick toward home, a method of locomotion rendered necessary by the faithfulness with which he had attended to the jug part of his outfit during the day. Stopping his horse, the lawyer, hailed the old gentleman, and offered to come over and assist him to his feet.

"With as much dignity as his attitude and general condition would permit, the fallen agriculturist waved him away, and shouted back: 'Keep off o' here! I ain't safe. The soil's so thin here, now the crop's off, that it won't bear much cultivating; but as sure as I'll keep my balance, I'll be on it.'"—Boston Record.

Patti and Her Blind Friend.

A London paper, in speaking the other day of Patti's talent for keeping the love of her friends through good and ill-fortune, recalls to mind her lifelong friendship for a blind schoolmate of her early childhood. The families of the children were neighbors in New York, and the little girls were constantly together, confiding their childish secrets to each other, and comforting each other in every little sorrow, until finally the time came when they must separate. Patti going abroad to become in time one of the most famous singers in the world, and her friend remaining here to meet her destiny—a sad one—first the total loss of her eyesight and then the death of her lover. The two did not meet again until Fortune had come to each, extending to one all the gifts of the gods; taking from the other even that which she had. The meeting was an effecting one. The blind woman recognized her friend's voice and Patti in a moment had her in her arms, kissing her poor sightless eyes and making every demonstration of joy at seeing her and pity at her condition, while the other passed her hand over the great diva's face, trying to mark any change therein. Then followed an exchange of confidences as in olden time, the two women sitting with their arms about each other, like two school girls, and during Patti's stay in this city they were almost constantly together, and anyone who saw her tenderness for her helpless friend would have understood why it is that Patti keeps so many warm admirers.—New York World.

The Proprieties of Table Talk.

A fine tongue is not one of earth's rarities, and it is not every professor of it that understands how to manage the jolly proprieties of table talk. To rattle through it with eclat is to himself and profit to his fellow guests, he must know what and when to speak and how to take graceful advantage of any gap in the conversation, indeed, to prevent the occurrence of any. To do this without the appearance of obtrusion or vanity or risking the reputation of a character, constitutes the art of table talking. The dinner-giver—we mean him who selects his guests with the knowledge that the success of his dinner will depend in a great measure, upon their conversational powers—understands that it is not essential that all the company should be accomplished table talkers.

Experience does not always allow this, and if it did, the result would not be entirely desirable. Good listeners, whether at the table or elsewhere, are as indispensable as good talkers, for, the jest or the story owes the life of its success more to the ear of him who hears than to the tongue that speaks it. Therefore an overabundance of good talkers at a banquet would result in their checking in each other's way, and, like trees too thickly planted, the luxuriance of all would be lost. In a company of twenty, five ought to be sufficient to set the table in a roar and keep it there.—The Caterer.

Why Stuffed Birds Won't Sell.

A little while since it became the rage to have bonnets and hats ornamented with stuffed birds. The hunters had all they could do to kill and prepare enough to supply the demand. But a fatal day for the trade arrived. The news reached this country that the queen of England had organized a plumage society, the object of which was to prevent the slaughter of feathered songsters to gratify a caprice of fashion.

"Of course anything that is English takes here," said a milliner recently, "and the ladies, young and old, began crying out that it was a shameful shame. I know of at least a score of plumage societies in this country to-day, and all organized within a short period. In several large cities social institutions attended by young ladies only, societies have been started, and here we are left with a big stock on hand and no prospect of selling an article at a proper profit. It's quite a misfortune, that's what it is, and the ladies can't look at it."—New York Mail and Express.

From Shirt Sleeves to Shirt Sleeves.

Edward Atkinson says that "It is but three generations from shirt sleeves to shirt sleeves in this country. Our conditions are such that wealth necessarily can not long remain in one family. It was the perception of this that made a wealthy gentleman who was asked why he contributed so liberally for public benefits reply: 'I bear in mind that my grandchildren will probably have to work with their hands, and I wish them to have the best condition possible when on a level with the rest of the community.'"—Chicago Journal.

Dundee is surrounded by some of the handsomest wheat fields to be found in the county, particularly so are the fields of Messrs. Geo. Paxton and H. Heath, on Swamp road, and E. W. Rappleye, just east of village. The sight of these fields is a feast to the eyes. The crop hereabouts will commence earlier than usual.—Dundee Reporter.

THE GRADUATING CLASS OF '86.

The annual commencement exercises of Clinton High School were held Friday evening, June 25th, at Town Hall. The stage was tastefully decorated with house plants and flowers, [illegible] nated class motto, "Be what you are." [illegible] Over strings of evergreen were suspended from the sides and corners of the hall to the center of the ceiling, where was hung a [illegible] made of lilacs and [illegible] berry blossoms. The exercises with Miss Mabel Martin as pianist, Rowland and Jessie Dwight. The program was [illegible] by Rev. St. John, which was followed by an address by Prof. Travis. The [illegible] were rendered by Miss Clara Park, Miss Ella Clark, Mr. Hoag and Miss Kate Kingsley. The [illegible] by Miss Minnie Martin [illegible] Will Fagan read his [illegible] and well in loaded voice. Miss Blanche Smith sang "Wait will buy my roses [illegible] sang well [illegible] too flexible praise. Her voice is rarely surpassed in sweetness and the beauty of her singing is that she never attempts any selection that she is not perfectly capable of performing. Miss Grace Rowland's essay, "Here we anchor, where shall we anchor?" was written in a manner decidedly characteristic of the young lady. Earnestness and high aspirations were portrayed throughout the whole essay. Mrs. J. T. Clark sang "The Message" by Verdi, very acceptably. James Egan read an essay that was one of the best we have ever listened to from any of the graduates of this school. He treated his subject, "The education of the future," in a manner which showed that every sentence had been carefully studied before it was accepted. The young gentleman had many difficulties to contend against during the evening and his determination to withstand them all, called forth a great deal of admiration from the audience. The cornet solo by M. S. VanDeMark was greatly enjoyed by everyone. The address, "The demands of the age," by Rev. J. A. Bagley, though a trifle too long for such an occasion, was filled with words of good advice, and was listened to with much patience and appreciation. Prof. Travis in a few well-chosen and appropriate words, then presented the diplomas to the graduates, the benediction was pronounced and the exercises, which were the "Commencement" of a new life to these young people, were over.

THE ALUMNI REUNION

The Alumni of Clinton High School held their second annual reunion at the H. & S. Store last evening, July 2nd. The trimmings that had been so carefully arranged in the Hall for the previous evening seemed as fresh as when they were first put there, and the motto, which was also left, applied equally as well to the Alumni as to the graduates. At 9 o'clock the members of the Alumni, Prof. Travis, Mrs. Fullerton, Rev. Pierce and those who helped furnish music for the occasion took their seats upon the stage. The program as carried out was as follows:

Prayer—Rev. Pierce.
Instrumental Duet—Mary Jordan and Miss Blanche Smith and Dwight Hause.
Oration—S. O. VanDeMark, of Detroit.
Vocal Solo—Miss Blanche Smith.
Essay—Will Fagan.
Instrumental duet, cornet and piano, M. S. and S. O. VanDemark.
History—Mrs. C. S. Burroughs.
Poem—Dwight Hause.
Alumni Song—By the Alumni.
Benediction.

As this is but the second reunion of the Alumni, and as their number as yet is not small, we think they have every reason to feel greatly encouraged.

The oration by S. O. VanDeMark on the leading question of the day, Capital vs. Labor, was one which could not fail to be interesting to every one, and the manner in which the subject was treated made it doubly so. The forty five minutes which the speaker occupied seemed very short, and the deep interest which the audience felt in the oration was only equaled by the attention that it received.

The essay by Will Fagan, did not need the apology which preceded it either for the nature of the subject nor the manner in which it was handled. The applause which followed it showed how well it was received.

Mrs. C. S. Burroughs gave a history of the alumni and greeting to the class of '86.

The poem by Dwight Hause showed great originality both in the treatment and selection of the subject, "Apples."

The music was very fine throughout the program. The Alumni song was written by George McIlwain. Only four members of the twenty nine were absent. The audience was dismissed by Rev. St. John and the people went home feeling well paid for their attendance. The election of officers for the ensuing year took place after the entertainment. They are as follows:

Pres.—Mrs. C. S. Burroughs.
Vice Pres.—Olev Sinclair.
Sec.—Dwight Hause.
Treas.—May Morey.
Orator—George McIlwain.
Prophet—Miss Mary Sinclair.
Essayist—Miss Mabel Gurwitz.
Poet—Miss Grace Rowland.

The banquet will be held at Sand Lake, July 4th, where toasts and responses will be [illegible]

CLIPPINGS AND CONDENSATIONS

In order to get rid of the nuisance of the old mill race this village can afford to purchase the right of water power belonging therewith, then the race could easily be filled by grading down the banks above it. The nuisance must be abated, that is certain, and the above mode of so doing to us seems the most effective way.—Dundee Reporter.

Ample provision is being made by the hotels to accommodate, on the 3d, one of the largest crowds ever seen in Hudson, and reports from all sections indicate that thousands are coming. The Balloon Ascension, Mardi-Gras Festival, Public Marriage, Baby Show and Fireworks are attractions unequaled by any town in Southern Michigan. Verily, all roads will lead to Hudson on the Fourth.—Hudson Gazette.

If Marshal Rhodes succeeds in putting a stop to base ball playing on the streets in this city, he will need to be extremely vigilant, for it is largely indulged in by small boys every day. It is hardly safe to drive about the city for one is liable to get hit with a ball or have his horse frightened by the young lads, who seem to think the streets were made for them to play ball on. Choke them off, Elias, if it takes the whole police force.—Adrian Press.

The probabilities now are that Hudson will have another great attraction the Fourth. One of Michigan's prominent legislators and editors is being urged to accept the invitation of the Hudson committee. See what the Detroit Journal says: "There's a fine opening at Hudson for Hon. Charles S. Hamlin, the silver-tongued orator of Harbor Springs. A balloon ascension is to be made in the village July 3d, and the aeronaut offers a handsome prize to the bachelor old maid who will go up with him and have the knot matrimonial tied.—Hudson Post.

In the journalistic line several important changes are in contemplation in Adrian. It is quietly but authoritatively whispered that the firm of Applegate & Fee will soon be dissolved, and that the dissolution will take place within a few days, Capt. J. H. Fee retiring and Mr. T. S. Applegate conducting business at the old stand. It is also said that the Press will soon issue an evening daily, as well as a weekly edition, and that the editor postmaster will wield the editorial quill and Messrs. C. M. Cone and Harry Stearns do the local work.—Adrian Record.

A year and a half ago Elmer Holloway engaged to teach eighty days of school in Ogden township. He taught the required length of time, but by holidays intervening, he lost three days, so that the number of actual days of teaching was seventy-seven. He demanded pay under the contract for the whole time, eighty days. This was refused. Being a minor, his father, Ira Holloway, now appeared upon the scene as plaintiff in an action against the district for amount due under contract, or quantum meruit, for eighty days. He was defeated in the lower courts, but pursued the fight to the supreme court and has just secured judgment for amount in full.—Adrian Record.

Thomas Boyd, a Tecumseh product, who has frequently been before the courts for drunkenness, drove over here, to-day with his wife. He got drunk and started for home, with Mrs. Boyd, but instead, drove in a dangerous manner around the Second ward, generally conducting himself like the brute that whiskey makes him. Near the corner of Toledo and Elm street the buggy was overturned, and Mrs. Boyd's collar bone was broken, the splintered bone sticking into the muscles, making a terrible wound. With the drunken man's proverbial luck, Boyd escaped unhurt. The wounded woman was taking into a house near by, and Dr. Stephenson ministered to her hurts. Boyd was put in jail by city Marshal Rhodes.—Adrian Times.

At a recent burial of an octogenarian, the undertaker said, "Let the old men first fall into the procession." Many a one turned to see who the old men were, and, behold they were sons of the Pioneers. To many there came a shudder that ran through their frame, but Time who never stays in his flight, whispered to them, fall in, fall in, and for the first time the sons of the pioneers felt that they were the old men.

TIPTON TOPICS.

A few of us celebrated the Glorious Fourth by remaining at home. We think Franklin must have been well represented at Adrian Saturday and at Sand Lake Monday.

Certainly farmers in this community had no reason to complain on account of "haying weather" this season, and it bids fair to be as good weather for harvesting.

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley and son of Adrian have been visiting friends here during the week.

J. B. Kemp and J. Butterick are expecting to move into their new houses before cold weather.

Rev. A. B. Storms is spending a few days with his parents near Chelsea. We understand Rev. McGee of Lima, will exchange with him, preaching here next Sabbath morning and evening.

Mrs. J. H. Davis, of Milford, Mich., who was a daughter of Geo. W. Allen and formerly lived in Franklin, sends to a friend the following account of the graduating exercises of the Milford High School: "The closing exercises of the Milford Union High School took place at the Opera House Friday evening, in presence of a large and attentive audience. The orations were splendid and the essays merited all the praise they received. The beautiful books and lovely floral gifts expressed the high appreciation in which the people hold both class and teacher. Miss Zella L. Davis, youngest member of the graduating class, carried off the prize, being the Certificate of Honor awarded by Adrian College."

ONSTED ODDS.

News scarcer than hen's teeth.

Every one is busy securing the hay and wheat.

Many of the citizens went to Sand Lake to celebrate on Monday.

Prof. O. D. Clark of Baldwinsville, N. Y. and his sister of Genesso, N. Y., spent Saturday and Sunday at F. D. Avery's.

Work on the hotel is progressing rapidly. We hear that the bonds have been approved and the time is not far distant when we shall have a bar in this town. We suppose the next thing will be a lockup.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS.

[illegible] Teacher, Judge to Take October, B. D. 33. Parallel Passages.

The man whose sight had been restored had had another interview with Jesus and had become His willing disciple. A crowd of Pharisees heard and listened to the conversation. Some Rabbis were there, as usual, ready to find fault with His teachings and acts, and report them to the councils.

Jesus told them the parable of the good shepherd, using a very familiar illustration to convey the most important truths. His audience must have been well acquainted with the facts of the illustration, and ought to have understood its application more fully than they did.

In Oriental countries the shepherd sustains a close relation to his flock. The same is true of the mountainous districts in the north of England and Scotland. Isolation, privation, dangers endured and happiness enjoyed in common bind the shepherd closely to his sheep.

At night it was the custom to take his flock to the common fold and there leave it in charge of the porter, who with his dog would guard the entrance.

Several flocks would be in the same enclosure, or fold, at the same time. The door shut and guarded, the sheep were safe from the attack of wolves and the depredations of robbers.

In the morning the shepherds knock at the door, the porter opens it, and they go in and call their flocks.

The shepherd knows each individual sheep of his flock and each sheep knows his voice. When he calls the sheep they immediately follow him. But if a stranger calls them, even by name, they look up in alarm and then run away. During the day the shepherd leads his flock into the green pastures and beside cooling streams, they gladly follow where he leads.

What a beautiful picture our Saviour here presents of Himself and His church. He represents Himself as the true door, through which all must pass who would enter His kingdom. There is no other way except by Christ. Then He represents Himself as the Good Shepherd who knows His people and who leads them into paths of pleasantness and peace.

The "other sheep" to which he referred were the Gentiles, and the false shepherds were the false teachers, especially the Rabbis, the Pharisees, and the priests. Jesus tells them that as a good shepherd He will not only provide His followers with a secure fold, not only protect them from thieves, robbers and wild animals, not only lead them into "green pastures and beside still waters;" but He will also lay down His life for them. He thus teaches still more clearly than ever before, that the Gentiles should have a part in His new kingdom, and also that He Himself should culminate His life work on the Cross. Not by force, but voluntarily. He is the author and giver of life. He could have saved Himself, but of His own accord, voluntarily, He laid down His life for the sheep.

LESSON THOUGHTS.

1. Christ is the Shepherd. Let us follow Him.

2. Christ used illustrations which were easily understood.

DEVILS LAKE DOINGS

It was rather a slim 4th for Devils Lake, though L. W. Coe at Allen's south side house had a large party the afternoon and evening of the 3d, and it was somewhat lively at the hotel at the station and in the groves Sunday. The excursion train from Toledo brought in 700 or more. The new steamer is christened the M. & O. which will be running by Saturday next. It will make regular trips to the south end of the lake and return.

Everybody is harvesting now, and blessing, or ought to bless the inventor of reapers and binders.

Toledo folks are expected at the lakes as soon as they are through celebrating, as they can live at this popular resort as cheap as at home.

The man or woman who makes no remarks about the general state of the weather now days is considered unfeeling and hard hearted.

Come to the lake, take a bath morning and evening and lay in the shade. All the hotel keepers will welcome you with a smile if booked for our house.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, July 5, 1886.

Congress has been wrestling with appropriation bills this week, hoping to finish [illegible] work. The event is still far off. No matter how urgent their work, however, our law makers can always find time to stray off into irrelevant paths in the midst of any debate. No matter how important the question under consideration, not a day passes but that both legislative halls of the Capitol are scenes of undignified assaults of members upon each other, partisan thrusts and acrimonious personalities.

While looking down at the representatives of fifty five millions of people, your correspondent is often grieved at the audacity and effrontery of the legislators who turn from the mighty responsibility and pressure of public business to waste time over their own petty wrangles and personal animosities. The present week has been universally prolific in quarrels of this kind, and in the revival of little feuds. One of the most ludicrous scenes took place between Congressmen Cabb and Laird. Hot words passed between them for several minutes, and flat contradictions and threats followed, when both jumped up threatingly told the other that he had better not threaten.

And no matter how great the urgency of public business, Congressmen take time for a little pleasantry whenever an opportunity is presented. To-day the fun may be at the expense of one of the National Capital's monuments. To morrow it may be a Cabinet officer who is placed in some ridiculous light. Yesterday it was the new Pension building that was assailed with the battery of ridicule. Representative Durham put it mildly by calling it an architectural monstrosity. Representative Rogers referred to it as a cross between a car stable and a union depot. Mr. Springer thought it was ugly enough to be blown up with dynamite, while Mr. Cannon admired the structure very much and Mr. McMillan said he rather liked it.

Senator Ingalls of Kansas predicts that the Senate will undo some of the work recently done by the House when that grave and august body gets a chance. He referred to the bill passed by the House, prohibiting pool-selling, book making, betting on sports, elections or other events, and gambling of all kinds in the District of Columbia. There was a spirited debate in the House at the time. Representative Hemphill, of South Carolina, said that every state had a law of this kind, and as we were a Christian nation, the people of the District of Columbia should receive as much moral help as people elsewhere. Representative Adams, of New York, who undertook to point out the fatality of such laws, asked if they were not uniformly evaded in every state. The South Carolinian was not prepared to deny the allegation, but contended that the law was good, and that because people were bad enough to break it was no reason why it should not be made.

Representative Barbour, of Virginia, was also opposed to placing legislative restrictions upon horse racing and other such pastimes. He held that it was of national importance that we should cultivate that noble animal—the horse. "But is this bill against horse racing, or against betting" asked Mr. Weaver, of Iowa. "Oh, everybody knows," said Mr. Barbour, "that you can't keep up horse racing without the interest that betting gives." But the House passed the bill against such sports, and that is the one which Senator Ingalls says the Senate will kill when it comes before it. We are inclined to be very wicked on the Senate side of the Capitol, said he, and the Puritanical ideas that seek to take root in Washington will not be fostered much by our treatment. He holds that people have a right to do as they please with their money, but it is to be hoped that he is mistaken as to the sentiment of the Senate on this subject.

So many interesting and important events have occurred in Washington, and so many distinguished people have lived and died here, that it is at last suggested that houses and spots of historical interest be designated in some way. It is rather strange that the City Fathers have not attended to this before. It would add greatly to the interest and pleasure of visitors to Washington if tablets were placed upon the walls of houses, similar to that marking the house into which Abraham Lincoln was borne to breathe his last. For instance: "On this spot George Washington built a house intended for his winter home." "In this house died Henry Clay." "The residence of Daniel Webster." "The boarding house of Aaron Burr." "In this house the assassin attempted the life of William H. Seward." There are a hundred spots of interest that might be marked in this way for the pleasure of visitors.

THE CASE OF MR. [illegible]

The practice of passing private pension bills should be discontinued [illegible] The pensions laws should be [illegible] only construed by the Pension Bureau, but Congress should not fritter away the time needed for more important business upon private bills of this character.

Any person claiming to be entitled to a pension should be passed through the regular channel in the regular way, so that he may be dealt with in satisfaction. Most of the private pension claims would never be thought of if they were not hawked by claim attorneys, and when successful the attorneys generally get the lion's share of the money.

The time is coming when the people propose to know whether the Democratic party has any principles on the tariff question, and if so what they are. The people believe in fighting war taxes, and the Democrats will not be allowed to dodge the issue in that direction, the people stand ready to vote with a party that can and will effect this reform.

The total receipts of the Treasury [illegible] year [illegible] $[illegible] against $[illegible] during the preceding year, internal revenue receipts were $[illegible] and $[illegible] the previous year. [illegible] in both instances which [illegible] from miscellaneous sources increased to $[illegible] and decrease of $[illegible]. This shows an increase in receipts as compared with the preceding year of nearly $[illegible]. With an increased income there is required a decrease in expenditures amounting to about $[illegible]. With total receipts amounting to $[illegible] and expenditures including $[illegible] sinking fund of $[illegible] the Government's surplus for the fiscal year will reach $[illegible] against about $[illegible] during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1885.

With these figures staring us in the face why should Sam Randall, or any other man, be Democrat or Republican be allowed to stand in the way of reducing war taxes?

MORE VICTIMS.

An Increased List of Prominent People Who Were Stricken Down Without a Moment's Notice.

There is something terrible in the manner with which people are dying off at the present time. Every issue of the daily press chronicles the announcement of some striking down or death of persons more or less prominent, and nearly every one has within his circle of acquaintances some one who has been thus stricken. Thomas W. Keene, the tragedian, was prostrated while playing in the West and obliged to cancel his engagements. John T. Raymond, the comedian, was severely afflicted while playing in the Lone Star State. Col. Richards, the president of the New Orleans Exposition, died on the street before anyone could reach him, while Mr. John Cochrane, one of Chicago's oldest citizens, passed away without warning. What does all this mean? Is there some subtle evil undermining the energies and forces that death claims unannounced? It is common to call this heart disease, when, in reality, there is practically no such thing as heart disease. Sudden death comes by the stopping of the heart, owing to some evil influence in the body which causes it to cease beating. Sometimes it is due to a cramping which brings a tremendous pressure on the heart, at other times it is due to colic, but in most cases it is due to one disease so the result of rheumatism, which, being driven from some other portion of the body, strikes the heart and causes sudden death.

These facts serve to show how the importance of during the indisposition of the system at its first approach. It is a most dangerous poison, which once within the blood may become the most subtle and fatal enemy of mankind. It should receive the earliest care and attention without delay, and the way is to know preparation which so effectually controls and so quickly expels it as Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup. This is no experimental compound put upon the market simply to be sold, but a most scientific preparation, all of its ingredients being prepared especially for the direct action on the uric, lithic and acetic acids, which are the causes of rheumatism. When these dangerous acids are driven from the body, as they invariably are by the use of this syrup, there need be but little fear of rheumatic difficulties, no matter in what form they may appear.

Charley O'Brien, of Dundee, spent his Fourth of July in Tecumseh. He brought the whole family along and enjoyed a couple of days at the old home.

Leroy C. Blood, of Lansing, has just erected a fine new residence in that city, a fine description of which is given in a late number of the State Republican.

Levi Hayden took first special medal in the half mile bicycle race at Adrian last Saturday. He won it without any trouble.

Wm. H. Osborn, of Milwaukee, arrived in town last Saturday to spend a few days celebrating among his friends in this vicinity. His family accompanied him.

There will be a regular meeting of the Myrtle club on Thursday evening, July 18th, at the residence of J. W. Wooden. A full attendance of the club is desired as it will be the election of officers. BERTIE WOODEN, Sec.

Dr. and Mrs. Cleveland, of Detroit, passed Sunday and Monday with the Doctor's parents in this village, Mr. and Mrs. Giles Cleveland. They came out here for their Fourth of July trip and returned Tuesday morning.

La Vera Wheeler went to Lenia last Monday to do some painting for the Light Guard of that city. He recently painted a banner for them which gave such good satisfaction that they want him for some more work of a similar character.

"Gewhitaker, and cain't I so fiddle though" was the expression of a young America at the close of last Monday evening's concert. We venture to say that this rather homely, but emphatic remark voiced the opinion of the entire audience.

Seaton and John Anderson went to Sand Lake on their bicycles last Monday afternoon. On their return they took the old "Sand Lake" road, which runs over the highest hills and through the stoniest gulches to be found in Franklin, and they had a decidedly rough trip home, arriving about ten o'clock p. m., pretty well whipped.

W. B. Keyser has qualified as Justice of the Peace of Clinton, and opened his house for business last Monday morning. He is now prepared to summon delinquent debtors, to issue warrants for breach of the peace or to tie the knot matrimonial, with neatness and dispatch. "Wes," excuse us, Esquire Keyser carries his honors with becoming dignity.

The Heck & Smith patent feeder for millers is now owned by I. T. Daglish & Co., and is known as the Tecumseh Chief. Parties interested in other feeders have been claiming that this patent was an infringement, and Mr. Daglish has procured a letter from Thos. S. Sprague & Son, patent attorney's of Detroit, stating that his patent is no infringement whatever on any other patent. Armed with this letter he is now sending out circulars to all millers and preparing to push the sale of his feeders to the fullest extent. It is the best feeder in the market and will have a large sale.

It is getting awful dry and dusty.

Prof. Woods made a very successful [illegible] Monday.

Some fields of wheat in Clinton are so badly eaten with insect that they will not be cut.

Miss Kittie Allen, of South Bend, Ind., is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Lobar Heck. She expects to remain here some three weeks.

The wheat harvest is progressing very favorably in this immediate vicinity. Many fields have been secured near Tecumseh since Monday, and most of them will turn a good yield, both in quantity and quality.

At the meeting of the G. A. R. Post last Friday evening, comrade H. W. Stevens was made the victim of a very pleasant surprise. Commander A. W. Demorest's Magazine is always a welcome visitor to the household circle, and the July number possesses much merit. Among the articles worthy of mention are "Clara Morris, the Emotional Actress," by Mrs. Crosby, "A Dorsetshire Paradise," "The Irish Haunts of Oliver Goldsmith," "Art Work in Metals," and "Author Costumes." Mrs. Harr's serial increases in interest, and "From Pencil to Brush" is of value to art students. W. Aldeus Stearns, one of the old pioneers of Tecumseh, departed this life last Sunday morning. He had loaded the lumber and was in the act of tying on the binder when the rope broke, letting the pole strike with severe force against the young man's nose, rendering him unconscious for some time. Dr. Catlin dressed the wound and he was able to be taken home on the noon train.

Last Tuesday afternoon we went to Clinton on business, and availed ourselves of an invitation to ride back with Mr. L. G. Cook. He chose the west road, as it was less dusty, and on the way he halted at his farm just over the town line road in Franklin. He has two good farms joining each other, and containing in all 200 acres. The west place he is running himself this year, and he has already laid out several hundred dollars thereon in improvements on the buildings and fences. The east place is rented to John Lee. Although he is doing a heavy business in town buying grain, produce, live stock, etc., he finds time enough to properly superintend these farms.

A DAY IN DETROIT.

We went to Detroit the other day, and went to the Wabash crossing and took the "Wa" [illegible] excursion into Detroit. This train [illegible] us into the city about ten o'clock in the forenoon, and as it returned at five o'clock we found it gave us about five hours to run about the city. We were very fortunate in finding the persons whom we wished to see as well as others whom we hoped to meet, and the day was spent to good advantage.

Salsbury & Farnum are still located in the Campau building and are selling live stock with their business as advertising agents. Mr. Farnham has now gone to France to buy some stock for their Island Home stock farm. We found our old friend, Mr. Boyd of Macon, in their employ, who now has the management of their office business.

J. C. Hough is also conducting his advertising agency business at the old stand, and considering the dull times, he is well satisfied with the state of his trade.

Lavern Ide was found in a grocery store of J. W. Estes & Co., where he fills the responsible position of head bookkeeper. Mr. Ide has a fine [illegible] situated, has a good home and a fine little daughter. It is need less to say that he is contented and happy.

Capt. C. D. Stevens was found at his office in Mechanic Block. He is now interested in the Imperial Life Insurance Co., which has its head quarters and home office in Detroit. The company is just about to increase its capital stock and he was in jubilant mood that day although we had never seen him so well as others whom we hoped to meet, and the day was spent to good advantage.

It is rumored that this month workmen will commence repairing the spoke factory, and that in the full manufacturing will commence, with a large force of men. The same line of goods will be made as before the Whitney failure, with the exception of hickory work, in addition to which one-horse wagons and trucks will be manufactured.—Hudson Post.

One morning a few days since a hat, pair of shoes, and pair of stockings were found in the old cemetery. How a man came to leave them there is not known, but the owner can be furnished with information by which he can recover them by calling at this office, and relating the circumstances under which he parted with them.—Hudson Post.

The Blissfield band expects to take first prize in the second class of the band tournament at Adrian to-morrow. Up to Tuesday noon, but three bands had entered in the first class and three in the second class. The Adrian people ought to have known that a band tournament on the Fourth of July would not prove a large sized success.—Blissfield Advance.

We venture to make the suggestion to carriage-makers in this country that they watch wise if they wait for the regular conventions to place them in nomination instead of "checkering" with some supposed boss in regard to a division of the spoils. If a candidate hasn't money enough without bargaining with some clique for its support in payment of something he may do or agree to do, he had better not ask for the suffrage of the people in this year of our Lord 1886. The independent voter is around and his ears and eyes are open. And the discreet and worthy candidate will wait for his party to knock at his door and tell him he's wanted.—Blissfield Advance.

A large herd of wild, rearing, plunging Texas mustangs have been paraded between outs, by their speculative owners, for a few days past. It is with feel sadness we announce that an otherwise sedate employe of this office has in a moment of unaccountable delirium invested $40 in one of these animals and what he will do with the several hundred pounds of double-geared dynamic power, such as its body and four legs embrace, cannot be explained by the rational mind. LATER.—Having grown calmer and somewhat rational, he now says that he bought the mustang to celebrate with, instead of getting a cannon. He will not have procured a more practical and complete substitute.—Morenci Observer.

A "Bull in a china shop" could, no doubt, create considerable consternation, but Charles Morse's team has demonstrated the possibility of a pair of horses making just as much racket in a carriage shop. He was found for his home, in Medina last Thursday, when his spirited team took fright and shot through the open door of Carter's building. The door was not large enough to allow all to get through so Charles and the buggy remained outside, the former barely missing the walk in his fall, as he unexpectedly left the bugey. The vehicle was but slightly injured. The team tore through the shop and passed out behind through a door that didn't look large enough to all w one to get through comfortably. One of the animals struck an anvil and received severe injuries.—Hudson Gazette.

At the meeting of old soldiers, called at Col. Robbins' office Saturday afternoon, it was decided to make no further effort to keep up a county organization. Of those who met about a year ago to reorganize the county association, only five were present, and the total attendance was only fifteen. In view of the fact that the Catholic church has removed the barrier which has heretofore prevented its members from becoming members of the G. A. R., that every old soldier is now within reach of a Grand Army post, and all are eligible to membership in the Southeastern association, the sentiment was almost unanimous in favor of the action taken. After considerable discussion, the treasurer, M. T. Cole, of Palmyra, was authorized and instructed to place the money, some three or four dollars then in his hands, after paying for notice of meeting, in the relief fund of the G. A. R. post, about to be organized at Palmyra.—Adrian Times.

IF WE HAD BUT A DAY.

We should fill the hour with sweetest things,
If we had but a day,
We should drink alone at the purest springs
In our upward way.
We should love with a lifetime's love in an hour,
If the hours were fleet;
We should rest not for dreams but for power
To do and to be.

Is'nt it a little strange that a piano tuner can't come to our quiet village in the interest of his business, without having everybody hang on his collar? Nevertheless such was the case when one called on one of our pianists last week. "O, such giddy girls and uneasy boys."

The changing of the time of the trains on the M. & O. makes it more convenient with the L. S. & M. S trains at Tecumseh to and from Jackson; also giving six hours at Devils Lake, one of Michigan's many summer resorts.

The McCormick self binder takes the lead of anything in this section. B. F. DePuy cut eleven acres in half a day, and the work was done as good if not better, than any other binder has done this season.

John Larkin who has been sick for several months departed this life Monday morning, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. M. Barrett. He reached the good old age of 79 years. The funeral services were held at the house, Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. Mr. Vincent officiating.

Miss Addie Maud, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Erastus Rappleye of Dundee, age 4 years and 8 months, after several months of suffering with that dreadful disease, consumption, passed away Monday morning. The funeral services were held at their residence in Dundee, on Wednesday at 8 A. M. The remains were interred in our village cemetery.

Mrs. Sarah Rappleye received a letter from her sister, Mrs. Ellen Burch of Oneida, Dakota, giving a very fine discription of the celebration of the fourth which consisted of music, speeches, a street parade, and fire works. The crops are doing well with it as dry as it is, and are in need of rain very much. Mr. Burch has put in over a hundred acres of crops, and did the work mostly alone. The only drawback at present is the glanders among the horses, which has caused several very fine horses to be shot.

Lightning played some sad havoc in the neighborhood of Blissfield during the storm of Tuesday. Robert Forsyth, who lives a mile north of the village, lost two valuable horses, which were struck by lightning while at work in the field, while Thomas Carroll, residing in the township of Deerfield, four miles northwest of Blissfield, lost a horse in the same manner. Fortunately all three animals were insured in the Farmer's mutual insurance company, and it is unnecessary to add that the losses will be paid promptly.

P. A. Reed, of Adrian, was in town Tuesday.

HOLLOWAY HAPPENINGS

Wheat harvest is nearly finished in this vicinity. Al. Maybee got pinned in Monday, notwithstanding the fact that [illegible] passed on which date he got him matter one. Next.

Miss Della Freer and Miss Marcia Kelly, of Ridgeway, are doing Holloway this week.

H. E. Wilson has got a new binder.

Joe Bowerman had a horse very badly hooked by a cow last Saturday

On Thursday evening last, Dr. Begel and wife, of Holloway, were the recipients of a very pleasant surprise party, it being the twentieth anniversary of their wedding day, which fact Holloway and vicinity having learned, turned out in troops and came down on them or their premises rather and took full possession. Mrs. Begel having been ingeniously got off for an evening drive, and the Dr. engaged in his office, were detained long enough to find on their return the house crowded to its utmost capacity and all necessary arrangements for a jolly old time, not the least of which was a bountiful supply of delicious cake and ice cream. An extended program of general chit chat ensued, and an impromtu speech by the Dr., in which he expressed himself as being glad of it meaning I suppose glad that he had been married twenty years, glad to meet so many friends, glad of something good to eat, and glad to hear his wife say that she would live with him twenty years longer if he would behave himself. And in fact every body seemed glad they had succeeded in having such a good time. Let us have more such.

ONSTED ODDS.

Our Good Templars lodge meets once in two weeks, Saturday evenings.

The Ladies' Missionary society have an ice-cream festival at Peter Maxwell's Thursday evening of this week.

Last Saturday, George Onsted was thrown from his binder and had several ribs broken. Dr. Ross fixed him up most as good as new.

Quite a number went from here on the excursion to Devils Lake last Sunday. Report says that it was the last Sunday excursion of the season.

There is no doubt about the saloon. The bonds have been executed and the township board have approved them. They were signed by Peter Long as principal and Stephen Shugar and Orpheus Cole as sureties.

William Wimple is somewhat late with his harvest, as his new binder did not come until Monday last. It was at Hanover several days and the rail-road men were so busy that they could not bring it along.

Some alarm was felt by your correspondent as he came through Springville last week and saw the P. O. building on rollers, for fear they were going to move to Onsted. Upon inquiry we were informed that the object was merely to turn it around so it would face the South.

The July MAGAZINE OF AMERICAN HISTORY presents a rich table of contents. It opens with the editor's delightful "Historic Homes in Lafayette Place," under the general title of "A Neglected Corner of the Metropolis" a chapter as informing as it is entertaining, and of national as well as local interest accompanied by nearly a score of unique historic illustrations. This magazine is doing a great work for American history. The scholarly paper of Hon. James W. Gerard on "The Dongan Charter to the City of New York," two hundred years ago, is also pertinently illustrated, the pictures that will attract the most notice being the old Dongan manor house on Staten Island, and a queer portrait of Lord Cornbury in feminine attire. The admirably well written "History of the Fisheries Question," by J. MacDonald Oxley, of Ottawa, the third paper of the number, gives a clearer view of the perplexing situation in regard to our Fisheries than anything heretofore published. This Magazine is an educating power, and has attained a place of honor in the literature of the period not exceeded by any other periodical. Published at 30 Lafayette Place, New York City.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS

By Rev. Peter Ray.

For January to February A. D. 28 three month after the last lesson in Peace, Bethabara, in Perea, whither Christ had gone from Jerusalem.

The storms of hatred and opposition which had gathered about the devoted head of Christ in Galilee and compelled Him to leave it, had now reached a similar height in Judea and Jerusalem and He was obliged to turn His steps to the half-heathen Perea, in which to spend the last months of His life.

Here He was followed by vast crowds of people, who were doubtless largely attracted by the wonderful works which he performed, more than by the sublime teachings which fell from His lips Divine. He had been in Bethabara some two or three months, when one day a messenger arrived and told Him that His friend Lazarus was dying.

One of the homes which Jesus often graced with His presence, and whose inmates had been cheered and blessed with His words was at Bethany in Judea. There were three in the family, Lazarus, Martha and Mary. Tradition tells us that they were wealthy, owning a whole quarter of Jerusalem; that Lazarus was a soldier by profession and of royal descent. It was evidently a quiet home, two miles from Jerusalem, to which Jesus often went, and in which He found quiet and repose. A tender bond of union had sprung up between Him and this family, and there is no doubt that they regarded Him in His true character and had the fullest confidence in, and love for, Him.

Into this quiet Bethany home grim disease had entered unbidden, and laid its pitiless hand upon Lazarus. The simple medicaments of the day, the careful nursing of the loving sisters, the thoughtful attentions of neighbors and friends, the wealth and position at ready command, all these were of no avail and it soon became apparent to the weary watchers that death was coming to claim Lazarus as its own.

In their dire extremity they naturally turned to Jesus. "Oh! if Jesus were only here." We can well imagine that their hearts were filled with anxiety as they quickly despatched a messenger to Christ. Losing no time, the bearer of the sad news hastens to Bethabara, some 20 or 30 miles away, and delivers his message. "Lord, behold he whom Thou lovest is sick." What tender pathos and unutterable faith is expressed in that one sentence.

Jesus sends the messenger away, and two days afterwards announces to His disciples that He would return into Judea. To them this seemed unwise and hazardous. The rulers were seeking for Jesus. His life had been attempted, and they did not consider it safe for Him to venture in to Judea at that time.

They reasoned with Christ that if Lazarus was sleeping it was well, as sleep is good for the sick.

Then He told them plainly that Lazarus was dead, and He must go to Him. Thomas, with true devotion to his Master, yet believing that the step involved death, said to his fellow disciples, "Let us also go, that we may die with Him."

LESSON THOUGHTS.

1. It is blessed to sleep in Jesus.

2. It is well for the home which Christ enters and whose inmates He loves.

3. We can safely trust our loved ones and ourselves in the hands of our Elder Brother.

4. Death is only sleep. "Not lost but gone before."

Peterson's Magazine for August opens with a beautiful steel engraving, "Morning Among the Mountains," followed by a double size colored fashion plate, and this by a colored pattern for embroidery. In addition there are some fifty wood cuts of fashions, work table patterns, etc. The contributors to the number are Mrs Ann S. Stephens, Frank Lee Benedict, A. M. Ewell, Emily Lennox, and the author of "The Corsair's Captives" besides others in poetry and prose equally eminent. We do not see how any lady can do without this magazine. Everything it gives, from its steel engravings and original stories down to its fashions and work table patterns, is the best of its kind. Terms, only two dollars a year. Great deductions are made to clubs. Specimens sent gratis, if written for, to those wishing to get up clubs. Address Charles J. Peterson, 306 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence

WASHINGTON, July 5, 1886.

[illegible] the Lords and that it requires missionary service from every other city, and from every State and territory. Not a day passes but a petition comes up to Congress from some place praying for the passage of a bill to make Washington habitable and reasonably safe for women and girls and children to live in. During the present session of Congress, several bills implying the [illegible] in this city, have been introduced in the Senate by Mr. Ingalls. The bills all originate outside of Congress with good people who fancy that Washingtonians need their interference. When a Senator or Representative introduces such a bill at the request of the author that is the last of it. No Senator or Representative thinks of framing such a bill on his own account, and no committee of Congress thinks of acting upon any such bill. The numerous petitions from without arrive in stereotyped form, provided by the good missionaries of morality, and though they be many, nobody, except perhaps the missionaries, pay any attention to them. In seeking an explanation of this extraordinary solicitude of the outside world in the morals of the capital city, a Senator remarked reflectively that "These people must think that Washington is made up of Congressmen."

Yesterday a bright smiling young lady, in a pretty white dress and broad brimmed hat, sat by the side of Representative Hatch on the floor of the House. Ladies are hardly ever seen on the floor while the House is in session, which made this instance more conspicuous and remarkable. Children—little boys and girls—are sometimes admitted to the floor in charge of a member. Mr. Hatch's visitor was admitted as a little girl. Before bringing his visitor in he went to Speaker Carlisle, and being rather scrupulous himself about such matters, asked the Speaker what was the maximum limit of age at which little boys and girls could be admitted. The Speaker noticing that Mr. Hatch's heart was throbbing with anxiety to gratify his visitor, gave a liberal interpretation to the rule "for this occasion only," and told Mr. Hatch that if the young lady would admit that she was a little girl she could enter. The young lady was admitted, and soon all the eyes of the House were upon her as she sat and chatted with the genial gentleman who is oleomargarine's greatest enemy.

The appearance of the Senate chamber varies very much with the fluctuations of the thermometer. It has now assumed its most summery aspect. Senators Mitchell of Oregon and Butler of South Carolina have donned canary colored coats; Senator Miller, Allison, Sherman, and Vance white waistcoats; and Conger a pink one. Gibson, Manderson, and McPherson are arrayed in steel color and vest in sonet ing a proachin, crushed strawberry. Senator Ingalls is assumed a lined suit, fourfolds and wonderfully made. Alpaca garments are numerous, and most of the Senators look cool. Ingalls, Manderson, Payne, and Vance resort to the palm leaf fan for relief.

To-day—Friday, a lively time is expected in the House, as an attempt will be made to override some of the President's recent vetoes. The action of the democrats in the House concerning the veto of pensions bills indicates very clearly that the party intends to stand by the President, in that there is no chance to pass any of the bills over his veto. Yesterday an attempt was made, and nearly the whole day was occupied in fighting over the question, the yeas and nays being called frequently. The vote followed party lines, and the effort to get the bill up for consideration failed each time.

Mrs. Cleveland's mid day reception held on Tuesdays and Thursdays, and lasting an hour, has become the leading event of the season. The White House is so cool, and the manner of conducting affairs there is so agreeable to every one, that the occasion grows more and more in favor every day. Mrs. Cleveland's callers enjoy the perfect freedom of the drawing rooms, and have no more restraint upon them than they would in the parlor of any private person. The new lady receiver without assistance now and is very gracious and affable. She is careful to shake hands with all the little children who accompany her callers. At her Tuesday's reception I noticed a little urchin who was struggling shy, without a handshake. The hostess bent forward and extended her hand quite beyond the usual distance to greet the little fellow, but he instantly drew himself to one side and refused the courtesy. Mrs. Cleveland uttered a hearty little laugh at the snubbing she had received, and turned to the visitor next in line.

MISS KATE FIELD.

The Nemesis of Mormonism Having Stormed New York now Departs or Washington.

NEW YORK, March 30.—Miss Kate Field gave two more Mormon lectures here last week to very attentive and appreciative audiences in Chickering Hall. This is the eighth time I believe, since last November that Miss Field has lectured on Morgondism in New York City, and if Gotham is not by this time well advised of the iniquity of the "Saints," it has failed to live up to its opportunities. A wonderfully impressive and eloquent speaker is Kate Field. The gist of the city, devoting three-fourths of a column to her lecture in its last Saturday's issue, says that it is to Miss Field's credit that in whatever role she appears she "has always something to offer which the public feels and it worth will to listen to." In her method the Sun says "Miss Huntington Smith, even humbly worship the gods and devils as she has found them to exist in Utah. The argument in a word is this: Mormonism has never been painted black enough, and the government of the United States and the people who make public opinion, have never really appreciated the enormity of its iniquitousness. She is direct and earnest in her appeal and seems to fully feel the force of her own arguments.

When the lights were turned on brightly in Chickering Hall last night, Kate Field came unannounced upon the stage, and with a quiet, gliding step went gracefully to a place before the footlights. The red portfolio of notes which she carried, she opened upon a small table by her side and turning her face to the audience, she began to speak in a clear, musical voice. The Sun continues:

Her graceful figure was lithe and she was wholly at her ease under the critical stare of her audience. Having taken her stand, she did not move her feet for two hours. Her hands were lightly clasped at her waist and held a dainty lace handkerchief. She was admirably at her ease. As she spoke every one settled comfortably in his seat, prepared to listen attentively, and a certain musical modulation of her voice made listening easy and pleasant. There was nothing of declamation in her manner of speaking. She was in earnest. She appeared to believe in the importance of her subject and to feel that she had to overcome the indifference of her audience. Utah and Mormonism are so far away from the east that it is difficult to wake people up to a realization of the true state of affairs. As the freshness of her single-handed combat with the hydra-headed monster seemed at moments to strike her, she would raise her voice and her daintily gloved hand, and her eyes would flash sparks of indignant fire.

Dropping from the height of an impassioned climax, she would wipe the floor with the United States Congress in a whirl of sarcasm and bitter invective. But she never smiled, even at her own most humorous bursts of irony.

The above is taken from a letter in the Chicago Inter-Ocean.

This is the season of the year when Judge Howell, of Adrian, the state law compiler, shakes off the dignity of the court room and retires to the breezy banks of Sand Lake to fish and to caress a pretty girl, which His Honor domesticated last season. The "sun dhill" was placed in a sort of corral or crib in the shallow water and used to crawl up and sun himself on a rock placed therein. It is said that when any person other than the judge came near the sensitive fog would show a straight pair of hind legs and plunge to the bottom, but at sight of the judge, would gallop about the cage and croak with joy.—Kalamazoo Herald.

The marriage certificate of Grover Cleveland and Frances Folsom shows that the former is forty-nine years old and the latter twenty-one. As we all know, "figures do not lie," and as we have learned from the alchemists, the figure 7 is particularly lucky. The best way to boom a town is for every resident thereof to look and work for it. Men who spend the time trying to get out of business or out of town will never try to build up either. One or two things must be done, run the town for all it is worth, get up steam and keep it up, or quit, throw whole thing slide out and let nature take its course. Do you want to be a Bid for it. Do you want to be dead? Come to your town? Encourage those who do come. Do you want a prosperous town, where people can come who are disposed to make homes? Then do away with all bickering, bury from sight all jealousies, all spite work, work no more for a few individuals, but all work together in a common prosperity and mutual benefit. Wake up, rub your eyes, roll up your sleeves and go to work. Don't work with fear and trembling, but take it for granted that blood will tell. A BRIEF VISIT TO BATTLE CREEK.

Last Tuesday we took the 9:45 A. M. train on the M. & O. and instead of stopping off at Addison or Clinton or going to our usual [illegible] Lake we kept on that train [illegible] Battle Creek. We [illegible] the most substantial business [illegible] Battle Creek. The [illegible] daily papers and we [illegible] into [illegible] a flourishing condition.

We next hunted up B. L. Baxter's office and found Frank busy at the desk. Mr. B. L. Baxter is taking a short vacation and was not at home but Frank was running the office in his absence. They are nicely situated in two fine rooms and a good real estate and insurance business. The next call was at the Uni[illegible] Pump Co. By the kind of Fred Spencer we took a [illegible] through the works and witnessed the different processes by which the lumber is converted into the modern style of school furniture. The Company is doing an immense business and is justly regarded as one of the heavy concerns of Battle Creek.

While passing along Jackson street we frequently met Joe Kennedy. He looks as prosperity ought to look and [illegible] who knew him when he was [illegible] congressman to elevate Joe has [illegible] farm of 100 acres about five miles from Battle Creek. The most of his family are all in good health and like their new home very much. The [illegible] in Battle Creek friends.

Not forgotten at Battle Creek are the Fleischmann yeast and tonic bitters. The shop is in "Advent Town" as they call it, down on the hill near the Adventist Cathedral and Sanitarium. He has a good location and seems to be thriving. The street cars run past his door and he is always glad to see any Tecumseh friends.

Taking the same line of street cars we proceeded to the other end of the city, where are located the Battle Creek Vibrator Threshing Machine Works of Nichols, Shepard & Co. Will Wheeler was found at his desk in the office. He has charge of the collection department, and has his hands full. With him as a guide we took a trip through the shops and were surprised to see the extent of the business. They have at present in operation four [illegible] shops, several which are [illegible] three story brick structures. The machinery in the shops is propelled by two gigantic engines located in different parts of the buildings. They have a complete [illegible] and side tracks to [illegible] into the shops. All loading is done by their own hands and [illegible] Wa found Pardon Nichols in the boiler shop and had a pleasant chat with him.

One of the young men of our village wishing to spend a pleasant afternoon, called on a young lady out in the country a Sunday or two ago, and arriving at her residence was received and entertained by her sister for some time, while the desired one was preparing her toilet for the occasion. As time wore on and she did not put in an appearance, he became impatient and made inquiries for her delay when an investigation was made, she, the desired one had flown to one of the neighbors, leaving him to reflect on the old saying, "that a bird in hand is worth two in the bush." Never mind, Brother, you have our sympathy in your G. B.

STOUGHTON, WISCONSIN.

It might be of interest to your readers to know something of the system of water works in which this thriving little city has recently invested.

After the $750,000 fire which visited the place a year ago this month, the citizens awakened to the need of a better fire protection than they were using and decided to have the city abundantly supplied with water. Accordingly the city was bonded for $30,000 and this amount is invested in their water supply. A stand pipe tower 15 feet in diameter, 80 feet high, of brick, is erected on the highest point of land in the city, and a tank 35 feet high is placed upon the tower top, making the stand pipe height 115 feet above ground, and about 200 feet above the engine house and well which are located farther down the hill. The water is forced into the tank from the well by a 120 horse power engine and by closing a valve at the foot of the stand pipe may be forced directly through the mains, but as there is 40 pounds pressure per square inch on the mains when the tank is full, they deem it sufficient for all ordinary purposes, and by keeping the tank full and a low fire under the boiler, in case of a fire the engine can be worked before the supply in the tank is exhausted. Water mains have been placed on all principal streets of the city, and hydrants at convenient places, so the people feel quite secure, and many are having the water brought into their houses for domestic purposes. It is calculated that the water rents and saloon licenses will pay the debt as fast as it matures.

The city is blessed, or cursed with nine (9) saloons, each paying a license of $500, and the way they are supported was evident when I was correctly informed that over fifty barrels of beer alone had been disposed of during and before the close of the 3rd of July. Don't understand that when I say barrels of beer that I mean kegs, for the amount so expressed is over 270 kegs that were shipped here for the 4th of July celebration. This is local license; let temperance people take notice of it. When a drunken man is seen about the street, which I am pleased to say, on ordinary days is seldom, because they are promptly jailed and fined if disorderly, and he is pointed out as helping to pay for the city waterworks, and to all appearance the city will meet its water works obligations easily and promptly.

The railroad station receipts are on an average above $6,000 per month. There are two banks in the city. Also a large flouring mill run by water power, the capacity of which is 175 barrels of roller process flour per day. The owners of the mill are placing a new water wheel now which is to furnish power for their large grain elevator and also for electric lighting the city. It is intended within a short time to have the city lighted by electricity. There is also a very large wagon and carriage factory here which turns out twenty five wagons per day. The city is putting up a new graded school building, which, when completed will be an ornament to the city. Stoughton is growing in size and population rapidly. Since my visit here two years ago, there have been many the residences erected and new streets opened. In place of the ten tobacco warehouses and depot, which were burned last July, there have been seven new buildings put up, five of which are brick with slate roof. The others are sheeted with corrugated iron which serves as a strong protection against outside fire. One of the warehouses covers 64x150 feet, and is three stories in height; all the brick warehouses are three stories. There are eight substantial churches of different denominations, all well supported. The city is beautifully located in a rich country, and verily Stoughton boomsite.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

INTERNATIONAL S. S. LESSON, FOR AUGUST 1, 1886. The lesson selected by the committee, embraces verses 1-45, but the common version has been abbreviated as above. Golden Text, John 11. 25. Time, immediately following the last lesson. Place, Bethany, two miles southeast of Jerusalem.

The customary funeral rites had been carefully observed. The body had been laid away in the family vault to await the final resurrection of the dead. The two sisters, with clothes rent and dust covered heads, sat on the earth, surrounded by friends and professional mourners and gave vent to their grief.

It was now four days since their brother had died, and they must continue the mourning celebration at least three days longer. In the midst of it all a messenger comes to the house and announces that Jesus is just outside the town. Mary does not appear to hear the news, but Martha rises and goes forth to meet Him.

The meeting which followed was inexpressibly pathetic and tender. Eighteen hundred years have since been swept back into the lap of oblivion, but there never passes a day but that Christ's words on this occasion are repeated under similar circumstances and give hope and comfort to the stricken hearts of the suffering. Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in Me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and whosoever believeth in Me shall never die."

Afterwards Martha brought Mary to the Master, and the mourners also followed, thinking she was going to the grave to weep. They were thus present at the interview between Mary and Jesus. Amongst them were some who were opposed to Christ, who were cognizant of His works and teachings in Jerusalem. They mingled their loud cries with the tender words of sorrow from the sisters, and the sight must have filled Him with righteous indignation. The sad and broken-hearted sisters, however, moved Him exceedingly, and we are told that "Jesus wept." They went to the grave, a recess cut into the limestone rock, a stone fitted into a groove, covering up the entrance. Jesus orders the stone removed. Then He utters words of thankful praise to the Father who had already heard His prayer. Stepping to the mouth of the tomb, He cried with a loud voice, "Lazarus, come forth," and immediately, to the intense surprise of the people assembled there, Lazarus came forth, draped in his gravy clothes. "Loose him, and let him go," said the Master, and Lazarus, fresh in the full vigor of manhood, went down to his home.

Thus Christ performed His crowning miracle and attested to the Rabbis and people alike that He had power over the grave. Thus, at the close of his wonderful life work, He gave a still stronger proof than He had ever given before, that He was the Messiah, the sent of God.

LESSON THOUGHTS.

1. Death does not end all. There is a life beyond the grave.
2. In Christ only have we hope of eternal life.
3. The sympathy of Jesus is precious to His children.
4. Jesus calls to life those who are dead in sin.

HOLLOWAY HAPPENINGS.

A coat of paint has improved the appearance of our depot very considerably.

Floyd Florence and family spent Sunday and Monday at the lakes.

Mrs. Hammond, who has lately returned from Florida, presided at the Friends meeting last Sunday.

Herman Atwell was kicked so violently by a colt, one day last week, that he has occupied the bed ever since and is likely to for some days yet.

Last Sunday, Eugene Shook, a nephew of Mrs. McVey, met with a painful accident which will lay him on the shelf for a little season. He was in an apoplectic frame getting some apples to eat, when a limb breaking suddenly precipitated him head first a distance of twenty or twenty feet, dislocating his elbow and demoralizing him generally. Dr. Bigelow was summoned immediately and proceeded to make him as comfortable as circumstances would admit.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, July 19, 1886. [illegible] to the many peculiarities that attach to the chief executive, [illegible] infinite amount of curiosity, and deep [illegible] as much as the President [illegible] the public does to be that the President is a very extraordinary personage. Scarcely any one who has never seen a real live President expects to meet a plain, prosy, ordinary mortal. Yet the very work of the Chief Magistrate makes him to some extent a commonplace man. He arbitrates in petty political affairs of the whole country so far as they relate to Federal offices, and this requires contact with all classes of people.

Some irate Congressmen were talking about a centralization of power in connection with Mr. Cleveland's recent vigorous exercise of his veto power. There can be little danger, however, of imperialism, or the drifting away of the Executive from the masses, so long as the functions of the Presidency are administered as at present. Notwithstanding this continuous contact with all kinds of people, the present Executive commits himself to his business cares only to the extent he thinks proper. It is really amusing sometimes to see how he manages to evade the direct questions and requests of office-seekers and politicians.

For instance, when the Virginia Congressional delegation called upon him in behalf of Mr. Goode, whom the Senate rejected for Solicitor General, although each one took occasion to express the hope that he would renominate this gentleman, nothing could be extracted from Mr. Cleveland as to what he would do in the matter. He was sorry the Senate had rejected Mr. Goode, he hoped it would reconsider its action, he liked Mr. Goode very much, etc., but that was the only encouragement given the delegation. The President long since learned as all Presidents must, to act before he speaks. In regard to Mr. Goode's disappointment, it may be said that he need not yet lose hope. A former candidate for the Solicitor-Generalship, whose nomination the Senate rejected, rose afterwards to be Secretary of the Navy.

President Cleveland continues to come down into the East Room three times a week to shake hands with the people who are there awaiting the honor. Yesterday he was confronted by about two hundred callers, most of whom were excursionists from New Orleans. There were also a number of colored persons in the party, and their pleasure at shaking hands with a real live President was plainly manifest. One old aunitie shaped, fat and full of, waddled up to Mr. Cleveland and drew off her white cotton glove in order to "make a grab with my bare hand," as she expressed it. Several of the excursionists took occasion to say to the incumbent of the White House that he might rely on their votes when another election day died around.

Government clerks are no larger backward about taking vacation. At this time last year they were there, hand about asking for their leave. They probably found that the new administration might find out that their services could be dispensed with if they were absent, and so they preferred to stay close to their desks. At any rate that was the practical result and quite late in the summer, and the departments had the full quota through the torrid weather. "Now the leaves are falling quite rapidly in all the departments," said an appointment clerk. The feeling that a temporary wound's up into his place if left vacant for even one day does not haunt the clerk as it once did. Of course all apprehension on this score has not died out, but it is no more than the chronic condition of mind of nearly every one in the Government service. Ten thirty days leave now covers not so common now a formerly, because under the new regime, the time that a clerk is absent on account of sickness or from any other cause is deducted from the usual vacation period.

Women stand very little chance of being appointed to position in the Executive Departments here now. One of the Executive officials remarked that there are ten men sent in by the Department officials to every one woman. He mentioned a lady who had just been appointed to a place in the Post office Department, whose standing was very high in every branch. Yet she had been on the list for a long time, while men whose standing was ten per cent on an average below hers, had long since gotten positions.

A WEDDING AND AN ORDINATION.

The Chenango Telegraph, published at Norwich N. Y., of last Saturday contains good news about Charles and Fred Fulton, two former Tecumseh boys, which will be interesting to their many old friends in these parts. In a Telegraph [illegible] Fred unfurled the state of matrimony. We join with the wishes of all their Tecumseh friends in extending our hearty congratulations.

The exercises [illegible] of both events.

Wednesday afternoon a large company of friends and relatives assembled at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Shattuck, about three miles south of this village, to witness the marriage of their daughter, Bertrice P. to Dr. Fred S. Fulton, of New York, son of Dr. Samuel J. Fulton, of this town. In honor of the occasion, the young friends of the bride had decorated the paternal homestead with quantities of flowers arranged in appropriate designs, and in the parlor had constructed a beautiful floral bower. When the hour for the ceremony arrived the happy couple took their places beneath the bower, where they were met by Rev. Justin D. Fulton, D. D., of Brooklyn, the uncle of the groom, and Rev. Charles A. Fulton, of Camden, South Carolina, his only brother. After prayer by Rev. Charles A. Fulton, the marriage ritual was most beautifully and appropriately recited by Rev. Dr. Fulton. Congratulations then followed, after which the fine and elaborate refreshments were served. At four o'clock the horse and carriage of the groom were brought to the door and Dr. and Mrs. Fulton began their bridal drive to their home in the Metropolis. As they drove away, they were showered with rice, good wishes and paternal blessings. The presents were numerous, useful and beautiful. Among the guests present from out of town we noticed Dr. and Mrs. Justin D. Fulton, son and daughter, Brooklyn; Rev. and Mrs. Charles A. Fulton, Camden, South Carolina; Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Middlebrook, Binghamton; Miss Sharpe, [illegible] Bridgeport, Ct.; Mr. and Mrs. Barton, New York; Mr. and Mrs. Will M. Bretz, Gilbertsville; Mr. and Mrs. Payton S. Brown, Plymouth; Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Carrier, New York; Chas. F. Middlebrook, Binghamton; L. D. Burdick, Sherburne. Dr. and Mrs. Fulton will make their home in the future, in New York, where he is engaged in the practice of his profession with flattering success. The Telegraph extends congratulations and may they live long and prosper.

Ordination Services.

Tuesday afternoon a council of representatives of the Baptist churches of the First Baptist church of this village, to examine Charles A. Fulton, a graduate of the class of '83 of the Hamilton theological seminary and a licensee of the church, who had presented himself as a candidate for ordination to the work of the gospel ministry. Rev. L. W. Jackson, of Earlville, was elected moderator and W. Partridge clerk. After a thorough examination of the candidate as to his religious beliefs, his Christian experience and his call to preach, the council adjourned the same entirely satisfactory and voted to ordain.

The public ordination services were held in the church auditorium, Tuesday evening. On the pulpit platform and organ loft there was a profuse display of flowers. The body of the church was filled by a large crowd of interested spectators. The exercises were introduced by singing the popular hymn—"I love to tell the story," after which Rev. S. S. Clark read the second chapter of II Timothy. Prayer was then offered by Rev. J. W. Phillips. After singing another hymn, the moderator introduced Rev. Justin D. Fulton, D. D., uncle of the candidate and who won national fame as a preacher in Tremont Temple, Boston. He is now preaching in the Brooklyn tabernacle, as the preacher selected by the council to deliver the ordination sermon. Dr. Fulton took for his text John VIII:28.

His theme was, "Victory comes through Christ, when Christ is lifted up." The sermon was of great vigor and of thought, rare beauty of illustration and marvelous virile strength. It was rounded in eloquent oratorical flights. The speaker was at his very best and swayed his audience at will. Dr. Fulton was never heard in Norwich to better advantage. At the conclusion of the sermon, the candidate knelt for the laying on of hands, which was done by Revs. Clarke, Phillips, Jackson and Dr. Fulton, and the ordaining prayer was made by Rev. A. B. Coats, a classmate of the candidate; Rev. W. G. Partridge extended the right hand of fellowship and Rev. L. W. Jackson delivered the charge to the church. The very interesting exercises closed with singing the Doxology, and with benediction by the newly made minister, Rev. Charles A. Fulton. Mr. Fulton is the son of Dr. S. J. Fulton, of this village. He prepared for college in our academy and graduated from Madison university in the class of '83, carrying off the second honor. Entering Hamilton theological seminary, he successfully pursued the course of study and was graduated in June. He has already located in Camden, South Carolina. He leaves for his new field of labor with the well wishes of all his Norwich friends, who will watch his career in the future, with full expectation of his eminent success.

How to make both ends meet—don't lay any bone.

A PIONEER PRINTING PRESS.

We clip from the Hillsdale Standard [illegible] sketch of an old printing press that formerly did service in Tecumseh. Mr. Henry L. Hewitt, mentioned in the article, will be remembered by many of our older residents. He was an older brother of the late Chas. Hewitt and moved from here to Jonesville. The paper he printed here was the Village Record.

In the recent transfer of the Hillsdale Democrat office, etc. [illegible] came in possession of what [illegible] only the second press of the state which he has since disposed of to parties in Chicago for more modern machinery. The history of the press runs back to nearly or quite fifty years, when it was sent west for printing the Detroit Free Press, which was [illegible] Washington. Afterwards it was removed to Monroe where it was used for a short time, the place then not being large enough to sustain two papers. At Monroe this press was purchased by Hon. Henry L. Hewitt, and removed to Tecumseh where it was used to print the third newspaper printed in Lenawee county. Publishing newspapers in those days being an experiment, and Mr. Hewitt's paper being a whig paper, the organ of a very small minority party, it was compelled to succumb on the establishment of a democratic journal at that place, when he sold the press and printing establishment to parties at Branch, the county seat, just then established for Branch county, located four miles west of what is now Coldwater. Here this pioneer press printed the first newspaper in Branch county. On the removal of the county seat from Branch to Coldwater, we believe in 1837 or 1838, the press and printing material belonging to it, was purchased by Robert Allen and Jas. K. Kinman of Jonesville, and removed to Jonesville, where it was used for printing the first paper the "Hillsdale County Gazette" printed in Hillsdale county. In the summer of 1843, Mr. Kinman becoming sole proprietor of the office, removed the same to Hillsdale this place then being the county seat. In 1844, the press and office was purchased by Joel H. & H. S. McCollum who continued to publish the Gazette, until the summer of 1846 when they sold the same to Henry S. Mead and John Swegle, who afterward transferred the establishment to Mr. Coryell, who after about two years journalistic experience, surrendered the editorial [illegible] was succeeded in the publication of the Gazette by Ambler & Wooden [illegible] H. Heaton succeeding Messrs. A. & W. sold to N. B. Welper, who started the press on another tour, removing it to Three Rivers, where it remained only about one year, when Mr. W. returned to Hillsdale with his printing establishment and commenced the publication of the Democrat, the Gazette being discontinued on the removal of the establishment to Three Rivers. In 1866 the press and office came in possession of W. H. Tallman, who continued the Democrat until its recent purchase by Mr. Blackman. The history of this press up to 1843, the writer has from Hon. H. L. Hewitt, who will be remembered by many readers of the Standard as one of the early pioneers of the town of Allen and for many years a resident of this place and of Cambria. He was about the third purchaser of this press. Since 1843 we have personally known its history. The press was manufactured by R. Hoe & Co., N. Y., bearing the number 629. What the future of the press may be is of course unknown. With the exception of its brief career in Monroe and Tecumseh, it has been true to democratic principles, in peace and in war, from the days of Allen Jackson down to ex-sheriff Cleveland.

THE MORMON MONSTER.

The "Mormon Monster" was discussed to a small audience last Monday evening by Miss Kate Field and the effort deserved a much better house, as well as the object for which it was given. Miss Field is an impressive and interesting speaker and handles her subject frankly and even boldly. Although Utah and Mormonism are far away from the east, she thought it should not be neglected on that account, and was doing all in her power to awaken the people to a sense of their duty to that subject. Until three years ago she knew nothing of Mormonism, and owed her information entirely to accident, having spent a large share of her time in Utah and also the mining camps of Colorado. Miss Field said Mormonism brutalizes humanity; and polygamy was ground into the people there, and produced the most effect upon sensitive unreasoning souls. The Mormon theory seems to be that woman is not worth damnation, and it is not true that a man takes only as many wives as he can support, but as is most generally the case, the women support the husband. As no two families can live under the same roof there is continual quarreling and petty jealousy among the different wives of a household, and the childrens early training is sadly neglected. Until lately the divorce laws were very loose and a divorce could be procured for a mere song. The woman suffrage plan was a mere farce, and only used as a tool to strengthen Mormonism. All virtue in Utah is attributed to come from the Gentiles. When a marriage takes place the man is told to look to God and the woman to her husband, and the faithful are told that if they reveal the endowment secrets they will be damned. The Mormons believe that the government of the U. S. is illegal and unauthorized, and consequently the greatest crime there is treason. There are 5,000 Mormons in Colorado.

Aches and pains long borne make even the young feel old. The true remedy is Parker's Tonic. It purifies the blood, sets in order the liver and kidneys, banishes pain and builds up the health; besides it has the reputation of doing what we claim for it.

TEMPERANCE COLUMN.

WHAT IS PROHIBITION?

BY W. JENNINGS DEMOREST.

The Sages and Philosophers of all ages from the earliest history of the world down to the present time have devoted their best energies, thoughts and thoughts to the great and all absorbing problem, How to secure mankind the blessings of the Prohibition of Evil, to which our humanity is prone, and as all departures, all instincts, and all passions are constantly clamoring for gratification, the itself being one of the strongest, by gratification, it is both natural and inevitable that we [illegible] happiness. But while our instincts clamor for gratification, and our reasoning faculties often lead us on, we are constantly met with an imperitive demand for Prohibition. We find there is no such thing as unbridled, unchecked passion or impulse without destruction; in other words, Prohibition is the safety-valve and guide or necessary restraint for our life and civilization. Prohibition of the undue exercise of our susceptibilities is the one and most indispensable requisite both for the continuance of life or the enjoyments that are obtained in it. Relief from pain, suffering, misery, wretchedness, and the loss of every thing that makes life desirable, and even life itself, is dependent on Prohibition of wrong. All that we have and are and expect to be is dependent on Prohibition. Prohibition is the Alpha and Omega, the grand acme of political, moral, and religious restraint. Prohibition controls our moral preceptions and justifies our claim to civilization. It furnishes bridges for our intelligent convictions over the dark river of our own selfishness and gives a thrill of pleasure to know that we are secure from the ravages of the many evils that would otherwise destroy us.

Prohibition is first, last, and always in every act of life in which our [illegible] this is just as true of ourselves personally as it is true of a community or of nations. Prohibition keeps all the wheels of commerce adjusted so as to run without friction. Prohibition regulates the interests of society and makes it possible for human beings to live in harmony with each other. Prohibition adjusts the conflicting interests of all the nations of the globe, and the Prohibition that God has put upon the whole universe keeps the worlds in their proper sphere, and in fact, Prohibition is God's will in exercise, his grand fiat. The essence of all God's power and attributes is imbodied in the Prohibition of Evil for the security of Good, or, in short, God's universal sovereignty. Prohibition, therefore, is one of the most far-reaching significant words in our language. All of our God's dealings with his people in his word and in his love to the world is an evidence and embodiment of Prohibition.

The first words of the Decalogue are Prohibition, the last words are Prohibition, and the whole ten commandments embody and proclaim Prohibition as God's universal law to mankind. The basis and virtue of all law, both human and divine, is Prohibition, and Prohibition of the Liquor traffic now comes to us as the dawn of a new resurrection. It brings with its euphonious name the harbinger of a new development of virtue and Christian civilization.

At present the whole world is in a whirlpool of selfish and depraved indulgence of vitiated appetites and sordid greed for money, that has blunted conscience and sunk the people into a vortex of crime and wretchedness, that makes the horrors of pestilence and famine dwindle into insignificance when compared to the awful devastation that the Liquor traffic has made of happy homes, and the destruction of the lives, health, and property of its victims. We hear the echoes of Prohibition reverberating through the land, the moral and Christian sentiment of the people sounding the death knell of the greatest oppression and degradation that the world has yet known. The awful Rum Traffic, with its cohorts and emissaries of Satan, are also marshaling their forces in a united and determined conflict with a frenzied desperation to combat and destroy our civilization, but we are just as determined that Prohibition shall succeed, and we know that with right and with God on our side, "one shall chase a thousand and two put ten thousand to flight." In the end, Prohibition will triumph because it it is right. Rum-selling will be put under the ban of Prohibition because it is wrong.

We are to have Prohibition because God and Humanity has decreed that Rum selling is a curse to our country, a curse to our homes, a curse to ourselves, and a curse to the Rum seller. Therefore, every claim and sentiment of virtue, intelligence, and religion demands Prohibition of the Rum traffic. We demand Prohibition for the security of our lives and fortunes and our honor. With high aspirations and heroic endeavor, we hail the signs of the times as harbingers of a new moral revolution that is to inaugurate the overthrow of the Liquor traffic by Prohibition. Demorest's Monthly for August.

A NEW CREAMERY.

A stock company have been organizing in this village with a capital of $5,000 for the purpose of building a creamery. The building will be of brick veneer, 24x60 ft. in size and will [illegible] has not been decided upon. The company will be incorporated under the laws of the state. Act No. [illegible] 1885. L. E. Williamson has been working the matter up, which is a guarantee that it will be a success, and consider ing the fine farming country around Tecumseh there is no reason why such an institution should not be a large business. The stock is divided up in shares of $500, and nine-tenths are already taken by the following prominent business men of the village: L. E. Williamson, Ezra Cogswell, Jas. Lowry, E. G. Cook, Lucius Lilley, Henry Smith, Henry McClure, H. B. Eaton and Dr. R. B. House.

To Whom It May Concern.

TECUMSEH, MICH., July 20, '86.

Prof. D. A. Hammond, Supt. Public Schools, says:

"After a careful careful perusal of the CYCLOPEDIA OF UNIVERSAL HISTORY I would say that I consider it an admirable work, a talented learning, and your accomplished guide through the world's history. The style is a most lucid clearness, eloquence and conciseness, peculiarly the author's own. By leaving statistics, minor details, and all that is not of real consequence out of view, he has brought within moderate limits the science of the world's history, which usually runs through a great many volumes, and placed it into form accessible for the common reader. The social life of the nations—ancient, mediæval and modern, together with the progress in literature, science, the arts, and civilization is faithfully portrayed. The author endeavors to give not only the causes of the principal events of history, but their relations to one another as well, which is of great importance to the student. All foreign countries are treated in the light of the most recent discoveries and the entire history of the world is brought down as a connected whole to the present time with a peculiar interest and accuracy. The cuts and drawings are excellent as an illustration of important events and [illegible] as a work I consider the best work of its kind with which I am acquainted."

Some wide-awake salesman is advised to give the residents of this vicinity an opportunity to examine and secure a copy of the new 1886 Section al Map of our Great State, a copy of which now adorns our office. Nice little points of geographical accuracy have received the most careful attention. New railroad extensions and all recent changes are plainly shown. The location of towns and their population, from the census of 1885, is readily found by reference to the index, which now accompanies each map. Rand, McNally & Co., 148 154 Monroe street, Chicago, are the publishers, and we predict pleasant and profitable employment for the fortunate agent who obtains the right to represent them.

BACK FROM CAMP.

"Well, how did you enjoy yourself in camp?" asked a representative of the HERALD of a prominent member of Co. C. last Tuesday.

"Splendid, had a fine time. The weather was good, and if it had'nt been quite so dusty it would have been immense. Why, the dust was knee deep in some places."

"Did the company make a good showing?"

"Splendid, they marched like old vets, and passed inspection as one of the best, receiving some good words from the columns who did the inspection."

"Any on the sick list in the hospital?"

"Not a one."

"How was the discipline of the camp, as compared with previous years?"

"A great deal more strict. The boys are getting down to business, and skylarking and intemperance are not so prevalent as in former years. And right here let me give you a point—Gov. Alger is just the man to keep the boys straight, and he means a great deal to do with it this year."

"I suppose the boys had a little fun, did'nt they?"

"Well I should smile. Just ask them."

"Much of a crowd Sunday?"

"Well, not so many as in former years. The report that the Governor did not want any visitors that day kept a good many away; still, there were about 5,000 on the grounds, and we did'nt lack for company. We had a band concert every night by Reiss' band of East Saginaw, instrumental solos on the mouth organ and kazoos, by members of the Co., plenty to eat and a good time generally."

"How did the company bugler do?"

"Fine."

"And the drummer?"

"Same."

"Don't suppose there was anything to be found on the grounds that was intoxicating."

But the prominent member had vanished, and his form was seen flying "around the corner" after something he had evidently forgotten.

Co. C. arrived home Tuesday noon looking somewhat sunburnt, but none the worse for their week's encampment. They have an invitation to attend another encampment at Fort Wayne, Ind. next month. The militia from this state, Ohio and Indiana will participate.

The races at Detroit this week are largely attended and progressing without accident. Horsemen are present from all over the Northwest.

Mrs. Jas. Glasgow received a severe fall, caused by a defective sidewalk near Marsh's meat market last week, and is suffering sadly from severe bruises. Our authorities should look to this walk.

The Lilley House had a large number of village guests at dinner last Sunday. It is a great convenience these hot Sundays to be able to procure a first class meal at the hotel, and thus save the work and annoyance of getting up a Sunday dinner at home.

We are indebted to Dr. E. M. Conklin for a copy of the Wichita Weekly Beacon, of July 7th, which contains a full list of the buildings that have been erected there since Jan. 1, or are now in process of erection. It shows a wonderful growth. The list takes an entire page of that paper.

A new devise has been invented by the "Chicago Return Letter Association" by which all unclaimed letters are sent to them instead of to the Dead Letter office. A small stamp is affixed to each envelope with the proper directions.—We fail to see wherein it is any improvement over the old method.

A certain Jackson man, anticipating a heavy shower last Friday, purchased a new umbrella. On repairing to his boarding house he placed it in the hall, with a card attached containing the following: "This belongs to a man who strikes a 40 pound blow. Will be back in five minutes." When he returned the umbrella was gone, and in its place was a card which read: "Taken by a man who walks seven miles an hour. Will not be back." Brooklyn Exponent.

A farmer states that for five years he has successfully prevented the ravages of the cabbage worms by placing a stalk of pennyroyal between the leaves of the cabbage plant. He also feels confident that our native faint will answer equally as well. It is cheap, simple and worth trying, and not so poisonous as paris green. Here is also a remedy for destroying the maggot that eats away the main root of cabbage plants: "Scrape away the dirt from about the stalks to the depth of one half inch, and sprinkle slacked lime about and replace the dirt."

The August number of Demorest's Magazine comes to us freighted with good reading. Mrs. Croly contributes an interesting article on one of the typical dramatic stars, Genevieve Ward, Emma M. Tyng furnishes a good paper on "South Kensington and its Neighborhood;" and W. Jennings Demorest has two Prohibition articles, "What is Prohibition?" and "Liberty and Prohibition." Mrs. Hart's serial is continued; there are several good stories and poems, one of the valuable series, "From Pencil to Brush," and "The World's Progress." The frontispiece is a fine steel engraving called "Harmony."

A new time card went into effect on the Wabash road last Sunday. The changes appear in the time table elsewhere. With the excellent connections at Britton and Adrian, this popular route is being much used.

A question has arisen as to who owns the Blissfield public park. As the park is a beautiful piece of property, reminding one of the garden of Eden, as it were, the quarrel about the title is exciting intense interest in that vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. Homer Bickford, of Raisin, and the Misses Watkins, were members of the Universalist church at Macedon, N. Y. At the last communion, they united with the church in Tecumseh by letter of transfer. Mrs. L. D. Dewey also became a member at the same time.

Text Sunday morning at 10:30 at the Universalist church: from 1 Cor. 15:54. Subject of sermon, "Facing Death." At the request of several, not members of the parish, who desire to know what Universalists believe, the pastor will give a discourse in the evening at 7:30 upon "What We Believe." All invited.

The supervisors reunion will be held at Bruce's Landing, Devils Lake, on Thursday the 12th of Aug.

William DeMott is devoting his whole time now to the Northwestern Mutual Life Ins. Co. He has a large list of policy holders which is constantly increasing.

John Habberton, of "Helen's Babies" fame, gives a short piece of autobiographical advice to aspiring story writers in Harper's for August with this suggestive title, "The Penalties of Authorship."

D. P. Anthony has recently completed three of the finest barns in Raisin, and we might say in the county. They average each about 30x44 feet in size, and beside the horse barn there are two for grain, all very conveniently arranged.

One of the prominent New York physicians, Dr. Timas M. Coan, conveys much information to invalids and other ailing mortals in regard to certain French mineral springs which are not popularly known. Harper's for August contains the article.

Hon. J. R. Bennett raises his own cucumbers. He neglected this year to soak the seed in Jamaica ginger. Saturday he ate freely of the first picking of this "fruit." * * * Any one wishing the balance of his crop can have it upon application.—Adrian Record.

The third annual reunion of the tri-[illegible] to be held at Fort Wayne, Ind. from August 19th to 23d promises to be the largest military encampment ever held in Indiana. The governors of Indiana, Ohio, and Michigan will all be present.

Next Saturday, July 24th, will be the twenty fifth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Burlingame. They are prepared to receive presents on that day, but will entertain no company. Charley has the true printer's instinct that displays itself on all occasions.

Prof. Richard T. Ely, the economist of the foremost educational institution in America, Johns Hopkins University, contributes the second of his timely "Social Studies" to the August Harper's. Under the heading of "The Economic Evils in American Railway Methods" he lays bare some glaring abuses which are generally overlooked or underestimated.

Mr. E. R. Crossman has an old book in his possession which is a decided curiosity. It is a bound volume of "The Philomathesian" a periodical printed by a literary association in Middlebury College. The magazine was printed at Middlebury, Vt. in 1833. This volume, No. 1, contains twelve numbers of the periodical.

Good Housekeeping, published at Holyoke, Mass., and New York City, is going to publish a series of articles on keeping house, an important feature of which will be a daily program of work, something never yet attempted in print. That very practical and gifted writer, Mrs. Catherine Owens, has been engaged for this work, which will be eagerly watched for by the prospective housekeeper, and will be exceedingly interesting to those who are veterans in the cause.

The Patriarchs militant (uniformed Odd Fellows) will hold their first national meeting, in connection with the Sovereign grand lodge, at Boston, next fall, commencing September 20th. The event will be a memorable one. There will be a grand procession and other similar features, and a prize drill, for which many cantons have already entered, $5,000 in prizes being offered. Reduced rates have been secured on all leading lines of railroad, and arrangements have been completed whereby Illinois and Michigan Odd Fellows and their families can make the trip to Boston and return for $13 each.

Cassell & Company, Limited, will publish, about July 15th, a novel of Saratoga summer life. The title of the work is "Wanted A Sensation, A Saratoga Incident." The author, Edward S. Van Zile, is a graduate of Trinity College, Hartford, Conn., in the class of '84. He was for two years on the editorial staff of the Troy Times and is at present connected editorially with the New York World. This is a short but unique story, containing novel features and a somewhat sensational denouement. It is written with no intention of advocating any special theory, and is simply an attempt to weave an interesting story against a background which has been somewhat neglected in American fiction. The story is rapid in its movement and should be of interest to a large class of readers.

The representative for Ridpath's History of the World is meeting with success in Tecumseh. He is handling an excellent work, worthy of high commendation. The plan of the History is as comprehensive as the execution is admirable. The splendid illustrations which illumine its pages need but to be seen to be admired by all.

Business called us to Hudson the other day and while there we called at the Gazette office. Found Jerome full swing up to his ears in business and looking healthy and happy. Will was away at Chicago and hence we did not have the pleasure of shaking hands with the new postmaster.

We dropped in at the Post, while at Hudson the other day, and found Bro. Steinwald in charge. Bro. Stirm was not in but we learned that he had his lighting rod on prematurely and met the Adrian ring. It is needless to say that the Post is prospering. It has become a fixture in that section.

The San Francisco party left for Chicago yesterday afternoon via the Lake Shore route. The entire party consisted of John Fisher and wife, Wm. C. Heck and wife, Mrs. R. Roof, A. P. Coddington and wife, A. W. Mills, S. P. Hosmer, A. D. Lawrence, R. J. W. Bowen, of Tecumseh, Chas. Davis, of Clinton, and R. W. Ellis, of Ridgeway. Under the new postal ruling whereby liquids can be sent by mail, one large manufacturer, the department is advised, intends to avail himself of the new order by establishing a system of furnishing families throughout the Union with their weekly supply of yeast. The regulations permit the transmission of about four ounces net weight, liquid measure, or about an ordinary tumblerful, at one cent the ounce. The wrapping would weigh about two ounces, so that for six cents in States where laws are too severe and the dram drinkers are wealthy, it will be possible for them to receive their daily rum in defiance of all local option or prohibitory laws.

We have interviewed several members of Co. C. since their return from camp, and they all echo with one voice that it was the most successful encampment ever held in the State. Capt. Wood is proud of his men. Co. C. was regarded by the officers as one of the best companies in camp, and it is equally true that the men were more than pleased with their commanding officer. Capt. Wood has brought the men to a high state of efficiency. The company has always been exceedingly fortunate in its commanding officers, and it is no disparagement to former officers to say that the company never had a better one than Capt. Fred. Wood.

To Keep the Water Jug Cool.

An excellent device for keeping the water jug cool, is to make a sack, of some strong, close stuff, large enough to make a space of two inches under, and around the jug, which space is packed with sawdust. Put a string around the jug at the bottom. The length of this string plus six inches will be the proper measure of the sack at that point. In the same way the proper measure of the sack along the curve of the jug can be obtained. The bottom of the sack is cut by placing the jug on the cloth, and cutting around two and one half inches from the jug. The sides of the sack are best made in four pieces. Sew these pieces to the bottom and together for two or three inches. Turn pack in the sawdust as far as the pieces are sewed together, and make another sewing, etc. The sack must be sewed close around the handle and the lips of the jug. Water in this jug will be cool after an exposure of six hours to the hot sun. American Agriculturist for August.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS.

Bethany and Jerusalem.

The Feast of the Passover draws nigh.

Christ has spent a few weeks in Ephraim a small town twenty miles north of Jerusalem, but now He commences His journey to the Holy City. On His way He heals the sick, pronounces His blessing on little children and delivers several discourses.

It was Friday night, the last day in March, when He arrived at Bethany, the little town He often visited, and where we left Him in our last lesson.

His old friends Lazarus and Martha and Mary had prepared a supper in His honor, which was probably shared by many of the citizens.

It was during this feast that Mary exhibited her wondrous love for the Master in anointing His head and feet with costly ointment. It was of this act that Christ said Mark 14. 9. "Wheresoever this Gospel shall be preached throughout the whole world, this also which this woman hath done shall be spoken of for a memorial of her."

Judas objected to the use of such expensive ointment, and urged that it would have brought a goodly sum at sale, and the money could have been given to the poor.

Christ silences the hypocritical censor, and immortalizes the woman and her act of devotion.

Caravans were at this time rapidly approaching, and pouring into Jerusalem from all quarters.

The people heard that Jesus was at Bethany, and many flocked there to see Him, and also to see Lazarus, whom He had raised from the dead.

Numbers of these Jews went away believing on Jesus, and the chief priests were so incensed at the increasing popularity of our Lord, and also at Lazarus, they conspired to put Lazarus to death also.

The next day Christ resumed His journey to Jerusalem. Reaching Bethphage—house of figs or fig town—He sent his disciples for an ass on which to ride into Jerusalem.

Over 500 years before, the prophet Zechariah (Zech. 9, 9.) had exclaimed, "Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion; shout, O daughter of Jerusalem: behold thy King cometh unto thee: he is just, and having salvation; lowly, and riding upon an ass, and upon a colt the foal of an ass."

And now, after five centuries, the prophetic words are fulfilled and the King of Kings and Lord of Lords rides into Jerusalem on a "young ass." This is the only recorded instance of Jesus riding.

The assembled multitude gather the branches of palm trees, emblem of triumph, and scatter them in the way, and bear them in their hands, the while shouting "Hosanna: Blessed is the King of Israel that cometh in the name of the Lord."

When they reached the Mount of Olives, Luke tells us that, as the glories and splendors of Jerusalem burst upon their view, Christ wept over the city which He loved so well.

The scene must have been exceedingly repugnant to the chief priests, who thus saw Christ publicly honored by the masses and hailed as the King of Israel.

LESSON THOUGHTS.

1. Mary expressed her love of, her gift. Give Christ the best your life affords.

2. We ought to consecrate ourselves to the Master and to His Work.

3. Let your benevolences be true and sincere. Remember the poor.

4. Christ is King. Give Him the loyal obedience of your heart.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[illegible]

WASHINGTON, July 26, 1886.

[illegible] with our legislators is S. H. the hot weather. Last week there were [illegible] and [illegible] the lower house and a [illegible] battle of words between two Presidential candidates in the Senate. The present week opened with a violent scene of passion in the Upper House such as has not been witnessed in that august, dignified body for years, and had the dispute occurred outside the Senate Chamber, there probably would have been a repetition of the Colfax Laird incident.

And it was all about Oleomargarine and butter, or as Senator Vance would say, all about "grease." He characterized the Oleomargarine bill as protection gone to seed. Any business that came to Congress and invoked the arm of law to keep it alive at the expense of other business was built to live. He charged that the supporters of the bill were influenced by political considerations; that butter, like conscience, made cowards of their all. The necessity of "grease" to carry the state of New York two years hence was what affected them.

But I will return to the subject of Senatorial courtesies. While Senator Ingalls was making a speech in opposition to Oleomargarine, he found in his desk material for a satirical in the speech which he directed against Mr. Edmunds. He pulled forth from some mysterious recess a small vial containing coloring matter manufactured at Burlington, Vt., the residence of Mr. Edmunds which was warranted to add five cents to the value of every pound of butter with which it was used. The Kansas Senator then sarcastically referred to the innocent, bucolic farmer who pumped upon oleomargarine as a fraud that should be stamped out, while he doctored up his own pale faced butter with extracts that loosed like iodine, until it put on a rich, creamy hue, and added a nickle a pound to its market price.

Solomon W. Senator Warner Miller of New York, who lives on a farm when at home felt attacked by this satire. His face grew red and white with anger during the talk, and when he arose to speak his voice was fairly quivering with passion. It took two or three minutes for him to recover the composure to pounce upon his Senator from Kansas. He charged me with being directly interested in this measure," shouted Mr. Miller, "it is true I live on a farm and keep a few cows and horses, and at some periods of the year I make butter and cheese. But for every dollar that I have received from my cows I have paid out ten, and in no sense am I directly interested in the pending legislation." Bursting into a frenzied rage he defied Mr. Ingalls, shook his fists in his face, stigmatized the charge against himself as malicious and untrue, called him a coward for protecting himself behind the parliamentary usages of the Senate, and more than intimated that he would never have dared to say what he had outside the Senate Chamber. He also dared Ingalls as a circus rider and threatened him if he failed as U. S. Senator he could probably make a living by manipulating bogus jewelry.

The Senator from Kansas was as thoroughly angry himself, disclaimed having had any reference to Mr. Miller in his remarks, but retorted that he was now going to be personal himself. He had a humorous vein at his command, and it drew from upon its resources. He proceeded to state that it was a national institution, and a necessity for Mr. Miller, who was a dairy farmer, and personally interested in what the cow did for mankind, to be unfair. The humorous whole brought down a full second of an competition with thunder.

The Senate discussion with every [illegible] this pleasant between two Republican Senators and Mr. Butler of South Carolina expressed the hope that the comedy of the little bottle of colorific matter would not end with a gory tragedy. It probably will not, but the Senate has reached the record of the House for breaches of dignity, and would not be safe to say what it might not be guilty of. The demoralizing effect of a session prolonged into the dog days is apparent, and it is evident that it is time for Congress to adjourn. In fact the tempers of Senators and members continue to fail them as the summer advances, it has been suggested that a special committee of honor be appointed to consider these personal encounters. "You dare not say that outside," has become the watchword of both Houses and most of them do not.

A WONDERFUL OCCURRENCE.

(Detroit News.)

The interest awakened by an important occurrence at Jackson caused a representative of this paper to visit that city. He registered at the Hard House and engaged Hon. Frank L. Smith, its proprietor and ex-member of the State Legislature in conversation.

Mr. C. D. Denio, a man very well known in this community, was probably the worst wreck physically of any man alive we have ever seen. He was [illegible]

Mr. Smith stepped suddenly and took us to the door and called in a man who was passing. It was Mr. Denio, who said:

"I am what people call a resurrected man. From a slight attack of rheumatism, growing out of a cold, I grew worse until my limbs were swollen tearfully and my right side entirely paralyzed. Anyone who has had rheumatism know what I suffered. The doctors were [illegible] I taking doses of morphine constantly, but it would not kill the pain. Indeed, during my delirious ravings I declared I would shoot the doctors if I ever recovered, which of course, I was not responsible for. I looked forward to death. But yet you see me in perfect health. Do you want to know what it was that saved my life. Certainly I would be a fit subject for an asylum if I [illegible] Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. We will tell all the whole truth. A friend brought a box of the pills to my sick room. I took them. They passed down my throat like liquid fire. They made me sick at my stomach. I had taken but a few doses when I was able to sit up in bed. In a week I was able to walk across the room. I continued taking the pills and in a month I was able to go down stairs. I have taken in all about six boxes of the pills and they have done the work. I am a new man. I have gained 40 pounds in weight. I am free from pain. I am free from rheumatism. I am free from all the effects of my terrible disease. I am a living witness of the power of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People to cure the worst form of disease that ever afflicted a human being."

Mr. Denio is well known in Jackson and his statement is believed by all who know him. He is now in the employ of H. D. Lewis, residing at 209 Francis street, attended Mr. Denio during his sickness, and said Mr. Denio had been a very sick man, had gone beyond the reach of the medical profession and his recovery cannot be attributed by the medical fraternity to anything else than the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. We have investigated the entire case thoroughly and know it to be so. It is a lesson to all sufferers and should be carefully remembered and acted upon.

SAVING MOTHER.

Between the fire and the lamplight's glare
His face was ruddy and full and fair.
His three small boys to the chimney nook
Formed the links of a picture book;
His wife, the pride of his home and heart
Had the table and steeped the tea—
Dainty, swiftly, silently
First and last, we, it said plain,
She bore his trains without complaint,
Life many and her household saint—
Content all wishes she knew
In the patient ministry of love.

A chair, between the clouds of smoke,
Was wheeled to the fire, the latter spoke
"There's baby's coral and mine's to buy
And it seems should come a rainy day
Toward so naughty handy. I'm bound to say
I have worn them out by—Fudge, I must do
And there's flannel with it. Let's see, I have to buy—
Enough to shame a [illegible]
Besides, there's Edward in Dick, too, he
Is to be provided for. When we were
So, if I were young, I'll tell you what I'd do
Fill the savin' of wood as every good
Extra fire, don't do any good.
I'd be saving of soap, an' savin' of the
And run up some candles once in awhile
I'd rather be sparin' of coffee an' tea
For sugar is high
An' all to pay,
And cider is good enough drink for me
I'd be kind o' careful about my do es
And look out sharp how the money goes—
There's a lot of waste I know
In the home of women.
I'd sell the best of my cheese an' honey,
An' eggs is as good nigh bout as th' money;
An' as to the carpet you wanted new—
I guess we can make the old one do:
And as for th' washer an' sewin' machine,
Them smooth-tongued agents, so pesky mean
What do they know 'bout women's work,
Do they calkilate women was made to shirk?"

Dick and Edward and little Jue
Sat in the corner in a row,
They saw the patient mother go,
On ceaseless errands to and fro;
They saw that her form was bent and thin,
Her temples gray, her cheeks sunk in;
They saw the quiver of lip and chin—
And then, with a wrath he could not smother,
Outspoke the youngest, fearless brother.
"You talk of savin' wood an' the
An' tea an' sugar all the while,
But you NEVER talk of SAVIN' MOTHER!"

Help Yourself.

People who have been bolstered up and levered all their lives are seldom good for anything in a crisis. When misfortune comes they look around for something to cling to or leap upon. If the prop is not there, down they go.

Once down, they are as helpless as capsized turtles, or unhorsed men in armor and cannot find their feet again without assistance.

Such silken fellows no more resemble self-made men, who have fought their way to position, making difficulties their stepping stones, and deriving determination from defeat, than vines resemble oaks, or sputtering rush-lights the stars of heaven. Efforts persisted into achievements train a man to self reliance, and when he has proven to the world that he can trust himself the world will trust him.

It is unwise to deprive young men of the advantages which result from their own energetic action by "boosting them over obstacles which they ought to surmount alone.

Why Woolen Fabrics Shrink.

The fibers of wool and certain kinds of hairs are toothed or jagged at the edges, the teeth, or imbrications, pointing upward—that is, from the root to the point. When subjected, therefore, to compression or friction, these fibers, being free to move only in one direction by reason of these asperities of surface, have a great tendency to unite and lock together. This explains the peculiar capability possessed by wool of felting, and also the shrinking of fabrics of wool. In the latter case, the excessive rubbing to which they are subjected causes a matting or binding together of the ultimate fibres, which causes shrinkage; and this is intensified by changing the goods from hot to cold water, which is usually practiced, as the contraction of the fibres which this causes is itself a felting process. For washing woolen articles it is recommended to place them in warm water, never in cold; and if changed from one water to another, they should go from hot to hotter. They should be cleansed with as little and as gentle friction as possible. The fibers of cotton and linen are straight and smooth, and possess none of the surface roughness that characterize the structure of wool, hence they do not shrink in washing.

How they Meet and Part.

A gentleman lately took down verbatim the conversation of two fashionable ladies during a morning call—viz: "How do you do, dear?" "Pretty well, thank you." (They kiss.) "How have you been this age?" "Pretty well. How have you been?" "Very well, thank you." "Pleasant to-day." "Yes, very bright, but had a shower yesterday." "All your family quite well?" "Quite well, thanks. How is yours?" "Oh, very well, thank you." "Have you seen Mary B. lately?" "No, but I have seen Susan C." "You don't say so! Is she quite well?" "Yes, very well, I believe." (Rising.) "Must you go?" "Yes, indeed; I have several calls to make." "Do call again soon." "Thank you; but you don't come near me once in an age." "Oh, you shouldn't say so, dear; I'm sure I'm very good." "Good bye." "Good bye, dear."—Exchange.

"Yes! and after writing that the gentleman discovered the steam up in his mental faculties had been so severe he went out to 'brace up.' Just as he reached his destination, met a friend from out of town, who the following conversation was overheard and taken down by the writer, as an example for women, of men's 'wit and wisdom.' 'Hello! old fellow, how are you?' They shake. 'First rate, how are you?' 'Tip-top.' 'When dyle get in?' 'Just now.' 'Have something?' significantly. 'Well—yes, don't care if I do.' They step into a saloon, after cautiously looking around to make sure no outsiders are about to see they are breaking their pledge—they emerge, innocently wiping their mouths, before putting into them their lighted cigars and then, 'primed,' resume: 'How's yer folks?' 'All well; how's yours?' 'All flourishing now; youngest boy had diphtheria, but all right now.' 'Crops good up your way?' 'Well, yes, pretty fair.' 'How do politics look?' 'Bad—very bad—all democrats up our way; big democratic majority.' Takes out his watch. 'Thunder! ten minutes to 12. Must be off—got to see a man at 12.' 'Can't you come up to the house and take dinner?' 'No, guess not to-day—got several pressing business engagements. Good-bye.' 'Good-bye.' They again wring hands, and then rush away from each other as if fearing they might have to stand another treat.

A Study of Husbands

[illegible] MAY

READ IT WITH PROFIT.

We hear much about the art of winning husband. Let us take a step further and [illegible] if he is worth winning, he is worth keeping.

This is a wicked world, and man is decidedly mortal. Let us take him just as he is, not as he ought to be. In the first place, he is very weak. The wife must spend the first two years in discovering all these weaknesses, count them on her fingers, and learn them by heart. The number of boil bands will not be too many. Then for her study up these weaknesses, work a chart for every one, and, the secret is here—Is he fond of a good dinner? Let she bring the fresh around Lent with the most delicate light bread and good home-cooked ham, and reach his heart through his stomach. Is he fond of flattery? Let her study the dictionary for sweet words if her supply gives out. Does he like to hear her talk about his immaculate intellect? Let her pore over the encyclopedia to give variety to the depth of her admiration. Flattery is a good thing to study up at all hazards, in all its delicate shades, but it must be skillfully done. The harpy who may try to coax him away will not do it absurdly. Is he fond of beauty? Here's the rub—let her be bright and tidy; that is half the victory. Next, let her bang her hair metaphorically and keep up with the times. A husband who sees his wife look like other people is not going to consider her "broken down."

Though it is a common sneer that a woman has admitted that her sex consider more, in marrying, the tastes of her friends than her own, yet it must be considered ludicrous that a man looks at his wife with the same eyes that other people do. Is he fond of literary matters? Listen to him with wide open ears when he talks of them. A man doesn't so much care for a literary wife if only she will be literary enough to appreciate him. If she have literary inclinations let her keep them to herself. Men love to be big and great to their wives. That's the reason why a helpless little woman can marry three times to a sensible, self-reliant woman's none. Cultivate helplessness. Is he curious? Oh, then you have a treasure; you can always keep him if you have a secret and only keep it carefully.

Is he jealous? Then, woman, this is not for you; cease torturing that fretted heart which wants you for his own, and teach him confidence. Is he ugly in his temper, and faultfinding? Give him a dose of his own medicine, skillfully done. Is he deceitful? Pity him for his weakness; treat him as one who is born with a physical defect, but put your wits to work—it is a bad case. It is well not to be too tame. Men do not waste their powder and shot on hens and barnyard fowls; they like the pleasure of pursuing wild game—quail and grouse and deer. A quail is a good model for a wife—neat and trim, with a pretty, swift way about it, and just a little capricious. Never let yourself become an old story; be just a little uncertain.

Another important fact is, don't be too good; it hurts his feelings and becomes monotonous. Cultivate a pleasant voice, so that this very mortal man may have his conscience prick him when he is in a jaggardy; its pleasant ring will haunt him more than would a shrill one. It is hard to do all this, besides taking care of the babies and looking after various household cares, and smiling when he comes home, but it seems necessary. "To be born a woman is to be born a martyr," says a husband who for ten years has watched in amazement his wife treading the winepress of her existence. It is a pitiful sight to some men.

But if the wife does not make a study of these things, the husband will be sure to steal away the honor from his silver hairs when he is full of years and the father of sons and daughters. At the same time, guide-wife, keep from trying any of these things on any mortal man but your own. These rules are only evolved in order to "keep a husband." The poor, weak creature would rather be good than bad, and it is woman's duty to hold him by every means in her power.—The Argonaut.

Read for a Purpose.

It is a mistake to suppose that the more a person reads the wiser he will grow, as a matter of course. I know a young girl of perhaps fourteen, who is a devourer of books of the story sort, such as fill most of our Sunday-school libraries. Every spare minute she gives to the business, and travels through the volumes at a most rapid pace. But it comes exactly like pouring water through a sieve. Not a valuable idea stays in the mind. The whole attention is absorbed in finding out "how the story turns out," with no reference whatever to its teachings. Daniel Webster, when a boy, obtained more information from a farmer's almanac than she would from whole shelves full of books read in that manner.

Indeed such reading weakens the mind instead of strengthening it. Nor does it soften the heart toward real suffering to have the feelings touched and even greatly moved by fictitious sorrows. Even a high admiration of self-denial and moral heroism in a favorite character leads to no corresponding action in the readers' life. Rather all demands upon her sympathy and self-denial make her only peevish and irritable. Have you never seen an absorbed reader of fiction weeping over a pathetic tale, but vexed and impatient when a weary mother called her off to attend to neglected duties. How angrily the thread of every-day work was taken up, and how little her presence contributed to lighten the home cares. Any reading that has such an effect on the mind is an evil of a decided character and of most serious magnitude. A well-written story which has a decided point to it is a relaxation for both mind and body; but stories of perverted moral sentiment, where black is invariably painted white, and vice versa, are only pernicious, destroying both soul and body.

Read for a purpose, and make the points of the book your own. If a story is read for recreation, let it be a good one in the truest sense, and do not make such reading the sole literary food. When we have found an author who sets our own minds at work in a laudable direction, we have opened a good mine. There are some writers, who stop us, in effect, in every half page or less, with new trains of thought which their words have awakened; and better still, they set us to doing as well as thinking. Cultivate such helpful friends and you will then secure the noblest end of reading, and will have paved the way for high improvement. After the habit is once well formed of reading for a high and noble purpose, it will be found a source of enjoyment never dreamed of in the old days when reading was only an amusement.

I was troubled for several years with Dyspepsia, Indigestion, and Liver Complaint. I tried many remedies, but found no permanent relief. Ayer's Pills are the best medicine known to me for regulating the bowels, and for all diseases arising from a disordered Stomach and Liver. I suffered for years from Headache, Indigestion, and Constipation. I had no appetite, and was weak and nervous most of the time. BY USING three boxes of Ayer's Pills, and at the same time dieting myself, I was completely cured. My digestive organs are now in good order, and I am in perfect health.—P. Lockwood, Topeka, Kans.

Ayer's Pills have benefited me wonderfully. For months I suffered from Indigestion and Headache, was restless at night, and had a bad taste in my mouth every morning. After taking five boxes of Ayer's Pills all those troubles disappeared, my food digested well, and my sleep was refreshing.—Henry C. Hemmenway, Rockport, Mass.

I was cured of the Piles by the use of Ayer's Pills. They not only relieved me of that painful disorder, but give me increased vigor, and restored my health.—John Lazarus, St. John, N. B.

Bulletin No. 16, of the Agricultural College treats of grasses, containing a large number of replies to questions about grasses. It is a very instructive number. These bulletins are imparting an immense amount of useful information to the farmers of Michigan.

As William Beebe was driving in the barnyard of Edward Crane west of this village in the township of Franklin last Saturday evening, his horses became frightened and ran away, throwing Mr. Beebe out, but not injuring him. As the team turned to go out of the gate he tried to stop them and was struck by the wagon breaking five ribs, injuring his lungs, and cutting his face. He was taken in the house and cared for but is not expected to survive the accident.

Some wide awake salesman is advised to give the residents of this vicinity an opportunity to examine and secure a copy of the new 1886 Sectional Map of our Great State, a copy of which now adorns our office. Nice little points of geographical accuracy have received the most careful attention. New railroad extensions and important changes are plainly shown. The location of towns and their population, from the census of 1885, is readily found by reference to the index which now accompanies each map. Rand, McNally & Co., 148, 154 Monroe street, Chicago, are the publishers, and we predict pleasant and profitable employment for the fortunate agent who obtains the right to represent them.

The Commercial Telegraph picnic promises to be a success. Arrangements have been made for the grove and tables at Putnam's Landing. Those wanting boats can procure them at the office. It will be in the form of a basket picnic, but all will be seated at the table. The committee in charge will provide coffee, tea, sugar and lemons. Each family will please come provided with pails, dippers, pitchers, cups, spoons, tumblers, etc. Knapp's band will be on hand and speeches and toasts by some of the members are expected. The following persons will please assist in passing the coffee, lemonade, &c.: G. B. Garlinghouse, M. P. Brown, E. C. Cook and O. B. Finch.

The Adrian Record has moved into new quarters on Winter street. The paper has been enlarged one column and much improved in appearance. The price however remains the same, only 7 cents per week.

Prof. J. M. B. Sill, for several years superintendent of the Detroit public schools, has been selected as Principal of the State Normal school at Ypsilanti. He is admirably qualified for the place, and we predict his success in his new field of labor.

The catalogue of the Michigan Mining School is at hand. It contains notes on the organization, location, course of study, &c. The school is located at Houghton, in the center of the copper region of Lake Superior. The first session will begin Wednesday, Sept. 15th, 1886.

The newly elected officers of the Tecumseh Fire Department were confirmed by the Council at their last meeting, and the list appears in the proceedings. The list is a good one from top to bottom. Geo. A. Kies was chosen President, and a better selection could not have been made.

The seventh volume of the state pioneer collections contains a fine portrait of Francis A. Dewey Esq., of Cambridge. Several articles appear from Lenawee County, among them Judge Cooley's address upon laying the corner stone of the new Court House, and Mr. Dewey's addresses at Devils Lake and Ogden.

An engagement dance will be given at Exelby's Hall in Britton, on Thursday evening, Aug. 12th. Music by Moore's orchestra, of Blissfield. Joe Mellon will act as floor manager, and ice cream will be served at the hall. The arrangement of Tecumseh, Macon and Ridgeway are making preparations for a grand time on that occasion.

The cottagers at Sand Lake have started a movement to change the name of the lake to Lake Manitou, the old Indian name. It is a good idea, and we hope to see it carried out. Why that lake, which is surrounded by high hills and gravelly banks, except a few rods on the North shore, should have been called by its present name has always been a mystery to us.

Thos. Elliott has just received a copy of the "Witness," a paper published at Belfast, Ireland, which went down in the steamer Oregon last March. A slip of paper pasted thereon states the reason for its being delayed and that it was recovered about July 1st from the steamer. It is readable but somewhat water soaked, and looks as though the mice had got in their work around the edges.

Thomas Wilkinson, of this city, has undoubtedly the heaviest and longest beard of any man in the country. He contemplates appearing during the dramatic season at some of the leading museums of the country and Clinton Williams, who is acting as his booking agent, has already received many flattering offers for his services next winter. Mr. Wilkinson's beard is but six years old and although he is taller than the average man it trails upon the ground.—Adrian Record.

Ed. Hollister will please accept the thanks of the HERALD force for that "tremendous" water melon. The quality fully equalled the quantity, which is saying a good deal. The only objectionable feature about it was that the time taken to dispose of it delayed us about an hour in going to press this week.

Orlando Palmer has been showing signs of insanity for the past few weeks, and Monday he became so violent that help had to be called in to subdue him. He was taken to the asylum at Pontiac this morning for treatment. The circumstance is to be regretted and we hope he will be able to return at an early day.

BOUND FOR THE GOLDEN GATE.

The Tecumseh party of excursists bound for the National encampment of the G. A. R. at San Francisco left here last Wednesday as announced.

Delegates from Michigan arrived in Chicago on Thursday, and a special train for the Michigan excursionists left Chicago on Friday. The following program of the outward trip was arranged beforehand and will be doubtlessly followed out to the letter:

A special train made up and appropriately labelled for the Michigan delegation will leave Chicago on Friday, July 23d, via Chicago and Rock Island Railway about noon, reaching Kansas City on Saturday and thence via the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Route, to San Francisco, running through without change of coaches. The train will run from Kansas City upon a special time card so arranged as to afford an opportunity for sight seeing not incorded to the usual travel. In addition to the views of mountain scenery there will be a stop at Las Vegas and the Hot Springs and at Santa Fe, the oldest American city, of sufficient length to enable a reasonable visit. One day will be spent at San Diego, the extreme southern point in California on the Pacific Coast. One day will be given to the party at Los Angeles to visit the orange groves and vineyards, and the remainder of the trip is so arranged as to give a full view of the celebrated Tehachapi pass by daylight, reaching San Francisco on the afternoon of July 31st.

We are indebted to Commander A. W. Mills of Beer's Post for a few notes on the trip, which will give our readers an insight of what our Tecumseh friends are doing and how they enjoy themselves.

SHERMAN HOUSE, July 23.

The Tecumseh squad of fourteen are all well and in good spirits. The Michigan delegation over 100 strong will leave for Kansas City at noon to-day via the Rock Island route.

Yesterday was spent in sight seeing, Gettysburg, Shiloh and Mission Ridge were all taken in. The Chicago Times of Saturday will contain a full list of the Michigan delegation.

ON THE CARS NEAR KANSAS CITY, July 24th.

We are now passing through Western Missouri and are approaching Kansas City. I arose at five o'clock this morning. What do you think of that? The country about here is very dry. They have had no rain for about six weeks. Corn doesn't compare with ours at home. This is a poor country. Fires have been running through the woods and crops are poor in general. Several of the boys, while the berths were being made up this morning rode for several miles on the car platform viewing the land of the "Pukes" when all at once some one started "Michigan, My Michigan" and we all joined in singing that good old song. During the night the headquarters car of the Michigan Department was left, on account of a defective wheel, and the occupants had to be transferred to another car. It was anything but pleasant for the passengers, but at the same time very fortunate. Had it not been discovered in time, they might have all been ditched. Our entire party are in excellent health and spirits and our only wish is that more of our friends were not with us to enjoy the trip. Tecumseh is considered the banner town in our company as it furnishes the largest delegation. We have fourteen, while the largest number from any other point is eleven.

Among the objects of interest visited in Chicago was Lincoln Park. Its acres of beautiful flowers, its fine collection of rare annuals, and many curious and beautiful sights were greatly enjoyed. What a God send such parks are to the poor of the cities, where they can go, free of expense, and enjoy the pure air and fine surroundings. The Michigan headquarters were at the Sherman House. Our delegation is over 100 strong. A sumptuous dinner was served for us in one of the hotel parlors at 50 c. The Rock Island officials provided a fine lunch which was served in an adjoining room, and some of our boys made a wonderful dent in it. Trying to keep time to music was delightful. They did well for a time, but the band were too long winded for them. The railroad people furnished busses to convey the entire delegation to the depot, and the procession was led by the band. Large crowds gathered along the route, and at the depot thousands of our soldiers assembled and gave us a big send off. Last evening our delegation was serenaded by the "Drummer Boy of the Rappahannock," accompanied by Rio. You will doubtless remember this now historic duet. Samuel Henry Hender[illegible] shot. He was born in Cambridge, Lenawee Co., and for some time lived in Tecumseh. Mike Henderson of Macon is his uncle. He enlisted at Detroit when only twelve years of age. The drum he used last evening was of solid silver frame, which was presented to him just after the battle of Fredericksburg, by Horace Greeley, in behalf of the New York Tribune Co.

I had an opportunity last night to see the practical working of prohibition. [illegible] we crossed the Mississippi, we made a short halt at Davenport, Iowa, and while there Charley Davis and I went [illegible] and drank lager beer. Lager, Lager, were being bought and drunk and over the counter as fast as they could be served in the saloon anywhere. At Paris, beyond, of course, beer was served from bottles and bottles upon bottles were drunk at the meals.

[illegible] Thus we went on the cars we were for a repeal ticket and don't know whether we can decipher it or not.

The Opera House was respectably filled last Tuesday evening to see Miss May Howard and her English mediums manifest their spirit power. The company did some very clever tricks, and certainly give a first class entertainment of the kind. Miss Howard's hand reading proved to be a very amusing feature of the program.

Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness, and Hay Fever.

A New Treatment.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness, and hay fever, are cured in from one to three simple applications made at home. Out of two thousand patients treated during the past six months fully ninety per cent have been cured. This is now the ~~less startling~~ when it is remembered that not five per cent. of patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefited, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. In fact this is the only treatment which can possibly effect a permanent cure, and sufferers from catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever should at once correspond with Messrs. A. H. Dixon & Son, 303 West King street, Toronto, Canada, who have the sole control of this new remedy, and who send a pamphlet explaining this new treatment, free on receipt of stamp. Scientific American.

MORE VICTIMS.

An Increased Number of People Who Were Stricken Down Without a Moment's Notice.

There is something terrible in the manner with which people are dying off at the present moment. Scarcely a day passes but we read of sudden deaths, many of them occurring in the prime of life, and in the case of persons who have been in the best of health. Thousands of persons who thought themselves perfectly sound, while they were in the West and Southwest, have suddenly succumbed to the fatal disease, which, if not checked, will cut them down. A death of great prominence, and one which has caused a great deal of speculation, was that of the late John F. Slater, of Boston. He was a man of great wealth and influence, and was President of the Boston Board of Trade. He was apparently in good health, while his friends knew he was suffering from a severe cold, which had settled on his lungs. He was seized with a violent cough, and died suddenly. Death came unexpectedly, as it generally does when it comes from this heart disease, which in reality, there is exactly no such thing as heart disease. Sudden death comes to the stopping of the heart, owing to some evil influence in the body which causes it to cease beating. Sometimes it is due to over-eating which brings a tremendous pressure on the heart, sometimes to sudden colds, but in 99 cases out of 100 heart disease is the result of rheumatism which, being driven from some other portion of the body, strikes the heart and causes sudden death.

These very serious truths show the importance of driving rheumatism from the system at its first approach. It is a most deadly poison, which once within the blood, may become the most active and dangerous of enemies. It should receive the greatest care and attention without delay and there is no known preparation which so effectually controls and so quickly expels it as Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup. This is no experimental compound put upon the market simply to be sold, but a most scientific preparation, all of its ingredients being prepared especially for the dissolution of the uric acid lactic acids which are the cause of rheumatism. When these dangerous acids are driven from the body, as they invariably are by the use of this syrup, there need be but little fear of rheumatic difficulties, no matter in what form they may appear.

My friend, if you must keep a pet, let it be one of the serene kind—a rattlesnake or snapping turtle, for instance, this will exercise your caution and strengthen your genius.

Hay Fever.

I have been a periodical sufferer from hay fever for years, an moying and loathsome affliction, since the summer of 1879, and until I used Ely's Cream Balm, was never able to find any relief until cold weather. I can truthfully say that Cream Balm cured me. I regard it as of great value, and would not be without it during the the hay fever season.—L. M. Georgia, Binghamton, N. Y.

The small boy learning the alphabet is very much like the postage stamp—he often gets stuck on a letter.

Scrofula diseases manifest themselves in the warm weather. Hood's Sarsaparilla cleanses the blood, and removes every taint of scrofula.

Speaking of flies, a Burlington baseball player says: "They come high, but we must have them."

I had to comb back the hair from my forehead and omit the parting to conceal my baldness. Since then Parker's Hair Balsam has made my hair as thick and glossy as ever. Ladies whose hair is getting thin will find the Balsam just splendid. Mary Swanson, Chicago.

It must be glorious fun to go courting in Greenland. The nights are about three months long.

Many suffering people drag themselves about with failing strength, feeling that they are steadily sinking into the grave, when by using Parker's Tonic they would find a cure commencing with the first dose, and vitality and strength surely coming back to them.

Love may be blind, but in some way it generally manages to get on to a man's bank account.

Home Politeness.

A boy who is polite to his father and mother is likely to be polite to every one else. A boy lacking politeness to his parents may have the semblance of courtesy in society, but is never truly polite in matter of concealing his real want of courtesy. We are all in danger of living too much for the outside world, forgetting the person which we call home, forgetting the family members, and in the hurry of business and the continuous hustle and bustle of life, we are apt to be rude to those who have a right to expect the politeness which we reserve for our friends and acquaintances. Sunday afternoon about 12:30 a severe wind and rain storm passed through this section, tearing down fences, blowing trees out by the roots and twisting them off and carrying limbs several rods. The wind blew several apple trees out for N. C. Miller and tore the trees down very badly in Mr. W. R. Wilson's and David Harrison's woods. Peter Swack had two very valuable young cattle killed by falling timber. Oats that were in the shock were blown in every direction. Hay stacks were untopped. Wm. Allen had his wheat stacks blown all to pieces and an old barn blown down and terrible work made in his timber. Corn is in a bad shape as it leans in every direction.

One of the scaffolds in Morris Kelley's barn on his farm, that was filled with wheat, gave way and fell to the floor Tuesday and completely demolished a new top buggy for Chas. Kelly. The overalys were 5x6 tough oak.

Ice cream social at the church Friday evening, Aug. 6th. Five cents a dish pays the bill.

J. B. Stevenson and wife of Brooklyn, and Arthur Kinney of Jackson, were the guests of Henry Pulver and wife on Saturday last.

Fred Glenn started on an eastern trip Monday. He will visit Buffalo and Niagara Falls.

Mrs. Inglesby and daughter have moved to Benj. Laur's where they will continue the dress making business.

William Knapp of Tecumseh, was at his daughter's, Mrs. Scott, Sunday last. Mr. Knapp had not been here before since he moved from here last March.

George Laur has secured the best of help with which to run his threshing machine and is doing better work than ever this year. Some say that his feeder, Jack Pomroy, can not be excelled.

Many of our citizens had an opportunity to see an example of what we may expect after our saloon gets in operation. A young man, who when he is sober is a quiet, peaceable young man, went to Brooklyn last Sunday and filled up with whiskey, came back here and wanted to fight with some one. Question. Who is the most to blame, the young man, the saloon keeper who sold the liquor, or the temperance voters who stick to the old parties for fear of losing their votes?

PART OF THE WAR.

If one thinks to leave the haunts of men, and go the forest primeval, when he takes a trip to Salt Lake, he mistakes, for we found the forest haunted not by men only, but by women and girls, and large sized boys. Fourteen of the latter hailing from Tecumseh, were "packed as snugly as sardines in a box" in one of Putnam's cottages, and the way they made night hideous, and sleep impossible, with music and fire crackers, and rockets, and song and dance performances, would have done credit to Buffalo Bill's Wild West aggregation. We suffered no further inconvenience from their proximity however, than the frequent exploding of fire crackers about our tent and the losing of our hammock one dark night, which we found next morning perched upon the mast of a sail boat half a mile away. We unanimously attributed these tricks to the extreme youth of the participants and the alleged high prices of fun on their side of the lake.

The beautiful little lake is literally alive with sail and row boats, and its banks thickly sprinkled with cottages where beauty, culture, and intelli[illegible] and he must be an unfortunate misanthrope indeed who cannot find real pleasure with the bathers or sailors, or the fishers, or the rowers, or in swinging idly in a hammock on shore with nothing but sky and trees overhead, and the sound of the waves in his ears. You are not to understand that all the beauty, culture and intelligence was to be found at the cottages, much of it was at the Wells House, where three picnic parties from Tecumseh were making their headquarters, and where three ministers of the gospel, including Bro. Storms of Franklin were sojourning, as one watched these last named the ministers come in from a bathing or fishing expedition, clad in an extremely negligee costume, consisting in appearance of a rubber ulster with a bit of fish line about the belt for a girdle, tailless, shoeless, sockless, and hatless one was reminded less forcibly of the "Nymphs at the Bath," than of John the Baptist crying in the wilderness, and noting their extremely attenuated appearance, it took but a slight stretch of the imagination to supply the "locusts and wild honey" on which they were supposed to have been subsisting. But when evening settled down on this medley of society, and the pyrotechnics across the lake had diminished to a solitary night lamp or two, and the bathers were coming in to seek warmer quarters, "while the wave dripped from their clothing," and the little folks of our own party had been tucked away on beds of straw, under the swinging tent lantern we strolled down to the hotel piazzas again and heard floating out from ministerial quarters somewhere a quartette of fine voices in

"Other refuge have I none,
Hangs my helpless soul on Thee;
Leave, oh, leave me not alone,
Still support and comfort me."

We forgave the unique bathing costume, forgot the locusts, the wild honey, believing that it was we who were thinking more of the "loaves and fishes" of this life than we ought when we criticised so hastily, and with the next days sunrise we folded our tents like the Arabs and reluctantly stole away, i. e., drove away in a hand wagon.

RUSTIC.

The barn belonging to Carmen O. White, who lives about a mile west of Tecumseh, which was destroyed by fire together with all its contents Thursday night, was situated some little distance from the residence of its owner, although near the highway. It is supposed that some tramp, who had slept in the building over night, is responsible for its destruction. The barn and contents were insured for $300 in the Farmers' mutual insurance company.

The second nine of this village which went over to Adrian last Friday to do up the Maple City nine were unmercifully beaten pounded, sat down on and squelched by that club by a score of 21 to 1! The Tecumseh club showed a great lack of practice and were also beaten by an effective factory club. One run was called at the end of the sixth innings on account of rain, which was a lucky rain for Tecumseh as the Maple City's might still be running around the bases, at Lawrence Park, if it had not stopped them.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

[illegible]

Time, Tuesday, April 4th, A. D. 30. Place, Jerusalem.

Two years have passed since the last lesson in which Christ has entertained the people.

His earthly years spent in the humble Bethany home. His days in the city of Jerusalem.

While teaching in the court of the women in the temple, Philip and Andrew went to Him and requested an audience for certain who were present at the feast. These were probably Judaized Greeks, who had accepted the principles and followed the customs of Judaism. They go into the court of the women, for women, the court of the Gentiles and the court of the women there was a stone fence, bearing upon pillars placed at regular distances, the following words in Greek and Latin: "No alien must pass within the fence round the temple and the court. If any one be caught doing so, he must blame himself for the death that will follow." In our own day one of the very slabs, bearing the exact words, has been discovered by M. Ganneau during the excavations of the "Palestine Exploration fund." Jesus gives these Greeks an audience, [illegible] others assembled there, some important truths. He speaks, first, of His glorification, and uses the beautiful illustration of a grain of wheat being put into the ground, dying, and then springing up again in newness of life and bringing "forth much fruit." So He must die that He might gather the universal harvest of souls.

To the Greeks He specially says, "If any man serve me let him follow me." They sought Jesus, they must follow Him throughout life, if they would serve Him.

At this point Christ utters a prayer of agony, "Father, save me from this hour," and a voice from heaven, distinct and clear, gives Him assurance of the past and promise of the future.

Then he feels the glorious attractive power of the cross. "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth will draw all men unto me."

This is the great attractive force of the ages, which has drawn men of all classes, nations and kindreds to the Savior of mankind.

To that uplifted Redeemer the eyes of men are continually turning, hoping for salvation through Him.

As the ages roll by, the cross becomes still more attractive, for the only hope of a ruined world is in the crucified Jesus.

As he draws men to him, He draws them out of sin and the world.

The magnificent light of the Gospel shall shine into all lands, and men shall be drawn to the universal Savior.

This prediction of Christ's is necessarily brought to fulfilment every day, as His religion wins its widening way in the world.

Then, answering some objections, Jesus closed the interview. But into those hearts, both Gentile and Jew, had been cast precious seed, which should grow and bring "forth much fruit."

LESSON THOUGHTS.

1. The Gospel is universal.
2. Every nation can claim the benefit of Christ's death.
3. The death of Christ is the most important event in history.
4. Have you been attracted by it?

Survival of the Fittest

For some time past the question of purity in baking powders has formed quite a feature of newspaper discussions, and eminent doctors of public cosphy have given opinions as to the ingredients which compose many of the articles sold under that name. The investigations have narrowed down to the fact which awards the Royal Baking Powder the palm of purity, and several of the most distinguished scientists have testified to their conviction that its competitors contain deleterious matter, rotters and impurities. The Royal Baking Powder Company have achieved a world-wide reputation for the success which has marked their preparation of cream of tartar for baking purposes. It is in dispute by some that they have eliminated all elements of potash, lime, alum, or other impurities, and present to the public a healthful and chemically pure article. Such widely known chemists as Henry Morton, E. G. Love, H. A. Mott, Wm. McMurtrie and others have verified as to purity and adhesion to manufacture, and testified through practical experience to its excellence. It is well for families to observe the fact that it costs more to manufacture the Royal Baking Powder than any other, but it is, as shown by chemical analysis, the one "absolutely pure" baking powder made.

TEMPERANCE COLUMN.

Then I think of sweet, kind faces
As I look around my seat
Times of other scenes and places,
And a mother's voice so sweet.

Mother, when in days of childhood
Prayed as mothers only pray,
"Guard his footsteps in the wildwood,
Let him not be led astray."

When my life was full of cares,
Then a sweet form passed before me,
And I thought of mother's prayers.

I can hear a sweet voice now,
As while on her death bed lying,
With her hand upon my brow,
Calling for a Saviour's blessing
Ere she passed the golden stairs
There's a sting for all transgressing
When I think of mother's prayers.

And I made her one dear promise
O! the joy it gave her heart,
Yes! I promised God and mother
So long as I would live to keep;
Though a hundred times the tempter
Every day tries out my heart,
I can boldly answer "No, sir!"
When I think of mother's prayers.

And while here I tell the story
Why my boyhood's days were sad,
Is there not some one before me
Who will make a mother glad?
Swell her heart with fond emotions,
Drive away life's bitterest cares?
Sign and keep the pledge for mother;

Think of all your mother said
While upon her death bed lying—
Or, perhaps, she is not dead?
Or, don't kill her, then, I pray you,
She has got enough of cares.
Say you won't, and Heaven will help you
If you think of mother's prayers.

CAPTAIN JACK CRAWFORD.

A brave man is "Captain Jack," the Indian scout, because he not only knows how to fight Indians and desperadoes, but because he had the moral courage to fight the demon Rum. He knows what a curse it is, for his father was a victim of intemperance, and consequently, he, as a boy, did not know how to read or write. When he entered the army he had to make a cross for a signature because he could not sign his own name. He learned to read and write while wounded in a hospital, taught by a Sister of Mercy. He has all his life been surrounded by temptations, but a mother's love and a mother's prayers have been his safeguard. Just before she died this profligate came home to her bedside and said: "Johnnie, you know your mother loves you. I am dying. Will you not give me a promise which I can take to heaven with me?"

He said: "Mother I will promise you anything."

"Then promise me, my son, that you will never drink intoxicating liquor, and it will not be so hard for me to leave you."

He gave his mother the promise she asked of him, and has kept faithfully from that day to this. He wrote the lines printed above, which you will find in his book. I heard him tell a lot of boys, as poor and uneducated as he had been, how he came to write this poem under a pine tree in the Black Hills in 1876 when, as a scout, he was watching the movements of the Sioux while the settlers of Custer City were building their cabins. When he finished the poem he took it where some of his comrades were drinking together, and read it to them. Several of them, with tears in their eyes, put down their glasses and then and there pledged their word to God that they would never touch another drop of liquor. Yet this brave man who can write such a poem and say such good Christian things, who loves our Lord Jesus Christ and daily follows Him, who works the powers of humanity, just now, seek him to be a Christian. He comes to himself in the service of the Lord that he may use all his talents to glorify our Father here and go home finally to meet that mother who is waiting for him in heaven.

And dear old Betsy takes a book and, sitting down a short distance from us, melts into the tableau of the "Delighted Scholar."

At one time Mr Haworth was in the midst of a very animated description of a narrow escape that chanced to him during a perilous avalanche in the Alps, when Betsy gave a little gasp and letting her book fall into the sand so far forgot herself as to exclaim, "Ah! ah—you never told me that—" Then remembering herself, drew vermilion while Haworth shouted with laughter at something—he said it was because a wave had come up behind a fat Tottler and knocked him down, but as I failed to see either wave or Tottler—it being ebb tide and the coast clear—and I did see his laughing eyes almost let frightened blue orbs, twinkling at the whole blue stars, I guessed it must have been her utter self-forgetfulness that amused him.

One afternoon we were seated in the shadow of some bowlders. All three had been silent for some time. I was thinking that if Betsy would go away for a moment and leave me alone with him, Haworth was in a sentimental mood enough to propose. But she didn't go and wouldn't understand my furtive signs of dismissal.

"Do you know," said Haworth suddenly, apropos of nothing at all, save perhaps his own thoughts, "I admire that [illegible] you wear that night [illegible] than any [illegible]

Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness, and Hay Fever.
A New Treatment.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness, and hay fever, are cured in from one to three simple applications made at home. Out of two thousand patients treated during the past six months fully ninety per cent have been cured. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent. of patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefited, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. To the fact this is the only treatment which can possibly effect a permanent cure, sufferers from catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever should at once correspond with Mssrs. A. H. Dixon & Son, 303 West King street, Toronto, Canada, who have the sole control of this new remedy, and who send a pamphlet explaining this new treatment, free on receipt of stamp. Mention the American.
